BIRGER AND SHELTON SAID TO HAVE MET WITHOUT SHOOTING

Story of Rival Gang Leaders Having Talked to Each Other Accredited to Marion Police.

By the Associated Press.

MARION, Ill., Jan. 1.—If stories credited to Marion police officers are true, Charles Birger and Carl Shelton rival gang leaders, met on the public square here early this morning, talked a bit and parted without the predicted gun play.

The police said that Birger and Shelton met about 4 o'clock, conversed a few minutes, and that Shelton then went to a restaurant for something to eat. If Shelton is in this vicinity he could not be found tonight.

Birger, interviewed by a correspondent in Harrisburg, where the Franklin county murder accessory warrant lies in the hands of the Saline County Sheriff, would only say "Happy New Year" to questions about himself. Asked concerning his reported bet to kill Shelton before Jan. 1, he said "let's not discuss that now."

Dunn, who felt a sharp pain in his head and discovered blood trickling down his face, found the bullet, believed to have been fired by a New Year's celebrator, lodged in his cap. He was treated at City Hospital, where physicians pronounced the wound slight.

HUERTA TELLS OF PLAN FOR REVOLT AGAINST CALLES

Former Mexican President, Living in U. S., Says He Will Join to "Free the Republic From Tyrants."

WOULD TREAT ALL RELIGIONS ALIKE

Present Regime Is Bolshevistic and Is Looting the Treasury and Wrecking Industry, He Says.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 1. — The New Orleans States, in a copyrighted article today, says:

"Armed revolution against the Government of President Calles already has started in Mexico, announces Adolfo de La Huerta, former provisional President of Mexico, Minister of Finance under President Alvaro Obregon and supreme chief of the last Mexican revolution in 1923.

"The revolution is under way," says Don Adolfo. "Mexico is calling me, and I will go, whether I go as Jefe Suprom (Supreme Chief), as I have been asked by many powerful armed groups of revolutionists, or whether I go as the revolution's only private soldier. Mexico with me is a cause that surpasses all personal ambition."

Don Adolfo is in Los Angeles as this is published. Since the revolution of 1923 he has been living in retirement in the United States.

Cites Reasons for Revolt.

In his interview, Don Adolfo cites the important points of the revolution:

Freedom of conscience, with all religions alike permitted to worship, establish schools and teach, absolutely unmolested under Mexican laws.

Protection for the laborers of Mexico and the same treatment for labor and capital as is given by the most advanced governments of the world.

No more dictatorships in Mexeigners or foreign capital.

No mored ictatorships in Mexico, either such as the open dictatorship of Porfirio Diaz or the "camouflaged dictatorship," as he calls it, of Calles and Obregon.

Suppression of the "Russian soviet" in Mexico, and running out of Mexico of what he calls "The Cossacks of Calles and Obregon."

Crushing of the bolshevik regime of Calles and Obregon that Don Adolfo says has made Mexico the mad dog among the nations of the world, and that, he says, is resented by the majority of true Mexican people.

Breaking up the abusive system of the C. R. O. M. (Confederacion Regional Obreras Mexicanas is a regional confederation of Mexican workers headed by Luis Morones.)

The C. R. O. M., says Huerta, is a fake proletariat of bluffed, cowed and deceived Mexican workers controlled by grafting gunmen redder than the reddest Russian red, though they claim the friendship and approval of the American Federation of Labor.

The same interpretation of the right of foreign capital and foreign property owners, resident or nonresident in Mexico.

"The past three years," says Don Adolfo, "have seen the greatest exodus of Mexican labor in all Mexico's history. Mexican workers have fled across the border in fear of their lives, fighting for a chance to earn bread for their wives and children.

Charges Huge Graft Plot.

"Calles, Obregon and their satellites have debauched Mexico's currency and looted Mexico's treasury, enriching themselves by enormous graft. They have invoked the Mexican constitution and long-dormant laws, to satisfy their hatred of Catholics and their envy of oil men, and they have flouted it with armed force whenever that constitution interfered with them.

"Calles and Obregon condemned Carranza for attempting to establish a dictatorship by planning to have Bonillas succeed him as President. Now they are imposing on Mexico such a red dictatorship as Carranza never dreamed, a dictatorship headed by Obregon against the wishes of the vast majority of the Mexican people.

"Armed government forces under orders of Calles and Obregon back up the most flagrantly inexcusable labor strikes that have wrecked Mexican industry and made Mexican products poor in quality and costly in price.

"Calles and Obregon are in pow-

TWO WOMEN ON HOLIDAY TRIPS IN AUTOS KILLED

Mrs. Harriett O'Brien, 25, Suffers Broken Neck—Had Visited Mother and Car Overturned.

OTHER MACHINE WRECKED ON HILL

Mrs. Maggie Hatley, 52, Killed, and Husband and Grandson Injured When Steering Gear Breaks.

Two women were killed in automobile accidents yesterday when riding on roads adjacent to the city. They were Mrs. Harriett O'Brien, 25 years old, of Olive Street and Denny roads, St. Louis County, and Mrs. Maggie Hatley, 52, of 1122 Monroe street.

Mrs. O'Brien and her husband, Martin, were on their way to their home after a New Year's Day visit with her mother, Mrs. Geoage Wells, of 3449 William place. While driving west on Page avenue, at 1:30 p. m., their machine skidded and overturned in the middle of the road at the intersection of the Creve Coeur Lake street car tracks. Both were pinned under the car and Mrs. O.Brien was dead when they were found by other motorists. Her neck was broken. O'Brien, who was driving, suffered lacerations and bruises.

Mrs. Hatley, her husband, Walter S. Hatley, 55, and Mrs. Hatley's small grandson, Junior Thomas Virgin, had spent the holidays with relatives at Kennett, Mo., and were driving back to St. Louis. Their car, driven by Hatley, was going down a steep grade on State Highway No. 25, near Bloomfield, in Stoddard County, when the steering gear broke and the machine ran over an embankment, overturning. Mrs. Hatley was dead when rescuers arrived and the other occupants of the machine were seriously injured. All were taken to Bloomfield and relatives in St. Louis were notified through the St. Louis police.

Mr. and Mrs. Hatley went to Kennett on Nov. 29 to visit her son, John Vail. Besides her husband and this son, she is survived by another son, Robert Vail, 911 Chouteau avenue, and two daughters, Mrs. Minnie Virgin of 1318 Hickory street, and Mrs. Alice Maguire of Keota, Ok.

Nineteen Persons, Including Two Policemen, Hurt in Accidents.

Traffic accidents were numerous during the New Year's celebration of Friday night and yesterday with a total of 19 persons injured, two of them seriously. Eight of the injuries were suffered in three accidents in which drivers were found by physicians to have been drinking.

The two persons most seriously injured were policemen—Patrolman William Grace, 42 years old, of 206 North Grand boulevard, and Probationary Patrolman Charles Mikusch, 23 years old, of 6941A Gravois avenue.

The officers, who are of the Mounted District, were driving a police automobile north on Tower Grove avenue early yesterday when, at Magnolia avenue, their machine, a Ford touring car, was struck by a heavy sedan being driven west on Magnolia at high speed. Mikusch, who was driving the Ford, suffered concussion of the brain, probable fracture of the skull lacerations of the nose and right eye and cuts and body bruises. Grace suffered concussion of the brain, possible skull fracture, fracture of several ribs, lacerations and bruises. Both were taken to City Hospital.

The driver of the speeding car was William F. Hudson, 42 years old, a street car motorman of 3547 Indiana avenue. He was accompanied by Joe Gioia, 52, of 5256 Pattison avenue, a saloonkeeper. Hudson suffered contusions of the left knee and lacerations of the nose, and Gioia suffered injuries to the chest. Both were arrested on charges of possession of liquor when two pint bottles of moonshine were found in the sedan after the accident. Physicians at the hospital said Hudson had been drinking but was not intoxicated. However, additional charges of driving while intoxicated, careless driving and felonious wounding were placed against him. The officers were taking the Ford car to the police garage at Laclede and Vandeventer avenues for repairs.

SAYS WHITE SOX BOUGHT WAY TO PENNANT IN 1917

CHARGES ROWLAND BROACHED SCHEME

Eddie Collins and Ray Schalk Given as Contributors to Pool That Went to Pitchers Mainly.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—The alleged purchase of a four-game series of baseball games by the Chicago White Sox from the Detroit Americans, to help the Sox win the pennant of 1917, was described tonight to Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis by Charles A. ("Swede") Risberg, the Sox shortstop at that time.

The White Sox contributed $45 apiece to raise a pool of about $1100, Risberg said, which was given to the Detroit team, principally pitchers, to "slough" the series to the Sox.

The scheme to get the Detroit team to lay down in the series, which began Labor Day, 1917, was first broached to him, Risberg told Landis, by Clarence Rowland, then Sox manager, and now an American League umpire.

Rowland was located tonight at Milwaukee and denied implication in the game fixing described by Risberg.

"I know nothing of that deal," Rowland said, "and if Risberg says I had anything to do with framing games, he lies."

New Sox Manager Involved.

All the members of the Sox team contributed to the $1100 pool for Detroit, Risberg said, including Eddie Collins and Ray Schalk, the new Sox manager for 1927.

Collins demurred, Risberg said, and declared he never would do such a thing again. The money was collected and turned over to Detroit two weeks after the series was thrown. Chick Gandil, then Sox first baseman, collected the money and turned it over to Bill James, then a Detroit pitcher.

George "Buck" Weaver, Sox third baseman at the time, and fired from baseball at the same time as Risberg for the 1919 world series scandal, was the only Sox player, who did not contribute to the $1100 pool for Detroit, Risberg said. Weaver sat in Landis' office tonight listening to Risberg's story, nodding confirmation of his salient points, and admitted that as his share of the contribution to Detroit players, he gave Oscar Vitt, Detroit outfielder, a hand bag for Christmas.

Risberg was sworn by Landis as he started his statement, before the commissioner and a dozen newspaper men, and he started by saying that he had no hope of getting anything out of it for himself, but only wanted to help clean up baseball.

"I tried to get reinstated in baseball once," said Risberg, who was placed among the "Black Sox" in 1920, "but it is too late now. I'm muscle-bound and too old, but I have a little boy, and I'm willing to help all I can in cleaning up baseball, for the sake of the game when he will be old enough to play."

He told the commissioner he felt aggrieved at receiving no reply to his letter after the 1919 world's series scandal broke, in which he sought reinstatement. Landis looked in his file and brought forth a letter, undelivered because Risberg had moved from Chicago without forwarding address, and inviting Risberg to come in and talk things over. The resentment faded in Risberg's face when he saw this letter, which never reached him.

"I feel that in giving this story," Risberg began, "I am doing it only to help baseball because I have a youngster growing up and I want to protect baseball for him. I am too old for the big show now, and reinstatement wouldn't do me any good.

"Along in the early part of September in 1917, when we were to open a series with Detroit at Chicago, Clarence Rowland, the Sox manager, instigated a proposition that, if we would give a certain amount of money to the Detroit pitchers, they would slough the game in that series.

"The money was collected in the Ansonia Hotel in New York. Chick Gandil collected some, and I collected some. It was given to Bill James to give to the Detroit ball club, especially the pitchers.

Quotes Rowland as Leader.

U. S. ARMY FLYERS REACH SALINA CRUZ, MEX., IN GALE

Make Landing Inside Breakwater Without Mishap; Go to Guatemala Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

SALINA CRUZ, Mex., Jan. 1.—Making a perfect landing inside the breakwater of Salina Cruz, notwithstanding a terrific gale from the north, the American Army's Pan-American flyers finished the fifth leg of their good-will flight at 12:48 o'clock this afternoon. They made the 150-mile flight across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec in one hour and 15 minutes.

The five planes left Minatitlan, near Puerto, Mex., under perfect weather conditions, but on topping the low divide of the isthmus they found themselves in the midst of strong winds, which made their passage hazardous.

Salina Cruz, the day's objective, was covered with clouds of dust, but the planes circled for only a moment and then landed on the water and taxied to the beach. The only incident came when the plane San Antonio was stuck on a sand bar for 15 minutes.

The flyers are in excellent health and the planes are functioning well. The personnel asked that New Year's greetings be sent to the people of the Nnited States. The planes are expected to take off for Guatemala City, Guatemala, tomorrow morning.

GAYETY IN ROME CUT SHORT

Cabarets Ordered Cleared at 2 A. M.—"A Year of Labor."

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Jan. 1.—Premier Mussolini's determination to make 1927 a year of intense labor, with play reduced to a minimum, got off to a flying start when, at 2 o'clock this morning, Rome's New Year's celebration was cut short at the height of its gayety.

Scarcely had the new year been ushered in at cabarets, night clubs and other haunts of public merriment, when the Prefect ordered that music must cease and entrance be refused at 1 o'clock and the places cleared by 2. One cabaret, exempt from the order because it had registered as an art theater, did a land office business. Simultaneously the police enforced an order prohibiting the time-honored custom of firing revolvers and dumping from windows crockery and wornout kitchen utensils. "Those who have work to do," the authorities explained, "should not be disturbed by such foolishness."

5 DROWNED WHEN BOAT UPSETS

Mother and Child, 2 Girls and Man Lose Lives in Canada.

By the Associated Press.

NELSON, B. C., Jan. 1. — Five residents of Arrow Park, on the west shore of Upper Arrow Lake, were drowned early today when the boat in which they were returning from a New Year's eve dance from East Arrow Park, across the lake capsized.

The party consisted of Mrs. Daniel Rogers, Sarah Rogers, 6 years old; Mary Kelly, 20; Fanny Graham, 19, and Albert Marslund 27, who was rowing.

GUEST FALLS DEAD AT NEW YEAR PARTY

Mrs. John McTighe of Pittsburg Had Been Dancing During Evening

The gaiety of a New Year's eve watch party at the home of John M. Dougherty, president of the D. & T. Manufacturing Co., 5078 Washington boulevard, was turned to tragedy at 11:30 p. m. when Mrs. Jessie Josephine McTighe, 37 years old, of Pittsburg, a guest, suddenly slumped to the floor and died, apparently from a heart attack.

Mrs. McTighe and her husband, John, proprietor of Kennywood Park, a Pittsburg amusement resort, were holiday visitors at the home of Mrs. McTighe's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Wantuck, 710 Heman avenue, University City. The two families were among the New Year's eve guests at the Dougherty home. Mrs. McTighe, although subject to high blood pressure, was in apparent good health upon arriving at the party. She danced several times and was seated chatting with other guests when she suddenly fell from her chair and to the floor.

Two physicians, Drs. George Flynn and E. J. O'Malley, who were among the guests, attempted to revive her and later obtained a pulmotor from a nearby fire engine house in a further effort at resuscitation. When all efforts failed Mrs. McTighe was pronounced dead and the body removed to an undertaker's establishment. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning from the New Cathedral to Calvary Cemetery. Although Mrs. McTighe never had resided here, she frequently had expressed a wish to be buried in St. Louis.

Dramatist Suffers Concussion of Brain But Is Recovering.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—David Belasco, 67 years old, theatrical producer and dramatist, tonight was recovering from a slight concussion of the brain and other injuries suffered in an automobile crash earlier today, and it was announced the concussion had cleared away.

The producer was injured when his automobile collided with a car full of New Year's revellers on Riverside Drive. He refused to make a complaint against the occupants of the car.

DETECTIVE LALLY SHOT AND KILLED BY ASSASSIN

Sergeant Is Mysteriously Attacked by Young Man Who Steps From Auto in Which He Escapes.

'WE GOT YOU NOW,' HIS ASSAILANT SAID

Bullets Entered Chest and Knee—Patrolman Later Fired on by Gunman at Lally's Home.

Detective-Sergeant Edward J. Lally was shot and fatally wounded a few yards from his home at 4155 Laclede avenue early yesterday as he returned on foot from an uneventful New Year's eve assignment. He died last midnight.

Because of his wound, Lally could give only meager information, and his associates in the Detective Bureau found themselves without a clew. The mystery was heightened a half hour after the shooting when another policeman fought with an unidentified gunman he found prowling in the rear yard of Lally's home.

Meager Details of Shooting.

Lally and his walking partner, Detective William Mehringer, had been stationed for the evening at the Columbian Club, 3909 Lindell boulevard. At 3:30 a. m., when most of the guests had departed, they started home, Lally walking south on Vandeventer avenue to Laclede and west, on foot.

He was in front of 4141 Laclede avenue when a young man stepped from a parked touring car, in which several other men were seated. He was about 25 years old, wore a gabardine coat and light cap, and had a revolver in his hand. He strode up to Lally.

"We got you now, you ————," he exclaimed, and fired two shots.

Nature of Two Wounds.

One bullet shattered the detective's left knee cap and the other entered his breast above the heart, ranging down through the right side of the back. As he fell, Lally drew his revolver, and, lying on the sidewalk, he fired five shots at the machine as it moved west with his assailant.

Neighbors heard the shots, but paid no attention, attributing the noise to New Year's eve celebrators. John Manestar of 4133A Laclede avenue, awakened in his front room, but did nothing until he heard Lally groaning on the sidewalk below. Then he dressed hurriedly and ran down.

Before losing consciousness, Lally related his experience briefly. He said he had no enemies and declared he knew of no one who might wish to take his life.

Police Fired On by Prowler.

Police, however, began an immediate search of the neighborhood, and at 4:15 a. m. Patrolman Richard Palmer, reconnoitering in the alley, heard a noise in Lally's yard. He vaulted the rear fence and found himself face to face with a man who held a pistol in his hand. Palmer seized the prowler and for several minutes they struggled in the yard.

Finally the man succeeded in firing his pistol, the bullet grazing Palmer's face and cutting through the front of his uniform cap, clipping off two of the metal numbers. For a moment, Palmer released his hold. The man broke away, dropped his pistol, and fled through the alley.

Whether Palmer's encounter had anything to do with the shooting of Lally is engaging the department's attentions. The pistol, a .32-caliber automatic with one discharged cartridge, is held in the hope it may prove a clew. Lally's home was quiet at the time, no one being there but his mother, Mrs. Margaret Lally, with whom he lived.

Lally was 50 years old, unmarried, and had been on the force since 1899. Chief of Detectives Kaiser could think of no case on which Lally had worked recently which might have resulted in a "grudge" assault, and his partner, Mehringer, said there had been nothing in their recent work which to him might suggest a reason for such an assault. Lally's friends and relatives knew of no private difficulties.

3186 NEW YEAR CALLERS GREETED AT WHITE HOUSE

DIPLOMATS APPEAR IN COLORFUL GARB

General Public Waits for Three Hours for Doors to Open—Supreme Justices and Congressmen in Line

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Washington's chief social event of the year, the New Year's White House reception, was held today under ideal conditions, the ceremony affording one of the most colorful and picturesque scenes ever witnessed at the executive mansion.

The reception was notable, not so much because of the attendance, which was smaller than had been expected, but because of the large number of Government officials, diplomats, and other personages present and for the gorgeousness of the decorations which eclipsed all those in the memory of White House attaches.

For nearly two hours and a half the President and Mrs. Coolidge stood in the blue room greeting their callers. Before luncheon 1000 Cabinet members, diplomats, members of the judiciary and Congress, army, navy and Marine Corps officers, heads of various Government bureaus, members of patriotic and civic organizations and their wives filed down the receiving line.

Early in the afternoon, the doors of the executive mansion were thrown open to the public, and for 50 minutes the chief executive and his wife shook hands and exchanged New Year's greetings with all comers.

Tradition Closely Followed.

Counting those who attended the morning reception, 3186 men, women and children were received during the day—one less than the total last year. The largest crowd ever to attend such a function was in 1922 when President and Mrs. Harding greeted more than 6000 persons.

Tradition was closely followed today, and promptly at 11 o'clock Marine Corps trumpeters in vivid scarlet and blue dress uniforms, sounded a flourish to announce that the President and Mrs. Coolidge were about to descend the State stairway and enter the blue room. The Marine band orchestra, stationed in the foyer, played "Hail to the Chief," as they came down the stairs, accompanied by members of the Cabinet and their wives, whom they had greeted in the library on the second floor.

The first to pass along the receiving line were foreign diplomats, headed by Baron de Cartier de Marchienne, the Belgian Ambassador, who is dean of the diplomatic corps.

Diplomats in Uniform.

The representatives of foreign Governments who later attended a breakfast tendered them at the Pan-American Union by Secretary and Mrs. Kellogg, were in full diplomatic uniform, some embroidered in gold upon black cloth with swords at the side, some with colored coats and astrakhan collars and Russian boots, others in still different habits traditional in the countries which they represent here.

The number of diplomats attending was the largest in history, due to numerous additions to the corps during the last year. Ambassador Matsudaira of Japan did not attend on account of mourning for the late Emperor, but Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, was present, though in mourning for the recent death of a son.

President Greets Child

After the diplomats came members of the judiciary with Chief Justice Taft, himself once an occupant of the White House, at their head, then members of Congress, the higher ranking officers of the army, navy and marine corps and others who had been invited to the morning reception.

When the doors were opened to the public at 1 o'clock, those at the head of the line had been waiting three hours for admittance. One child, about 2 years of age, was among the visitors.

"Welcome," said the President, smiling broadly. "I guess you are the smallest that ever came here."

Mrs. Coolidge also greeted the youngster by patting his head.

President and Mrs. Coolidge broke custom and stayed up to see the New Year born. They also gave a most unique celebration themselves, one never before witnessed at the White House.

"Taps" at Midnight.

The innovation, conceived by Mrs. Coolidge, was begun with the posting of five marines, a cornetist and four trombone players, on the roof of the mansion. Standing at the foot of the flagstaff, and with a spotlight encompassing them and the flag, Arthur Whitcomb, who sounded taps at the funerals of Queen Victoria, President Harding and the unknown soldier, sounded "taps" just before the stroke of 12 and followed with reveille at midnight. Then the others played Beethoven's "Creation" and Abt's "Over the Stars."

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge and their son, John, and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns of Boston witnessed the picturesque ceremony from a window on the second floor. Mrs. Coolidge appeared at the window five minutes before midnight and bowed to several hundred applauding persons who gathered on the north lawn. She was joined by Mrs. Stearns and remained at the window throughout the ceremony. The two shook hands when reveille was sounded. After they retired from the window, the President appeared and acknowledged the applause. He pulled down the window just a few minutes after the curtain was dropped on the old year.

er, in Mexico today only through the help of the United States, help for which they begged and groveled and lied. But whether Calles and Obregon fight the new revolution with or without foreign help, they are going to fail.

"If Calles and Obregon in 1923 had not received outside help, Mexico would have been spared the bloodshed, crimes and horrors of these past three years in which, against the will of the majority of her people Mexico has stood as an outlaw among the nations of the world.

Calls Calles a Bolshevist.

"Mexico is in revolution today. The true and honest Mexicans, in city and country alike, detest Calles and repudiate Obregon.

"For the first time in the world's history we can see at the same time, side by side, the tragic failure of the Russian soviet with its reign of terror, that has been the policy of Mexico's hated tyrants, and the amazing success, happiness and prosperity of workingmen in the United States and the man who, with those two examples before him, chooses the soviet, has no alibi.

"Calles stands for bolshevism. I stand, and the revolution stands, for the ideal that a contract is a contract, and that labor and capital alike are entitled to a square deal. Neither can enslave, exploit or strangle the other, and both continue to live. Both must live if we are to win security and prosperity and happiness.

"Many revolutionists representing armed groups have called on me to take command of the revolution. I have given my word that I will join them. I have faced Calles and Obregon before in the council chamber and under arms in the field. I know how to face them again. The revolution is on. Mexico is calling me and I will go whether I go as supreme chief or as the revolution's only private soldier in the ranks.

"The United States has given me shelter. I have lived these past three years under the protection of its laws. I appreciate the shelter. I respect the laws. I will not take one step or commit one act in violation of the laws of the United States.

"I want only the greatest good for Mexico, honorably won. I hope no foreign Power, American or other, will lend money or arms to Calles and Obregon, who have debauched Mexico."

Adolfo de la Huerta went to New York as Minister of Finance in the Obregon Cabinet, after he had stepped down from the presidency, and completed the treaty that established on a firm foundation the settlement of Mexico's debts in America.

RETIRING JUDGE FREES EDITOR FROM CONTEMPT SENTENCE

Californian, Suffering From Insipient Tuberculosis, Had Served 10 Months of 1000-Day Sentence.

By the Associated Press.

EUREKA, Cal., Jan. 1.—Superior Judge Denver Sevier ordered the release yesterday of Albert Lindsley, Eureka editor, who has been serving a sentence of 1000 days for contempt. Lindsley is in the Humboldt County Hospital suffering from incipient tuberculosis.

The editor was sentenced by Judge Sevier after publication in the News, a weekly paper, of a series of articles which the Judge interpreted as being in contempt of court. He had served more than 10 months of the sentence. Efforts to gain the release of Lindsley attracted widespread attention. The Appellate courts were petitioned repeatedly, and the Governor was asked to act, but all decided that Judge Sevier's order should stand.

Subsequently, Judge Sevier ran for re-election, and was defeated. His release of Lindsley yesterday was among his last offical acts, as his term expired at midnight.

BUILDINGS SHAKEN DOWN BY QUAKE IN IMPERIAL VALLEY

merrymakers and they stampeded into the streets at the first shocks. The gates at the international line, which closes nightly at 9 o'clock, were opened by customs officers to permit the people to cross to the American side.

Several hundred Americans, who celebrated the dawn of the New Year in Mexicali, were among those who stormed the international gates. Custom Inspectors have strict orders not to open the gates under any circumstances, but used their judgment in this crisis and swung open the barriers.

Two women were outstanding heroines of the day. Miss Ella May Biezere, nurse, remained on duty at a hospital caring for and quieting the fears of nine patients as a portion of the wall collapsed. Miss Lucile Harer, telephone operator, stuck to her post and valiently tried to resume communication with the outside world when her switch board went out.

Fearing to return to their shaking homes residents of Calexico and Heber gathered around huge bonfires on vacant lots. A number of the residents of Calexico reported that the first three quakes were of such intensity that they were shaken out of their beds. At Heber five buildings were cracked. Heber is midway between El Centro and Calexico.

Radio reports to the Federal Telegraph Co. here from the steamship Emma Alexander, at anchor off Ensenada, Lower California, said heavy swells were running and passengers who spent the night ashore were unable to return to the vessel.

Mexicali was severely shaken by an earthquake, Dec. 8, when the city hall was damaged. The walls of the building were cracked and the roof of the assembly room twisted so that rain poured in during a recent storm in the Imperial Valley. The roof of the city jail also was damaged in the previous quake.

The last serious earthquake in the southern portion of the Imperial Valley hit El Centro in 1915 and in 1918 the Imperial Valley was struck again by temblors, this time the main force being spent at San Jacinto and Hemet, north of here.

22 Quakes in Day Near Mt. Lassen.

By the Associated Press.

MINERAL, Cal., Jan. 1.—M. H. Finch, Government volcanologist, reported that on Dec. 28, 22 earthquakes, all originating in or around Lassen peak, active volcano, were recorded on the seismograph in the volcano observatory here. The 22 shocks coming in one day is notable, Finch said, in that it shows that the volcano, now quiescent, is "merely sleeping and not dead."

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 1.—James J. DRY AGENTS SEIZE 12 BOTTLES DURING NEW YEAR REVELS

Most Orderly Celebration Since Prohibition Became Effective, Enforcement Chief Announces.

Only 12 parties failed to keep their liquor out of sight of prohibition agents, in what James Dillon, chief of the local prohibition office, called "the most orderly New Year's celebration in St Louis since the Federal prohibition act went into effect."

"Names of the persons at those 12 tables were taken, but they will not be made public," Chief Dillon said yesterday. "Certain members of each party were instructed to appear at the Federal Building Monday morning, but no arrests were made. The commissioner's rulings last year made it clear that exclusive possession could not be fastened on anyone where several persons were sitting about a bottle and each disclaimed ownership."

Found at Various Places.

Chief Dillon made it clear that he sensed the danger of being unreasonably zealous on New Year's eve, recalling the precipitation of a riot at Hotel Chase on New Year's, 1923, in a raid led by Gus Nations, in charge of prohibition enforcement here at the time, who later lost his job.

"The crowd at Hotel Chase was particularly orderly," Dillon related. "There was no sly interference with the agents, no jeering, as in previous New Year's rounds, and that was true everywhere. In fact, one man at the Chase invited me to come up to his room for a nip of whisky he had saved from before prohibition. I declined.

Much Drinking, Little Intoxication.

"New Year's is a time when persons who ordinarily are strict observers of the law bow to a custom of ages. Unquestionably there was a lot of drinking, but there was very little drunkenness. Why, when we reached the Canton Tea Garden at 3 o'clock in the morning there wasn't a person in the place you could say was really intoxicated.

Leaving a few of my 12 agents posted at certain hotels and eating places, I made the rounds with the others until 4 a. m. We encountered not the slightest impediment or discourtesy anywhere. Nowhere was any demand for action, except in picking up those 12 bottles which were in sight on the tables.

"Management of hotel and other places visited were uniformly courteous and co-operative. Every table bore a card warning against violation of prohibition laws, and walters were instructed not to assist in the serving of liquor."

Counterfeit Labels Seized in Raid on Bottle Plant.

More than 2000 "bottled in bond" and "Gordon gin" labels were seized by police of the Carr Street District, who descended on a saloon and a bottle concern Friday afternoon in the midst of the New Year's rush. Louis Carl and two employes were busily pasting "Gordon" labels on bottles, in which the Gordon & Co. signature had been blown when police entered the Carl Bottle Co., 1718 Biddle street. They seized 1750 labels, a case of "gin" already labeled and arrested Carl, Theodore Haines, a Negro and Adlee Ruffino.

Police also found 500 "bottled in bond" labels such as appear on the reverse side of bottles of "real" Bourbon, two gallons of the "real" stuff in labeled fifths and three quarts of a clear and sparkling liquid bearing French champagne labels, behind a stairway between the second and third floor at the saloon of Joseph B. Graff, 619 Lucas avenue. Behind the bar and in a second-floor room they found 19 pints and 10 fifths of "Bourbon," labeled and plausibly colored, six fifths of "gin," a five-gallon jug of wine and three quarts of "French champagne." They arrested Graff and his Negro waiter, Clarence MacClendon.

George Hoffmann, 30 years old, bartender, slammed the door of an icebox when police entered the saloon of "Buck" Keenan at 13 North Seventh street Friday. The police opened the icebox door and reported finding two and a half quarts of whisky. Hoffmann was arrested.

about it. He said he had it all set, as we were coming into the dugout the day of the first game. We were to play Detroit two double-headers in two days. In the first game, Eddie Dyer, Detroit shortstop booted the ball around and Eddie Collins said to me 'That's terrible out there.'"

"I met Rowland in Chicago in 1920, just after the 1919 world series scandal broke, and he said to me: 'For heaven's sake, don't mention that 1917 series.'

"Then in 1919, the boys (Sox) said we owed the Detroit team something and the last two games of the season, played at Chicago, we sloughed the games to Detroit."

Commissioner Landis then asked Risberg: "I'd like to know the names of some of the players you talked with in 1917 about the Detroit series."

"I met Donie Bush," Risberg said, "and Hook Dauss and some of the other Detroit players across the street from the Sox ball park, in a saloon just after the 1919 scandal broke, and Bush said to me: 'Well, I guess the 1917 stuff will be popping soon.'"

"How was the 1917 series sloughed?" Landis asked.

How Games Were Thrown.

"I figured the pitchers didn't put much on the ball," Risberg replied. "Ground balls were booted. The pitchers, as I recall, were Ehmke, Bill James, Boland, Dauss and Cunningham."

"How much money," Landis asked, "did you give the Detroit team, and how was it raised?"

"We all gave $45 apiece. I don't recall who suggested this amount, but Gandil and I colletced the money. Red Faber wrote out a check to cover the shares of several players. Eddie Collins, Ray Schalk and Rowland and the others all gave theirs. We asked Rowland for permission to go to Philadelphia on an off day, and give the money to the Detroit players, and I was with Gandil when he gave it to Bill James. I think it was mostly for the pitchers. When we decided to slough those two games to Detroit in 1919, there was no money raised or paid to anybody that I knew anything about."

"I think sloughing those two games to Detroit in 1919 gave the Tigers third place."

"How do you slough a ball game?" Landis asked. "I'm a rookie in such matters, and I don't see how you could do it."

Played Out of Position.

"We played out of position," Risberg explained. "I did, and I saw that Gandil did, and Jackson and Felsch also were playing out of position."

Risberg would not be led into discussion or review of the 1919 world's series scandal, except to declare his innocenec.

"I took no bribe," Risberg said, "and I did not lay down in that series. I was not guilty, but I am too old now for reinstatement to do me any good. Milking the cows has made me muscle-bound."

One of the newspaper men asked Risberg whether he thought that Cobb and Speaker got any money or were implicated in "throwing" ball games in the Cleveland-Detroit series of 1919, recently asserted by Hubert "Dutch" Leonard.

"Cobb and Speaker," Risberg said, "are baseball idols. I don't think they got any money, or threw any ball games and I think they are still the greatest ball players the game ever saw."

Risberg was then invited by the commissioner to explain further his dissatisfaction with his dismissal from baseball in 1920, on account of the 1919 world series scandal.

Risberg's Chief Complaint.

"I don't see yet, Judge," Risberg said, "why I didn't get my share of the Sox second place money in 1920. We had won second place before that scandal broke near the close of the 1920 season and I still feel that I am entitled to my share of that second place purse. That's the only thing about the 1920 deal that still is wrong with me. I could very well use that money now."

Landis explained that the 1920 second place money had been paid to the Sox players who were exonerated, a year ago, and the shares of the "Black Sox" went to those who were not implicated.

Risberg will return to Chicago to face the men he mentioned in his story and the commissioner fixed the time for another hearing at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The Chicago White Sox won the American League pennant in 1917 by a margin of nine full games. The White Sox won 100 contests and lost 54 for a percentage of .649. Boston, the team finishing second, won 90 and lost 62 for a percentage of .592. Cleveland finished third, winning 88 and losing 66 for a percentage of .571. Detroit was fourth, with .510, winning 78 and losing 75. The Tigers lost 16 of 22 games played with the White Sox during the season.

When the world series scandal developed in 1920, the same charges now revived by Risberg were rumored, but the explanation of the White Sox players at that time was that the money was paid to the Detroit pitchers for the three beatings they handed the Boston team subsequent to the Chicago-Detroit series. The Tigers played this Boston series of three games Sept. 19 and 20, 1917.

"Just Another Lie," Says Cobb's Detroit Lawyer.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 1.—James O. Murfin, attorney, employed by Tyrus Raymond Cobb, former manager of the Detroit Americans, in connection with recent charges of "fixing" a baseball game here in 1919, tonight said he thought the statement of "Swede" Risberg before Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, "just another lie."

"Cobb was not manager of the Detroit Tigers in 1917 or 1919, and I think the whole bunch of statements lies," he said. "And that is about all I have got to say," he added. "Cobb left here this afternoon for his home."

Asked if he would announce plans for any action to clear Cobb's name of charges of game "fixing" in connection with which Tris Speaker, former manager of Cleveland Americans is involved, Murfin said, "I don't think we will have anything to announce."

Bush Says Pitchers Were Paid for Beating Boston.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 1.—"He's a liar," was Donie Bush's first comment tonight on charges made by "Swede" Risberg before Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis that the Chicago-Detroit series late in the 1917 baseball season was "fixed" for Chicago to win. Bush was a member of the Detroit team at the time. He recently was appointed manager of the Pittsburg National team after having piloted the Indianapolis American Association team for three seasons. His home is here.

"I don't know one thing wrong with that series," Bush said. "The only thing I know is that three of our pitchers were paid $100 apiece by Chicago players for winning games against Boston. They were paid for winning, not losing. Landis knows about that."

Bush said that George Dauss, veteran Tiger hurler, was one of the three pitchers.

After mentioning Dauss' name, Bush said Dauss was not involved in Risberg's charges concerning the 1917 games because, according to Bush's recollection, Dauss did not play in any of them.

Speaker Not Asked to Resign, Owner of Cleveland Club Says.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 1.—Tris Speaker was not asked by the Cleveland baseball club to resign as manager as the result of baseball scandal charges made by "Dutch" Leonard, but on the contrary was urged to remain with the club and fight for vindication, Mrs. James Dunn, owner of the Indians, declared in a telegram received here today by the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Speaker, Mrs. Dunn said, offered to resign because he feared the scandal, if given publicity, would injure Mrs. Dunn's investment. The owner's answer was that she would take a chance on having her club handicapped, if Speaker wished to fight the charges.

Danforth Denies He Contributed to Alleged White Sox Pool.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 1—Dave Danforth, White Sox twirler in the 1917 series against Detroit tonight denied the statement of Swede Risberg that every member of the Chicago team paid $45 toward buying off the Tigers.

"I didn't pay a dime toward a pool," Danforth said. "The alleged 'fixed' series between the White Sox and the Tigers is all news to me. I didn't remember I had been in the series until I looked over the box scores. All I can say I was in there to win." Danforth now is a member of the Milwaukee club of the American Association.

Hugh Jennings "Doesn't Believe Word Risberg Says."

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 1.—Hugh Jennings, manager of the Detroit Tigers the year "Swede" Risberg alleges that four games were lost to the Chicago White Sox by Detroit through purchase, denied tonight that there was any truth in the story. Jennings was reached by telephone at his home in Scranton, where he is regaining his health after months of fighting against tuberculosis.

"I don't know a thing about the report," Jennings said. "A man like Risberg is likely to try to implicate Commissioner Landis himself, and I don't believe a word he says. When Risberg mentions Eddie Collins and Ray Schalk in this connection he is, in my opinion, not telling the truth. Collins and Schalk are two of the squarest men who are in the game and they have done much for baseball. If I had heard anything such as Risberg says happened in 1917 I would not have waited ten years to tell about it.

"Had I known anything, the Detroit officials and Ban Joh would have heard from me i time. I believe Risberg is trying to get some of his fo mates into trouble by such ments. That series he refer was as straight and upright as the Detroit Club under my agement engaged in. I recall series. It was hard fought, th we lost, but in no way wa fixed. My conscience is clear."

Eddie Collins, when informed night of the charges made by berg, declined to discuss the ter at this time. He is no member of the Philadelphia letics.

-YEAR FEUD OF TWO BROTHERS IS DISCLOSED BY SUIT

Charles Wiegand Tells of Being Dropped From Payroll of Standard Stamping Co. While Sick.

GIVES DEPOSITION FOR JAMES L. MINNIS

Eleven years ago this month Charles and George Wiegand, sons of the founder of the Standard Stamping Co., 2000 North Broadway, stopped speaking to each other. Charles alleged that his younger brother had cut him off the company payroll while he was sick, and was trying to freeze him out as a stockholder.

Now Charles, 65 years old and retired, is giving testimony against his brother, who is fighting to retain control of the company. The beneficiary of his testimony is James L. Minnis, former general counsel of the Wabash Railroad, who is suing to oust George Wiegand and his three sons from management of the company, alleging incompetency and dissipation of assets.

The suit will be tried in Federal Court Jan. 10. Because of his poor health and impending departure for California, Charles Wiegand's testimony was taken in deposition form at his suite in Hotel Chase, and filed in Federal Court.

Firm Founded by Father.

The company was founded in [illegible] by George Wiegand Sr., an immigrant metal worker, who died in 1908. Its assets were inventoried recently at $1,304,000.

After their father's death, Charles and George Wiegand contested his will, and compromised on a basis which gave George control of the company. He was elected president and general manager and Charles was elected vice president and superintendent.

"I held that position until April, 1912," Charles Wiegand testified in his deposition. "I was taken ill. I had a nervous breakdown in July, and my brother stopped my salary while I was a patient in the Polyclinic Hospital in New York. I have been in poor health since that time.

"On my return to St. Louis in the fall of that year I went in to see George and ask him why I had not received my salary. He handed me a check for one month's salary and said it would be the last, as he could not afford to pay salaries to people who were not working."

Forced Dividend in 1916.

In January, 1916, when he was ill in bed at the Washington Hotel here, Charles Wiegand heard that his brother was "not going to allow" any dividend to be declared from the earnings of the previous year. Against the advice of his physician, he left his room to attend the directors' meeting. A 5 per cent dividend was declared.

Because "I felt I was not being treated fairly," Charles Wiegand retained Minnis "to look after my rights" and gave him an option, in June, 1916, to purchase his stock at par, $213,500. (The company was capitalized at $500,000.) Minnis did not exercise the option until November, 1919, when he handed Charles Wiegand a check for $213,500. Meanwhile, Minnis had collected $138,000 in dividends on the stock and turned the dividends over to Charles Wiegand.

Asked what were the circumstances under which Minnis had taken up the option, Charles Wiegand answered:

"My health was bad and I had lost my children. (One son died in 1912; the other was killed in 1917, serving in the Navy.)

Reason for Selling Stock.

"George had refused to purchase my stock and I felt he would try to freeze me out if I took the stock back in my own name; and as Mr. Minnis was preparing to leave St. Louis to live in California so that he could not look after my interests any further—George had not spoken to me after January, 1916—I begged Mr. Minnis to buy this stock, and he did so."

On cross-examination, the witness was asked: "Why did you want to sell this stock which had paid you $138,000 in dividends in '17, '18 and '19?" He answered: "Because I was afraid—I was apprehensive of George."

George Wiegand resides at 35 Washington terrace. He and his three sons have been discharged by the temporary receiver, Colin M. Selph. Their respective annual salaries were $15,000, $9400, $7200 and $5400.

Dog Travels 550 Miles to Master.

MEXICO, Mo., Jan. 1.—George [illegible]ckett, veteran hunter and sportsman here, took an oath this New Year's morning that he was telling the truth and then related this story: "Last week I went to Little Rock, Ark., by train, taking with me my foxhound, and sold him there to C. C. Hawkins. Nine days later, on New Year's eve, arriving home from work, the dog was [illegible], covering 550 miles overland in nine days."

POLICE DRIVER KILLS NEGRO WHEN ATTACKED

Chauffeur for Night Chief, Answering Call to Dice Game Row, Shoots When "Rushed."

Entering a residence at 1525 Carr street in an effort to stop what appeared to be a free-for-all fight, Louis Tucket, 31 years old, a police chauffeur, last night, shot and fatally wounded, Word Grinder, 25 years old, a Negro, of 12 North Thirteenth street.

In a report at Carr street station, Tuckett related that he was off duty, in civilian clothes, walking from his home at 2010 Mullanphy street at 8 o'clock with his wife and 10-year-old daughter, to visit a friend.

He was at Sixteenth and Carr streets when a white man ran up to him and said Negroes were fighting in the Carr street house and that several shots had been fired. Leaving his wife and child at the corner, he entered the house and ascended to the second floor landing, where he heard voices.

Tuckett declared the exhibited his special watchman's badge and announced he was a police officer, demanding an explanation. Immediately, he said, he was "rushed" by a dozen Negroes, and to avoid a beating he fired two shots through his pocket. One bullet hit Grinder, who died on the way to the city hospital.

From several Negroes arrested in and near the house, police learned that the brawl which preceded Tuckett's entrance had started during a dice game. Tuckett was ordered to apepar at an inquest and reported as usual at 11 p. m. for duty as chauffeur to Night Chief of Police Stinger. He is not commissioned as a policeman, but his special watchman's appointment authorizes him to carry a revolver.

BURGLARS ESCAPE POLICE NET

Woman Finds Apartment Door Barricaded With Chairs.

When Mrs. W. T. Haydock returned to her apartment at 823 Clara avenue about 8 o'clock last night, after a few hours' absence, she found a table and some chairs had been piled against the door from the inside. Suspecting burglars were at work, she telephoned police from the home of a neighbor.

A squad of officers from the Page Boulevard Station surrounded the place a few minutes later, but when the net closed in the burglars had fled. Apparently they had gained entry and exist by breaking the lock on a back window. The apartment was found to have been ransacked and $7 was missing. The burglars, however, had failed to find a two-carat diamond stickpin which Mrs. Haydock had hidden before she went out.

HARRY S. LEHR IN HOSPITAL

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 1.—Harry S. Lehr, social arbiter in the early nineties in New York, Newport and Baltimore, is a patient at Johns-Hopkins Hospital. He arrived from Paris this week and entered the hospital Wednesday. His health has been failing since 1923.

Dr. Walter Dandy, noted brain specialist, said that Lehr was under observation and that an operation might be performed next week. Lehr's symptoms were similar to those noted in Paris in 1923, when it was feared an abscess had formed on the brain, Dr. Dandy said. Mrs. Lehr, who was Mrs. John Vinton Dahlgren, when she married Lehr in New York in 1901, is expected to return from Europe next week. She is the daughter of the late Joseph Drexel of New York.

Ex-Congressman Guernsey Dead.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—Frank E. Guernsey, former Representative in Congress from the Fourth Maine district, died today at the Massachusetts General Hospital. Guernsey served in Congress from 1908 to 1917, and subsequently was defeated in three contests for the Republican senatorial nomination. While in Congress he introduced the first parcel post zone system bill.

COMPULSORY AUTO RISK LAW EFFECTIVE IN MASSACHUSETTS

Each Owner Must Show Security Covering Accident Liabilities to Get 1927 License.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—With mingled high hopes and misgivings Massachusetts put into effect today the first compulsory automobile insurance law in the United States. Every automobile owner in the State, and there were 850,000 last year, before he can obtain a registration license for 1927 must post a bond to cover accident liabilities or show an insurance policy covering the same risk.

Under the power of the legislative act, Insurance Commissioner Wesley E. Monk promulgated some months ago rates for the various classes of motor vehicles. The State was divided into three territories with the Boston district paying the highest premium.

These rates have already drawn fire. Some residents have protested that the districting of the State constitutes discrimination, which is forbidden by law. Companies operating taxicabs or other groups of cars have sought a "fleet rate," which the Attorney-General has said is illegal under the present law.

By this law the costs of automobile operation are greatly increased. The owner-driver of a small car in 1926 paid $10 for registration and $2 for an operator's license. In 1927 he must pay also from $16 to $30 as an insurance premium. The rates for larger and commercial vehicles scale up to about $150 a year.

FINDS BROTHER SHE BELIEVED TO BE DEAD AFTER 18 YEARS

Mrs. Ethel Wagoner Has Happy Reunion New Year's Day With John Goodwin at Benton, Ill.

Mrs. Ethel Wagoner of 4847 Fountain avenue celebrated New Years yesterday by getting acquainted again with her brother, Andrew Goodwin, of Benton, Ill., whom she had not seen for 18 years and had believed to be dead.

They lost track of each other in 1908, when the Goodwin family, comprising eight brothers and sisters, left their former home in Charleston, Mo., and became scattered. The reunion was held at Goodwin's home in Benton, where, for many years, he had lived within 75 miles of his sister, whom he also believed to be dead.

Mrs. Wagoner, who is employed as a buyer in the downtown apparel store of Lane Bryant, Inc., learned of her brother's whereabouts through a chance conversation with a customer in the store. The customer, Mrs. J. W. Johnson of Benton, mentioned her home town and inquiry developed that she knew Andrew Goodwin and that he was still alive. Mrs. Wagoner communicated with him and the reunion visit was arranged for New Year's day. The other brothers and sisters reside in Illinois, Missouri, Florida and Michigan.

COSTS FARMER $1598 TO LIVE

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Living expenses of farm families average $1598 a year, the Department of Agriculture has determined after a survey. The sons and daughters cost more to clothe than the farmer and his wife, and the daughters' clothes cost more than the sons'.

The averaged-sized family sharing the expense was about four and one-half persons. Food accounted for two-fifths of the living costs clothing 14.7 per cent, rent 12.5 per cent, operation goods 13.3 per cent. Husbands and wives were credited with an annual expenditure of $59 each for clothing. The work day was found to be 11.3 hours for the farmer and 11.4 for the housewife.

CARAWAY FOR REED OR BAYARD FOR PRESIDENCY

Arkansan Declares Party Should Choose Outstanding Man or One of Slight Prominence.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—The latest politician of note to get aboard the Reed-for-President band wagon is Senator Thaddeus H. Caraway of Arkansas. Caraway is a dry. It would be a trifle more accurate, perhaps, to say that the Arkansas Senator has put one foot on the Reed band-wagon, for he has an alternative candidate in the person of Senator Thomas Bayard of Delaware, the president of the recently organized Thomas Jefferson League.

How did Caraway in his role of Warwick come to select for the consideration of the Democratic party two such diverse characters as Reed and Bayard? Let Caraway explain. He first eliminates all the better-known aspirants, real or supposed, except Reed. This is his line of thought:

"McAdoo and Smith put each other out of the running at the Madison Square shambles of 1924. Gov. Ritchie of Maryland has too much of a 'me too' attitude toward the Smith interests. Gov. Donahy of Ohio has eliminated himself by saying that he doesn't know enough to be President. That leaves Reed of Missouri."

Choice of Extremes.

"Now," drawled Caraway, "I am not asking the voters to sign on the dotted line. I am not a Mussolini. I offer them the choice between two extremes. The way I figure out the situation is like this: We ought to put up some outstanding man whose attainments can be capitalized or we ought to go to the other extreme and name a man who has figured so little in public life that he has not aroused strong antagonism. This latter man, if we choose that type, should be of sufficient stature to acquit us of rank presumption in naming him.

"Therefore, I offer you, on the one hand, Senator Reed of Missouri and on the other hand, Senator Bayard of Delaware.

"Reed is one of the ablest men in public life. He is more like Andrew Jackson than any other man we have today. If Reed had been born 150 years ago and Jackson had died when the British officer slashed him across the wrist, Reed would have been the man to step into Jackson's shoes. Reed has all of Jackson's faults and most of his virtues. He has done some foolish things and many wise ones. He has courage and convictions. He is sound on the great question of state's rights."

"Would Reed not be handicapped," Caraway was asked, "by the enmities he made in the League of Nations fight?"

"The position that Reed and the other irreconcilables took," replied Caraway, "has been justified by the events in Europe since 1919."

Bayard's Qualification.

Caraway turned to his other choice, the senior Senator from Delaware.

"Now I name you a man," he said, "who deserves to be better known than he is. He is a man of great charm and dignity. On both sides of his house he comes of distinguished ancestry. Five of his family before him were members of the United States Senate, his father was Secretary of State under Grover Cleveland.

"He comes from north of Mason and Dixon's line, but the South knows his family as one that stood by it in the reconstruction days. He is a gentleman and a man of first-rate ability. Like Reed, he is a great advocate of the rights of the states."

"Both these men," remarked the interviewer, "are wet."

"And yet," said Caraway, "they are not unacceptable to many drys. They are not fanatically wet. You will recall that Reed stood against the repeal of the State prohibition code in Missouri; he lined up with the drys on that issue. The wetness of Jim Reed fits into his political philosophy. It is consistent. He is not for states' rights merely in relation to the wet and dry issue, but he is for states' rights up and down the line.

"If we have got to have a Republican President again," pursued Caraway, "I would just as soon have Coolidge as anybody else, but I don't want Coolidge if I can help it. All that Coolidge sees is New England.

"I want a Democrat, a states' rights Democrat in the White House, and I offer for the earnest consideration of the party the names of Senator Reed of Missouri and Senator Bayard of Delaware."

The first of the New Year's robberies occurred at 2 a. m. yesterday when Jack White of 2007 South Compton avenue, returning from a New Year's Eve party, closed the alley door of the garage behind his home.

"Wait a minute, mister," said a voice, and White turned to see a shabbily dressed man of middle age, with a dirty bandanna bound across his face, issue from the shadow of a telegraph pole.

"I'm desperate," exclaimed the robber, thrusting a rusty revolver at White. "Give me your money." White surrendered his wallet, containing $56.

$1187 Taken in Six Robberies.

New Year's Eve there were six other robberies which netted holdup men $1187. The largest haul was taken downtown on the third floor of the Calumet Building, 112 North Seventh street, where two men with bandanna masks entered the office of the Franklin Association, a labor welfare association, and escaped with about $500 cash.

With one revolver they held up John J. Warrington, secretary-treasurer; Miss Louise Matthews, stenographer, and a member, Miss Lula Hefty of 3512A Nebraska avenue, who entered while the robbery was in progress. Warrington said one of the robbers had been there before, last September, when two men took $1414 in a similar holdup.

At about the same hours, two Negroes held up the Larr Coal Co., 825 South Twenty-third street, taking $80 from the manager, John Doerer.

Three Groceries Held Up.

Six Negroes invaded the grocery of Pearl Feldman, 2301 Clark avenue, at 7:30 p. m., leaving in an automobile after one of their number with a revolver held up Feldman and took $143 from the cash register.

Two men obtained $362 cash in the grocery of Louis Rinderknecht, 702 Carrie avenue, at 6:20 p. m., where they held up the grocer and a customer.

In the grocery of Harry Petring, 3118 North Twenty-fifth street, two men held up the butcher, Harry Weber, and a customer, Mrs. Arma Schuester, 2340 Sullivan avenue, escaping with $52.

At 10:30 p. m., Charles A. Prosser, 4151 Maryland avenue, walking near his home, was stopped by an armed man who ordered him into an automobile. As he started to climb in, another man in the machine seized his head, holding him while the first robber went through his pocket from behind, taking $50 cash and a watch valued at $35.

MAN ENDS LIFE BY GAS

Elias Taub, 52 years old, proprietor of the French Plating Co., was found dead from gas in his place of business in the Allen Building, 704 Washington avenue, at 10:30 p. m. Friday.

When found by a night watchman, the body was lying on the floor with the face covered by rags. A rubber hose attached to an open gas jet was in his mouth. Taub had been dead several hours. Business troubles and despondency over the death of a daughter, Mrs. Theresa Bashkow, last August, were ascribed as reasons for Taub's action by members of his family. His widow, Mrs. Rosa Taub, four daughters and a son survive. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

Retiring Official Analyzes Causes of Family Strife

As Associate Prosecutor for Three Years Henry J. Mueller Heard Average of 25 Complaints Daily From Husbands or Wives

After listening for three years to the complaints of husbands and wives who brought their family grievances to the Prosecuting Attorney's office—an average of 25 a day—Henry J. Mueller tried yesterday, on his retirement as Associate Prosecuting Attorney, to sum up the causes of marital dissension.

"There are dozens of causes for trouble in family life," Mueller said, "but there are three that stood out in the desertion and nonsupport cases which came to my attention—marriage on brief acquaintance, marriage at too early an age, and marriage without financial responsibility.

"An example of all three mistakes is contained in a couple that has been in my office several times. They met in a street car flirtation. The girl was 16, the boy 17. They married at Clayton and the girl paid the fees. And they have had trouble ever since.

Vampire Element Evident.

"Young people from the farms and small towns have taken up a lot of my time. It seems the country husband comes to the city alone, meets a woman more attractive than his wife, and the result is that the wife, when she follows him to the city, finds she has lost him.

"When a young man is courting a girl, he spends more than a day's day in an evening to 'make an impression.' Result, when they married, they can't make ends meet. The husband leaves the city or takes to bad whisky, and the wife comes to us for help.

Man Usually At Fault.

"My observation has been that in the large majority of cases brought to my attention the man is the one at fault. The woman is the one that has the children and the man too frequently will not stand up under his share of the responsibility. Men seem to get the wanderlust when they are about 28 years old, if their responsibilities appear to be greater than they can stand.

"Many women, it appears, are too eager to marry. Often they marry the first man who comes along, and then after a while begin comparing him with other men. Usually the hastily-chosen husband suffers in the comparison. Petty bickering follows and the wife is deserted when the man can stand the nagging no longer."

In spite of all the unsuccessful marriages he has patched up or sent on to the courts, Mueller insists that on the whole marriage is a good thing. It should be approached, however, with caution, common-sense and an eye for the future, he says. For himself, he is a bachelor, 55 years old, and lives with his mother at 1816 Rutger street.

RESORT OWNER UNDER BOND IN MURDER INQUIRY TAKEN AGAIN

Liquor Charge Filed by Deputy Constables Against John Cuddy of Blue Front Cafe.

Deputy Constables of Central Township, who, with city detectives, smashed up furnishings of the Blue Front Cafe, 6121 Natural Bridge road, in a liquor raid Dec. 14, paid a second visit to the place late Friday afternoon. They found no liquor in the premises, but in the automobile of John Cuddy, the owner, they found a gallon of whisky, and at his home, 6049 Grimshaw avenue, a quantity of whisky, wine and beer.

Cuddy was held under $1000 bond, charged with possession of liquor. He and two friends already were under bond, accused of being accessories to the murder of Jack Barrett Jr., whose body was found at Jennings road and Melrose avenue, Nov. 11. Mrs. Mabel Robinson, wife of "Chippy" Robinson, Egan gangster in prison for mail robbery, who was weeping beside the body, refused to tell of the shooting but blood stains and other evidence at Cuddy's place were regarded by police as indicating someone had been wounded there.

GANTT TAKES OATH AS SUPREME JUDGE

New Member of Missouri Tribunal Takes Seat in Division No. 1.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 1.—Ernest S. Gantt (Dem.) of Mexico, Mo., was sworn in as Judge of the Missouri Supreme Court today by Chief Justice David E. Blair, and took his seat on the bench of Division No. 1. He was elected for a term of ten years, expiring Dec. 31, 1936.

Several of the Judges and other State officials witnessed the ceremony.

Gantt was elected in the November election by a majority of 1218 over Robert W. Otto (Rep.) of Jefferson City, whose term expired yesterday. Otto, while Attorney-General, was appointed a Supreme Judge by Gov. Baker on Nov. 17, 1925, to serve out the term of the late Judge A. M. Woodson (Dem.).

Until yesterday Gantt was Circuit Judge of the Eleventh judicial circuit, which comprises Audrain, Warren and Montgomery counties. He was appointed Circuit Judge in March, 1916, by Gov. Major to fill a vacancy. He was elected that fall for a six-year term and was re-elected in 1922.

He is 59 years old.

Walter N. Davis (Dem.) of St. Louis, will assume his duties this week as a Supreme Court Commissioner in Division No. 2. He was appointed to serve out the term of Commissioner Robert T. Railey (Dem.) of St. Louis, who resigned, effective today. Davis formerly was a Supreme Court Commissioner and served one term as a Commissioner of the St. Louis Court of Appeals. The Supreme Court Commissioners are appointed by the Supreme Court en banc. Davis' term will expire April 1.

FIRE ROUTS GUESTS OF DOWNTOWN HOTEL

Large Crowd Attracted by Blaze at Sixth Street and Lucas Avenue.

A basement fire which threatened the four-story Ambassador Hotel, on the northwest corner of Sixth street and Lucas avenue, attracted several hundred holiday theater goers to that district at 5 p. m. yesterday.

For a time it seemed the flames might engulf the entire building, but by 6 o'clock firemen who had responded to a general alarm, succeeded in confining the blaze to the basement after the flames had penetrated the store rooms on the first floor.

Guests of the hotel, alarmed by the smoke and cries of fire, fled hurriedly to the street, several, including an elderly woman, resorting to the fire escapes although the entrance of the hotel at 707 North Sixth street was not blocked.

Origin was not determined, opinion differing as to whether it began in the furnace room or in a basement stockroom of the clothing store of Jacob Katz, which also occupies the first floor.

The contents of the basement were destroyed, and merchandise in first floor storerooms was badly damaged by smoke and water.

Hurrying about his business, Fire Chief Alt stumbled over a hose and fell headlong. He was stunned for a moment, but revived and went on with his duties. He estimated the damage at $20,000.

GOV. SMITH, RECEPTIVE, BUT WON'T SEEK PRESIDENCY

Taking Oath for Fourth Time, He Declares No One Can Be Indifferent to Highest Honor.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 1.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith was inaugurated chief executive of the State of New York for the fourth time today amid scenes of unprecedented brilliancy.

In a brief inaugural speech, he referred to the possibility of his nomination for the presidency by saying that any person would be receptive to such a great honor, but that he would not strive for it except so far as he could give to the State of New York service that would make him worthy of the honor if it came to him.

"I have no idea," said the Governor, "of what the future has in store for me. Everybody else in the United States has some notion of this except myself. No man would stand before an assemblage like this and say that he was not receptive to the highest office in the gift of the people of the country. But I will say that I will do nothing to seek it, except to give the people the kind and character of service that will make me deserve it if I ever get it."

After reviewing the growth of the State government since he first entered legislative halls as a member of the Assembly 23 years ago, the Governor said that the honor and distinction coming upon him today rather humiliated him. He said he did not have today the "flow of language" which he possessed during the election campaign and that it was impossible for him to find words to express his gratitude to the people.

After his references to a presidential nomination, Gov. Smith touched upon the organization of the State government in three main divisions—executive, legislative and judicial—and characterized the legislative branch as more powerful than the executive, due to the fact that the Legislature could enact laws without approval of the Governor, whereas the Governor could never make legislation alone.

"Without the co-operation of the Legislature I can only perform every day administrative duties," he said. "I now ask the Legislature publicly to give me that co-operation. On my side I promise to give it my co-operation with full, free hand and open heart."

The Governor's references to the Legislature were considered significant, as the Republicans control both the Senate and assembly.

The inaugural ceremony, in the assembly chamber at the Capitol, was elaborately staged, the colors of the bunting, floral decorations and the uniforms of representatives of the State's military and naval forces combining to make a most brilliant spectacle.

Bishop Edmund F. Gibbons of the Roman Catholic Church offered the invocation, after which Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, Secretary of State, administered the oath of office. The ceremonies ended with benediction by Bishop Richard H. Nelson of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

DANGER OF FAMINE IN NICARAGUA

Fighting May Result in Cut in Railway to Interior, Where Crops Cannot Be Harvested.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 1.—Continued gathering of Liberal forces and the threat of fighting in the Chinandega region in northwest Nicaragua, are leading to fear for the food supply of the interior of the country.

Reports received here say that large groups of Liberal soldiers are gathering at Somotillo, Telica and San Pedro to wait for arms from the gun runner "Temporal" which has reached the Gulf of Fonseca.

There is danger that the railroad line will be cut as soon as fighting breaks out at Chinandega. As the food supplies of the interior are scarce because of inability to harvest crops and as a result of the ravages of locusts, it is feared that the population there will face famine.

The Conservative government is understood to need arms badly, and although the Conservatives have more troops than the Liberals, they are completely outgunned. The American embargo on arms is still on.

The government, has been hit hard financially by the civil warfare because of the necessity of maintaining large forces and money which ordinarily would go for public improvements is now being used for the army.

Dr. Juan Sacasa, president of the Liberal government, is still at Puerto Cabezas, where American marines have established a neutral zone. He is confident that his forces soon will control Nicaragua.

Diaz Refuses Mediation.

The Conservative government of Adolfo Diaz has announced its refusal to accept the offer of mediation made by the government of Costa Rica, stating that as the United States has recognized the Diaz government there was no need for mediation.

President Jimenez of Costa Rica had made it known that he could not recognize Diaz because he was not the "legal President," and that he could not recognize Juan B. Sacasa, head of the Liberal government, because Sacasa did not have control.

Diaz Denies American Bankers Finance Him.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Adolfo Diaz in a cablegram to the Nicaraguan legation has made a categorical denial that his Government in Nicaragua is receiving financial aid from American bankers. His statement, the legation said, was in refutation of charges by Dr. Juan Sacasa, head of the Nicaraguan Liberal faction.

Word has come from the American State Department that Sacasa and his adherents cannot hope for recognition by the United States, even if he dislodges Diaz from his seat at Managua, since such recognition would be in violation of the Central American pact which bans all governments that come into being through violence and revolution.

Military Censorship Lasted Five Days, Washington Hears.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—The censorship of "military instructions and information," established by the landing party sent ashore by Rear Admiral Julian L. Latimer, commander of the special service squadron at Puerto Cabezas, Nicaragua, headquarters of the Sacasa revolutionary government, lasted five days, or from Dec. 24 until Dec. 29.

The chief effect of the censorship, so far as Washington has been able to judge, was to strengthen the agitation in support of Sacasa, a liberal, by interfering with the activities of his headquarters and giving his agents here and elsewhere ground for contending that American neutrality in Nicaragua was far from neutral.

COCHRAN TO INTRODUCE TWO WET MEASURES IN HOUSE

St. Louis Congressman for Repeal of 18th Amendment and for Light Wine and Beer, Pending Vote.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Repeal of the prohibition amendment and modification of the Volstead law to permit the sale of light wines and beer will be sought by Representative Cochran, Democrat, Missouri, a new member of the House. He announced today that he had drafted measures providing for both, and also intended to join the "wet bloc" in the House.

Another Democrat, Representative Celler of New York, let it be known that he would introduce a bill to give physicians unlimited authority to prescribe medicinal whisky. He said he was prompted to do so by the recent Supreme Court decision upholding the right of Congress to place limitations on the number of prescriptions a doctor may issue.

Cochran, whose home is in St. Louis, said he wanted a constitutional amendment legalizing beer and wines, but thought ratification should be by nation-wide popular vote instead of by Legislatures and conventions.

He estimated that deaths due to the drinking of poisonous concoctions amounted to tens of thousands annually, and that more than 12,000 persons a year were being arrested in this city for intoxications, drinking in public or driving automobiles while drunk.

Illinoisan Shoots Wife's Visitor.

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., Jan. 1.—Robert Flanigan, 35 years old, was arrested here today, following the probable fatal shooting of Earl McGowan, 21 years old, at Carbondale, Friday night. It is alleged Flanigan, returning to his home from work, found McGowan with his wife. They fought, and Flanigan left. When he returned home McGowan followed him, it is said. Flanigan said that after McGowan abused him he got his shotgun and fired at McGowan. McGowan is not expected to recover.

Cooks in Warsaw Strike.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, Poland, Jan. 1.—New Year revelers in Warsaw's restaurants had to be contented with cold dishes because of a sudden strike among cooks who demanded a large increase in wages. The employers tried vainly to temporize in order to carry on over the holiday, but no dishes went by the board when the cooks refused to go back to the kitchens.

WABASH DENIED INCREASE FOR ST. LOUIS SWITCHING

Schedule Planned to Take Effect Jan. 30 Rejected by I. C. C.; Revised Advances Planned.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1. — Increased switching charges which the Wabash Railroad proposed to put into effect Jan. 30 in the St. Louis industrial district were held unjustified yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The new schedules would have increased the switching charges by amounts ranging from $2.70 to $11 per car.

The Wabash will be allowed to revise its present scale, however, on a basis of a flat charge of $8 per car on such materials as now carry a rate of 1.5 cents per 100 pounds, and up to $15 per car on more valuable commodities. The railroad must prepare and file new schedules for approval before making these changes.

U. S. CATHOLICS TO BE ASKED TO AID NEAR EAST

Georgetown Professor and Archbishop Glennon Map Plans for Campaign Opening Jan. 23.

1,000,000 MEMBERS WILL BE SOUGHT

Entire Clergy Will Join in Appeal to Assist People in Stricken Areas and Rehabilitate Land.

A nation-wide summons to join in "a crusade of mercy and charity" will be sounded simultaneously from all the Catholic pulpits of the United States on Jan. 23, to open a campaign for 1,000,000 members for the Catholic Near East Welfare Association, formed by a recent consolidation of all Catholic welfare bodies operating in Russia and the Near East.

The summons, now being drafted by the association at the instance of Pope Pius, will be heard from the pulpits of 81 dioceses, from the lips of three Cardinals, 81 Archbishops and Bishops and about 12,000 parish priests.

Detailed preliminary plans to lay the foundation for a successful campaign are being made under the direction of Prof. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, and president of the Welfare Association. He has been in St. Louis since Friday, conferring with Archbishop Glennon, a director of the association, and other Catholic leaders, and will leave tonight for Kansas City, where similar conferences will be held.

Work Is Three-Fold.

Prof. Walsh, who was chosen to head the association because of his work as director-general of the Papal Relief Mission to Russia during the famine, described the organization's relief plans yesterday.

"Our work is three-fold," he explained, "to provide physical relief for refugees in Asia Minor and Athens, to extend aid to orphanages and industrial schools in Palestine, and to provide an exchange program for the education of Russian students in America.

"We propose to prevent, if possible, a recurrence of the distressing conditions which have existed in the past. We want to alleviate first the physical discomfort of the people in Russia and the Near East, and second we want to help educate them so they may protect themselves against another disaster."

Prof. Walsh cited as an example the case of the Smyrna disaster victims who, after four years, are still in dire circumstances. He described how the association is helping by maintaining orphanages for children, schools and clinics, and is building a refugee settlement of two-story brick houses, each with a little garden plot, for workmen.

Plan Student Exchange.

Similar work is being done in Asia Minor for refugees from the Druse-French wars, and plans have been made to aid the schools and orphanages in Palestine which were destroyed by the Turks during the World War and received no post-war indemnity for the damage.

Under the student exchange plan, it is proposed that Russian boys, unable to obtain the benefits of education in their own country, be placed for complete courses in American colleges, universities and high schools. "We propose to extend this part of the work gradually," Prof. Walsh said, "as the demand for physical relief decreases."

The membership campaign will be directed from the association's office in New York, under the supervision of Cardinal Hayes of New York and a national board consisting of Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia, Archbishop Hanna of San Francisco, Bishop Lillis of Kansas and Archbishop Glennon.

U. S. HIGHWAYS ALL APPROVED

Federal System Embraces 80,000 Miles of Roads.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Approval of the final location of the United States system of highways by the Federal Government and by all the states was announced today by the Bureau of Public Roads. It consists of approximately 80,000 miles of the most important roads and embraces 10 transcontinental routes east and west and as many through routes north and south.

The work of designation has been under way almost a year and was finally approved by the American Association of State Highway officials in November. A route-numbering system, by which all east and west routes bear even numbers and north and south routes odd ones, is expected to assist tourists in following through highways. Twenty-two states already have their United States highways completely marked. The main highways will bear numbers in multiples of 10, the transcontinental routes being numbered 10, 20, 30, etc., and the north and south routes, 1, 11, 21, etc.

PRISONER HELD HERE ADMITS KILLING MAN IN CHICAGO

Frank Whyte Says He Shot in Self-Defense During Quarrel Over Liquor Deal.

Frank Whyte, alias Clarence Stofeldt and Frank Walsh, who was arrested Thursday night with a woman at the New Plaza Hotel in a room where detectives found a quantity of burglar supplies, will be sent to Chicago to face a murder charge.

He had been held at the request of Los Angeles authorities, who telegraphed that he was a member of a gang of burglars, several of whom had been arrested in that city, but yesterday a telegram from Chicago announced he was wanted there on the more serious charge.

Whyte, who says he is a Chicago bootlegger, was confronted with the telegram, and, according to Chief of Detectives Kaiser, replied that he knew he was "wanted for murder" in Chicago. He killed a man last February, in self-defense, in a quarrel over the division of the proceeds of a liquor transaction, he said.

Chicago police, who are sending a detective for Whyte, telegraphed that he was charged with the murder of Martin Garrity, on May 3, last. Garrity, they wired, was shot to death in a taxicab after a night's drinking with three other men. The woman arrested with Whyte will be released.

THE MAN WE WANT

—is the type who feels he has reached his limit in his present connection and is looking for a bigger opportunity. He is between twenty-five and thirty-five years of age and will not only be a salesman with a record, but will be able to handle correspondence properly. He will be the type that is only interested in a straight commission proposition and will be able to finance himself to start. To such a man we offer an unusual opportunity, selling a well-advertised product, manufactured by a firm established in 1883, and a leader in its field. The unit of sale ranges from $250 to $10,000 and only people who are known to be in the market are solicited.

If you are the man, your first letter will gain an interview. Don't worry about this being a blind ad—we have no time to waste on the multitude of "job hunters," our signature would bring. Box D-212, Post-Dispatch.

SITES FOR FOUR MORE STATE PARKS BOUGHT

Tracts in Franklin, Wayne, Dent and Saline Counties Cost Total of $152,416.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 1.—Purchase of four additional sites for State parks, in Franklin, Wayne, Dent and Saline Counties, for $152,416, was announced today by State Game and Fish Commissioner Keith McCanse. The sale contracts were closed today and the land will be transferred to the State next week.

The additional park sites, covering 11,087 acres, increase the chain of State parks and game refuges to 12, with a total area of about 36,000 acres. The system of parks has been acquired at a total cost of $362,000 since the latter part of 1924, when former Game and Fish Commissioner Frank H. Wielandy of St. Louis first made use of a park fund established in 1919.

Funds for purchase of park sites were provided by the Legislature through a law setting aside one-fourth of the annual receipts from the sale of State hunting and fishing licenses, to be used in buying and maintaining parks. The sites were purchased by a board comprising the Governor, Attorney-General and State Game and Fish Commissioner.

Largest of New Sites.

The largest of the new sites is a tract of 5778 acres of land near Sullivan, Mo., in the southern part of Franklin County, and 65 miles from St. Louis. It was bought for $95,220. The tract is heavily timbered, and is adapted to use as a deer and wild turkey preserve. The Meramec River flows through the land, and one border of the park site is within a mile of Federal highway No. 66, the St. Louis, Springfield and Joplin highway.

Ten springs are on the tract and nine caves, one of them the Fisher cave, said to be one of the most beautiful caverns in the Ozark region. Former Gov. Thomas C. Fletcher of St. Louis held a reception and ball in this cave some time after his election in 1864.

Another tract of 4646 acres was purchased in Wayne County, three miles north of Patterson, the birthplace of Gov. Baker. It will be named the Sam A. Baker State Park, McCanse said. The land was purchased for $23,196.

This tract includes a range of hills known as the Mud Lick mountains and five miles of water courses, the St. Francis River and the Big Creek, a stream well known for bass fishing. A gap in the hills on the western border of the park is known as Stony Battery, through which Gen. Price conducted his troops in the Civil War.

The third largest tract of the four is 663 acres purchased in Dent County, including the village of Montauk. The State bought the village, comprising a flour mill, general store and other buildings, one of which will be converted into a small hotel. The purchase price was $29,000. This park will be named the Montauk State Park, after the village. On the tract is a large spring, with an estimated daily flow of 40,000,000 gallons of water, which is the source of the Current River. It is planned to establish a fish hatchery at the spring for the propagation of Rainbow trout.

Arrow Rock Site Bought.

The fourth new park site, to be known as Arrow Rock State Park, is a tract of 30 acres in Saline County purchased for $5000. It adjoins the historic old tavern at Arrow Rock, a State owned pioneer memorial. Old Tavern was a thriving frontier inn on the Santa Fe trail in the pioneer days of Missouri. The tavern was bought by the State several years ago. The park and old tavern are 12 miles north of Federal Highway No. 40, the St. Louis-Kansas City "Air Line" highway.

As the park system now is constituted 10 of the parks are south of the Missouri River, in the Ozark region, and two, the Arrow Rock Park and the Mark Twain Memorial Park, near Hannibal, are north of the river.

Parks already established in the southern part of the State are Sequiota State Park near Springfield; Alley Spring Park in Shannon County, near Birch Tree; Round Spring Park in Shannon County, near Eminence; Bennett Spring Park in Laclede County, near Lebanon; Big Spring Park in Carter County, near Van Buren; Deer Run Park in Reynolds County, near Ellington, and Indian Trail Park in Dent County, near Salem.

$52,031,585 STATE BUDGET FOR NEXT 2 YEARS FAVORED BY MISSOURI TAX COMMISSION

Recommendations for Appropriations From General Revenue and Special Funds and Fees Slash Departmental Requests.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 1.—After weeks of slashing and revising appropriation requests of all State Departments, bureaus and institutions for the biennial period of 1927 and 1928, the State Tax Commission today announced its recommendations for appropriations from general revenue and special funds and fees, totaling $52,031,585 for the two years.

These recommendations, together with proposed appropriations of $51,000,000 for State highway construction and maintenance make a total proposed budget of $103,031,585 for operation of all departments of the State Government for the next two years. This is approximately the same total as proposed two years ago for the biennial period of 1925 and 1926. Appropriation requests of all departments, covering all sources of state revenue and including the estimated one-third of general revenue to be apportioned to public schools, totaled $120,450,000.

The budget is one in name only, as the Tax Commission has no budgeting powers except in an advisory capacity to the Legislature which convenes Wednesday, and the Legislature acts upon the recommendations as it sees fit. The appropriations passed by the Legislature usually exceed the Tax Commission recommendations by several million dollars.

General Revenue $22,139,132.

Preparation of the recommendations on appropriations from the general revenue fund, which is the principal State fund derived from direct tax paying sources, involved heavy slashing of departmental requests. General revenue collections for the biennial period are estimated at $22,139,132, of which one-third is set aside by law for apportionment to the public schools. This leaves an estimated amount of $15,017,225 available for general revenue appropriations to departments. Requests for such appropriations totaled $31,143,113, or more than double the amount that will be available.

The State educational institutions alone asked for $13,730,175, or within $1,400,000 of the general revenue that will be available. The commission recommends appropriations for these institutions totaling $5,191,167. They received $4,421,900 during the 1925-26 biennial period. The one-third of general revenue, appropriated by law for apportionment to the public schools, is estimated at $7,121,900.

Recommendations for appropriations from funds and fees totaled $29,892,460. The requests for appropriations of this character aggregated $31,191,259. These funds and fees represent numerous items of departmental earnings and fees. The departments will get to spend the money if they earn it.

Highway Program.

The highway appropriations for construction and maintenance are drawn from the road fund, which is made up of proceeds of bond sales, automobile license fees, gasoline tax and several minor sources of revenue. They were not included in the commission budget report, but the report does include the proposed appropriations for road bond retirement, interest and department administration costs.

The $51,000,000 in proposed road construction and maintenance appropriations includes $14,000,000 for construction in 1927, $10,000,000 covering the carry-over on contracts let in 1926 but not completed, $11,000,000 for construction in 1926 and $10,000,000 for additional construction in the two years if the road revenue increases sufficiently to make the money available. The department also is asking $6,000,000 for road maintenance, at the rate of $3,000,000 a year.

No specific taxation recommendations were made by the commission, the report avoiding any definite discussion of proposed increases in tax rates, which some of the State officials believe necessary. The report does point out that if the revenues were increased, "many worthy requests" of the educational and eleemosynary institutions could be granted and a more liberal policy followed in appropriations for these institutions.

Demand for Economy.

"We have considered at this time that there is a public demand for reducing taxes and for economy in governmental administration," the commission stated in the report. "We have submitted our report on the basis that there will be no increase in tax rates or other revenues provided. If a consolidation program or an elimination of useless offices and overlapping departments can be effected, then it may be possible in the interest of economy to reduce the revenue in the proportion that the savings from such consolidation or elimination of offices will justify."

The University of Missouri, which received $2 670,166 in 1925 and 1926, asked for $6,528,211 for the next biennial period, but the commission recommended only $1,979,500.

Requests of the other educational institutions, and the budget recommendations, are as follows:

Kirksville State Teachers' College asked $1,227,315, budget, $415,400; Maryville Teachers' College asked $781,149, budget, $405,649; Cape Girardeau Teachers' College asked $629,660, budget, $372,500; Springfield Teachers College asked $784,701, budget, $450,298; Warrensburg Teachers' College asked $1,047,789, budget, $400,000; Missouri School of Mines at Rolla asked $1,227,250, budget, $442,000; School for Blind at St. Louis asked $268,000, budget, $141,500; Lincoln University for Negroes at Jefferson City asked $625,000, budget, $193,000; School for Deaf at Fulton asked $611,100, budget, $391,320.

No Cut on Governor.

The eleemosynary institutions at Fulton, St. Joseph, Nevada, Farmington and Marshall asked a total of $3,806,196 from the general revenue, a large part of it for new buildings, but the commission recommended a total of $919,200. However, it was recommended that $4,400,000 be appropriated from earnings, representing payments by the counties for support of patients for maintenance of the hospitals.

The commission did not alter the request of $69,600 by Gov. Baker for the executive department, covering salaries and expenses of the Governor's office, his contingent fund, and the fund for expenses of the executive mansion.

Requests of the penal institutions, including the penitentiary, boys' reformatory and training schools for girls at Chillicothe and Tipton, were cut from $1,700,200 to $721,700, but they will receive other appropriations from earnings.

The National Guard asked for $900,000 as a support appropriation, but only $150,000 was recommended. A considerable part of the expense of the State troops is paid by the Federal Government.

St. Louis May Lose Air Unit.

St. Louis may lose the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service, now on probation, because of inadequate facilities for training if adequate appropriations are not provided. The Federal Government has threatened to withdraw recognition of the unit, which chiefly involves paying most of the expense, unless the probation conditions are met.

The Public Service Commission was allowed $383,320 for support, against a request for $450,120. Other appropriations among the approximately 120 listed were sharply trimmed in the recommendations.

Principal items in the estimated general revenue of $22,139,132 for the two years include $2,832,000 from corporation franchise tax; $4,634,500 from property and personal taxes; $7,213,000 from the State income tax; $22,331,000 from the State inheritance tax, and $1,982,000 from the foreign insurance company premium tax.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

CHANGE IN OWNERS OF M'JIMSEY PAPER

Oklahomans Will Change Name of Springfield (Mo.) Republican to Daily News.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 1.—E. E. E. McJimsey, for 17 years editor and publisher of the Springfield Morning Republican, announced today that he had sold the newspaper to Edson K. Bixby and Joel H. Bixby of Muskogee, Ok., and their associates.

With Tuesday's issue, the first under the new management, the name of the paper will be changed to the Springfield Daily News, Joel H. Bixby said. The News will be independent in politics. A Monday morning issue will be added within a few weeks.

McJimsey will retain nominal control, according to articles of incorporation, filed with the Recorder of Deeds here Thursday.

Edson K. Bixby is the only one of the Bixbys whose name appears as a member of the Board of Directors in the incorporation articles. The new board of directors includes McJimsey, E. K. Bixby, J. A. Tolerton and E. M. Wilhoit.

The papers show McJimsey to retain the 825 shares of preferred stock and 960 shares of common stock. The paper is incorporated at $82,500 capital stock, first preferred, and for 1000 shares of common stock, without par or nominal value.

McJimsey formerly was editor of the Maryville Tribune and later was editor of the St. Joseph Gazette. He came to Springfield 20 years ago as editor of the Republican, and later acquired the interests of Charles Swanger and H. H. Mitchell.

McJimsey has been actively identified with Republican politics and six years ago was a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, being defeated in the primary by former Gov. Hyde.

$10,000 BEQUEST TO GERMAN RED CROSS ORDERED PAID

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 1.—A decision rendered in Carroll County Circuit Court that the bequest of $10,000 to the German Red Cross Society from the estate of Jacob Rahn of De Witt, Mo., made before the World War ended, was void because it was opposed to public policy of the United States, was reversed Friday by Division No. 1 of the Supreme Court, and the executor ordered to pay the bequests, with interest, through George Ahrens, German Consul at St. Louis.

Rahn, a bachelor, died in Carroll County on Feb. 24, 1920, before the official ending of the war on July 2, 1921. His will, dated February 8, 1916, included a bequest of $10,000 to the German Red Cross Society for the relief of widows, orphans and other invalids in Germany, who were objects of charity as a result of the war. Payment was to be made to the German Consul at St. Louis.

The Carroll County Probate Court ordered the bequest paid, on Dec. 22, 1922, upon an application by Hugo Mundt, then German Consul at St. Louis. Robert G. Martin, executor of the estate, appealed to the Circuit Court, which ruled the bequest was void on the ground it was against public policy of the United States because it would aid an enemy. Commissioner Alfred Seddon, author of the opinion, held the bequest was not opposed to public policy in letter or spirit.

CHURCH IN MEXICO SEIZED

Building Owned by Methodist Mission Closed Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1. — State Department officials have been advised of the seizure by the Mexican Government of a building owned by an American Protestant church, but they are of the opinion that nothing in a diplomatic way can be done about it, for the present at least. The building, property of the Methodist Episcopal Missions of the South, is at Piedras Negras, Coahuila, and was closed last February under the law forbidding foreigners to teach religion. Notification of the seizure was printed in El Diario Official, the gazette of the Mexican Government, a copy of which has been received here.

PROBATE JUDGE BEGINS SIXTH TERM

Holtcamp First Took Office 20 Years Ago—Reappoints Entire Staff.

Charles W. Holtcamp yesterday began his sixth term as Judge of the St. Louis Probate Court, to which he was first elected 20 years ago and was re-elected on the Republican ticket for his present term last November. No other Judge with the exception of the late Judge G. T. Woerner served so long as he in that court, Judge Woerner, a Democrat, also having been elected six times.

Court was convened yesterday by Judge Holtcamp for the purpose of naming his office staff, consisting of 21 deputies, all of whom were reappointed. From behind a bank of flowers on the bench the Judge delivered a talk to his appointees, in which he told of his long service and incidentally cautioned them to give efficient and courteous service to the public. He also mentioned that some of his deputies have been with him since he first took office.

George Brand was reappointed chief clerk, Arthur E. Woerheide courtroom clerk, Fred H. Hald and Louis C. Kreh will clerks and J. Henry Koenig cashier. Koenig has been cashier 29 years. He was first appointed in the term of Judge Leo Rassieur.

Other deputies reappointed are: Adolph Lachmann, Frank P. Poston, Louis J. Stranz, Henry C. Diekmann, Mike Fadem, Henry Lurkins, Miss Sylvia Fadem, Marshall B. Harrison, Archie C. Latal, Mrs. Marguerite Pohlman, Otto Schubach, William H. Banks, Joseph P. Harris, John G. Benda, Henry Donnerberg and Thomas J. Gabbert Jr.

During the 120 years in which the Probate Court here has been in existence, only eight Judges have served on that bench. Judge Holtcamp said a recent examination of the records revealed that more estates have been administered in the last 20 years than were handled in all previous years. It was estimated there are being administered under him estates, now open, which contain property of a total valuation of $300,000,000.

For Bladder Relief Is Nature's Danger Signal. Columbus Minister's Wife Relates Experience

Rev. W. H. Mitchell, 824 No. Park St. Columbus, Ohio, says: "My wife was troubled seriously with bladder irritation until we used lithiated buchu (Keller Formula). Her night's rest was disturbed nightly 6 to 8 times. Will gladly answer any letter."

Lithiated Buchu acts on the bladder as epsom salts on the bowels. Drives out foreign matter and decreases excessive acidity, thereby relieving irritation. The tablets cost 2c each at all drug stores. Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio. Locally at Wolff-Wilson Drug Stores.

DID PETAIN SERVE IN THE WAR?

Question of Liquor Bureau Clerk Makes Marshal Smile.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 1.—Marshal Petain, hero of Verdun and father of the phrase, "They shall not pass," has a large farm and vineyard near Villeneuve-Loubet in the foothills of the French Alps.

The Marshal operates the farm himself. In addition to his wines he is licensed to make a certain amount of brandy each year. The other day, accompanied by his orderly, both of them in farming clothes, the Marshal went to the headquarters of the department to have his permit as a distiller renewed.

"What's your name?" the clerk inquired, beginning to read a series of questions. "Petain," the applicant said. "Petain," the applicant said. "Your profession?" "Marshal." "Did you serve in the war?" The Marshal smiled, then turned to the orderly and said: "What do you think about it? Do you think I served in the war?"

ALABAMA BLOCKS PUNT AND TIES STANFORD, 7-7

Vanderbilt Quintet Defeats Billikens, 40 to 21

VETERAN TEAM FROM SOUTH WINS EASILY

Pope Leads Blue and White Attack With 11 Points—Contest Officially Opens St. Louis U.'s New Gym.

The St. Louis University basketball team suffered its second decisive defeat of the season last night when the Vanderbilt quintet of Nashville won a 40-21 victory at the new St. Louis University gymnasium. The game officially opened the Billikens' recently completed building on West Pine boulevard.

Vanderbilt, boasting seven veteran lettermen on this year's squad had little difficulty in keeping the game well in hand and never did Squinty Hunter's green quintet after the few minutes of play come within striking distance of a victory. However, the inexperienced home team's play was, despite the final total, quite creditable. Pope, at right forward for the Billikens, led the Billikens' attack with a total of 11 points.

Visitors Soon Take Lead.

St. Louis U. gained a meager lead at the start on a free throw followed by a field goal but Vanderbilt soon opened up and had rolled 23-8 lead when the half ended. Vanderbilt's close guarding held the Billikens scoreless for almost half of the next period when Knute Knight, replacing Walsh at guard, sank a shot. A Billiken spurt followed but fell shorrt and Vanderbilt's attack continued to function in good style. The visitors made several replacements late in the game but the new men displayed the same accuracy of the regulars. Martin and Thomas adding 10 points between them. Stuart and Baker led Vanderbilt's scoring with four field goals each until replaced near the final whistle.

St. Louis' showing would appear to favor a Washington victory when the Billikens meet the Bears at the Washington Field House next Tuesday in a game that marks the resumption of athletic connections between the two schools.

Rickard to Come Here Thursday To See Tunney

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.

TEX RICKARD announced today he will meet Gene Tunney in St. Louis next Thursday to discuss a proposal for the heavyweight champion to defend his title in New York next summer.

Rickard, apparently stirred to action in formulating his 1927 heavyweight program by the activities of his rival New York promoter, Humbert Fugazy, received a telegram from Tunney this morning agreeing to the St. Louis conference, in reply to a message sent to the champion yesterday.

Tunney said last night that Rickard had informed him a dozen or more Eastern newspaper men would accompany him to St. Louis to "cover" the fight conferences and that St. Louis would be the sport center of the country for a week, as far as news of the heavyweight fight situation was concerned.

Western Eleven Defeats Eastern All-Stars, 7 to 3

Kelly and Roebuck Prove Outstanding Lights in Charity Contest.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 1.—Twenty thousand persons saw West conquer East, 7—3, in the annual charity football game at Kezar Stadium today. It was the second time in as many years that an all-star Western eleven wrote a brilliant victory over Eastern rivals in the benefit contest for the Shriners' Crippled Children's Hospital.

East scored first with a field goal when Rauber, Washington and Lee halfback, booted the ball between the bars from the 12-yard line. His kick followed a drive that started from midfield.

The Western points came as the result of a three-yard pass, Kelly to Sweet, and the former University of Montana star dashed 45 yards to a touchdown. He also kicked goal.

Roebuck Proves Star.

A defense that for the most part was impregnable, was produced by both elevens. The line play uncorked one of the greatest performers ever sen here in Ted Roebuck, Haskell Indian star, who played a tackle position for the Westerners. A 240-pound mass of brawn, he was in almost every play, smashing through the line to nip Eastern plays before their inception and tossing opposing runners for long losses.

Individual performances gave way most of the time to team play but aside from Roebuck, "Wild Bill" Kelly, another Montana ace and captain of the Western squad, and Fritz Kramer, Washington State College guard, were luminaries for the winners.

Kelly Saved the Game.

Kelly turned in a flashing game at halfback and in addition to piloting the squad to victory saved his team from defeat in the last three minutes of play by intercepting an Eastern pass 10 yards from his own goal line. He leaped into the air to pluck the oval away from Flora's waiting arms. Kelly was injured on the play and taken from the game. Kramer's performance in the line was second only to that of Roebuck.

Eastern honors were upheld brilliantly by Bill Amos, Washington and Jefferson fullback, and Bill Flora, Michigan end. Amos carried the ball most of the time and outkicked his Western opponents while Flora's defensive work

Harmon Gains Victory.

By the Associated Press.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 1.—Willie Harmon, welterweight of New York, was awarded the newspaper decision over Alfred Mancimi of England, in a 10-round bout here today. Harmon weighed 147 pounds and Mancimi 146½ pounds.

Boxing Is No Longer a Job for "Stumble-Bums," Says Tunney, Champion Despite His Intelligence

Man Who Conquered Jack Dempsey and Who Uses "Whoms and Shalls" Here for Week's Theatrical Engagement.

By Jack Alexander.

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

GENE TUNNEY.

You would never suspect the Gene Tunney of civilian clothes of being a prize fighter any more than you would suspect the ordinary ham-and-egger of being a gentleman. That is because you are accustomed to think of boxers in the terms of crude persons with mangled ears, who squirt speech through the port side of their mouths as they would tobacco juice or grape fruit seeds.

You are not alone in your prejudices. The new champion of the world has aroused the ire of many a sports writer and follower of the profession. Tunney is regarded as a menace to the game. His air of confidence, his urbane manner of conduct and, most of all, his "whoms" and "shalls" and his tendency to refer to what Pliny the Younger thought about the matter, have descended upon the Old Guard like a dread pestilence. Tunney represents Change, if not Progress, and human beings usually recent Change, not discerning advancement.

Tunney Speaks of Change.

"The boxing profession is undergoing a change," said Tunney in his dressing room at Loew's State Theater, where he is filling a week's vaudeville engagement. "A great many persons resent the fact, but it is, nevertheless, true. More and more young men of education and principle are becoming boxers, and more will continue to do so. Boxing is no longer a despised profession. It is not essentially a job for 'stumble-bums,' as this writer seems to think." Tunney referred to the author of an article in a current magazine, decrying "the menace of intelligence" in prize fighting.

"Listen to this," he said, reading aloud. "'I demand ignorance and low principles in my prize fighters. It alarms me to hear them saying such words as "whom and shall" and to see them screwing in and out of libraries when they ought to be running around the reservoir.'"

"Isn't that asinine?" asked the heavyweight champion, amused at the tenor of the article. He continued:

"'You would not wish to desecrate the grandeur of the Rockies with conventional lawns and concrete satyrs drinking out of concrete bird baths in the manner of a manorial campus on Long Island.—Then, why would you clothe the fighter in a garment so unbecoming as intelligence?'"

Silly, Says Gene.

"That," commented the man who dethroned the Manassa Mauler, "is about the silliest thing I have read in some time. For no reason at all the writer denounces the use of intelligence in the ring. I can't see the basis for the criticism. The whole thing is merely an expression of the fact that the writer, whom I happen to know, likes his fighters rough and stupid.

"He loses sight of the fact that boxing is something more than an outlet for the desire to punish. To me it is a very honorable profession and the only one I have ever known. It is my life work and I have always tried my hardest to achieve perfection in it. That, after all, is what a doctor or lawyer does, isn't it? I like boxing. If I didn't I never would have had the incentive to work myself up to the championship. I don't care to leave my profession any more than a good surgeon does. The fact that I have won the belt does not mean that, having made money, I intend to quit the game and go into something else. I am a boxer by profession and intend to stick to it until I am knocked out of it.

"This writer says he has never seen me fight a good fight, in the sense that I let the other man do the leading and rely on counterattacks. 'You will state,' he says, 'that any gentleman who can keep his face more or less intact after seven years of fist fighting must be a very smart gentleman, and I agree with you. In fact, that is my complaint. I maintain that someone must do the "catching" and it is obvious that when the prize fight profession becomes saturated with intelligence there will be no "catchers," whereat my favorite sport will die of inanition.'

"I suppose he wants me to 'catch' a few thousand punches for everyone I accept now," was Tunney's comment. "But I doubt if that would satisfy him. He would probably want a million. I am no 'catcher' and don't intend to become one, if I can avoid it."

Asked if he would consider a change in his style of fighting from the defensive to the offensive type for the sake of attracting popular favor, Tunney put up vigorous denial.

"Wouldn't it be perfectly ridiculous," he asked, "for me to discard the system which I have labored for years to build up, just for the sake of popularity? If my style was good enough to tame the wildcat, lame the tiger and put the killer out of the running, can you conceive of anything more idiotic than for me to throw it aside for something that would leave me open to blows that would finish me? No, I won't change my style. I think it is pretty good, but I will make some improvements on it."

Mr. Tunney apparently does not give two hoots for the popularity that usually surges over one in his position. He impresses as one who places friendship above popular clamor, and is well aware that the same crowd which bestows the accolade today may decide tomorrow to bestow a well-planted kick.

You'd Never Suspect Gene of Being a Prize Fighter, Any More Than You'd Suspect Ham-and-Egger of Being a Gentleman.

Extremely sensible and practical—that is the impression he gives. Solid and well-proportioned, both as to physical and mental makeup, Gene Tunney has done a better job of building than most self-made men. He has the confidence of a figure of destiny and the ease of a man about town. Reared in a profession of cauliflower ears and boxtoed shoes, he has reached forth to the outside world and into the past by study. Because he was compelled to build up his own character, he is somewhat of an egotist. He naturally would be, as his own makeup is his life's work. But in company he is not self-conscious. Neither is he too forward nor too retiring. Judging from half an hour's interview, Tunney is not the stilted person rumor has painted him or his own writings have made him appear. Rather, one would pick him for a well-educated young man accustomed to the amenities of life.

To Defend Title in 1927.

In response to other questions, the champion said he would defend his title in 1927 and merely awaited definite offers from the promoters. He has not made any agreement concerning a match, either in writing or verbally, with anyone, he said. He considered it doubtful if his first appearance would be in Chicago where Jim Mullen is angling for the event.

"I will accept the best offer made me," he said. "Both Rickard and Fugazy have plans for a championship fight but I have not come to terms with either. I don't care who it is I have to meet. That is entirely up to the promoter who, after all, is the showman and knows more about that end of it. I shall fight the man he selects, whether it be Dempsey or someone else."

Tunney is being paid $7000 a week for appearing four times each day. His tour, which will take him to the Pacific coast, will last about 15 weeks. From here, the party goes to Minneapolis and from there, west. Tunney has already appeared in Youngstown, O., and in the East. His act consists of a short address and a round of sparring with his partners en tour, Frank Mucki and Happy Howard. Charley Marsh, a singer, adds variation to the turn. William McCabe, Tunney's adviser, and Louis Fank, trainer, complete the party. Tunney is the guest of Mark Eagleton, local attorney.

St. Louis - Chicago Hockey Game to Feature Silver Skates Carnival Today

14 Events on Racing Program at Grand Basin, Forest Park—Nelson and Reed, Windy City Stars, Will Compete in Events.

An intercity hockey match, with an all-star team from St Louis opposing the Chicago Athletic Club, will be the feature of the second annual Silver Skates ice carnival to be held on Grand Basin, Forest Park this afternoon, starting at 1 o'clock.

Joe Forshaw, in charge of the carnival, announced last night that the races would positively be held. "Nothing can stop us now. There is six inches of ice and even a warm day will not interfere with the holding of the carnival," he asserted following an inspection tour.

In addition to the intercity hockey match, two Windy City skating stars, Haney Nelson and Eddie Reid, representing the Mid-West A. C. will compete in the races here. Reid won the Silver Skates at Chicago last season, beating Murphy, one of the Chicagoans, who starred in the tourney here. Reid and Nelson are rated as intermediate champions.

More Than 100 Entries.

The pick of St. Louis stars will compete in the 14 events, scheduled to be decided. More than 100 skaters have filed entries for the various races, which include those for boys and girls in addition to the city championship for men and women and the open title races.

Geneva College Trims Oglethorpe

Schachern's Field Goal Gives Deciding Points—Score 9 to 7.

By the Associated Press.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 1.—Despite the enforced loss through ineligibility of Cal Hubbard, "Bo" McMillin's Geneva College eleven from Beaver Falls, Pa., today stacked a field goal on top of a touchdown to win from the Petrels of Oglethorpe University, Atlanta, Ga., 9 to 7, before a crowd of 6000.

Three other players, Flenniken, Maddox and Anderson, whose eligibility had been protested along with that of Hubbard, played leading parts in the New Year's day game here.

The gridiron conquerors of Harvard gained the field goal in the final quarter when Schachern booted successfully from Oglethorpe's 20-yard line. The Petrels had been one point in the lead, kicking the extra point following Shepherd's thrilling 33-yard run for a touchdown. The Genevans were first to score, Harris taking the ball over early in the first quarter.

CRIMSON TIDE SMASHES THROUGH CARDINAL LINE WITH 2 MINUTES TO PLAY

Bogue's Pass to Walker Gives Californians Touchdown in First Quarter — Johnson Goes Over for Southerners' Score.

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 1.—Alabama's crimson tide, the pride of Southern gridirons, battered long and without effect at the Stanford dike until within four minutes of the end of play here today, then rolled into brilliancy at a lucky break and tied Palo Alto's chances of victory into a hopeless knot with a 7-to-7 tally.

The Stanford Cardinal started the scoring in the first quarter, failed again to register, but beat off every attack launched by Alabama until Wilton attempted to punt in the dying moments of the game. The punt was blocked by Winslett and rolled back to Stanford's 14-yard line where Wilton recovered it himself but it was fourth down. Alabama took the ball, and in five bucks sent it over the goal line. Johnson scored the touchdown and Caldwell kicked goal and the score was even.

The remaining two minutes of play failed to alter the tally sheet.

Twice in two successive New Year's day appearances in the rose bowl the lads from the South have risen to real heights, last year to win from Washington, and this year to hold the mighty Cardinals bosses of the Pacific Coast Conference, to an even break.

A 40-yard gain on a pass, Hoffman to Hyland, opened the game, with Stanford carrying the ball. Stanford started its drive from its own 37-yard line. A short pass to Shipkey netted 21 yards, two Hoffman-to-Bogue reverses took the ball to Alabama's 23-yard mark. There a five-yard penalty held them up a moment, but Hoffman passed again to Shipkey and a 10-yard gain resulted.

A surprise was sprung, Bogue passing instead of Hoffman. Walker took the ball and went across the goal line. Bogue kicked goal.

The passes completed by the Cardinals were big factors in their ground gaining, one-third of their advance yardage being made through the air, but fumbles several times killed promising attacks.

In the second and third periods the two elevens battled without a single mark being hung up on the score sheet.

Gordon Holmes, the Tide's great center, who had been ill, took the field just before half time, but played only a few moments.

Alabama's offense was built principally on Winslett, who time and again deserted the line to drop back and charge the beefy Stanford row.

Punting on both sides throughout the game was poor and it was noticeable that both teams were slower than during the regular football season. The weather man was blamed, for it was a near-summer day.

Statistics showed that Stanford made 350 yards from scrimmage, Alabama 117 yards; Stanford made 12 first downs, Alabama 6.

Stanford completed 11 out of 16 forward passes for an aggregate of 133 yards. Alabama made good one pass out of seven and gained nine yards thereby.

In punting Stanford averaged 37 yards and Alabama 35. Penalties were distributed five to Stanford for setbacks of 55 yards and Alabama one for five yards.

The attendance was estimated at 60,000.

James Holland, St. L. U., Wins 16-Mile Race

Billiken Athlete Runs From Edwardsville to Granite City in Hour and 45 Minutes.

James Holland of St. Louis University yesterday won the first annual "Marathon" race held by the Granite City Athletic Club, running from Edwardsville to Granite City, a distance of 16 miles, in one hour and 46 minutes. Holland, who is 21 years old, by his victory won a trip to New York to compete in the National A. A. U. championships.

Fifteen contestants started in the race and eight finished. Jacob Graffwick of the East St. Louis Knights of Columbus finished second, a minute behind Holland. He led most of the way, but was overtaken by Holland after reaching Granite City.

Joseph Holland, younger brother of James Holland, finished third, half a minute behind Graffwick. Harold Sheedy of the Tower A. C., St. Louis, was fourth; George Stetzen of the East St. Louis K. of C., fifth; August Schmidt of St. Louis U., sixth; arl Lewis of Tower A. C., seventh, and Clement Steinmetz, Tower A. C., eighth.

Seligson Retains Junior Net Title

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 1.—Julius Seligson of New York retained the national junior indoor tennis championship today, defeating Frank Shields, New York, 7-9, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4. Shields was last year's boys' champion.

Shields set a furious pace in the first set, and apparently was unable to recover from the effort. He displayed on occasion a brand of tennis which matched or bettered the champion's, but his nervousness caused him to net repeatedly, and he had trouble in the last two sets in making his service behave.

The first two sets developed brilliant tennis, replete with clever volleying which carried nearly every game to deuce.

Johnson Signs For 21st Year.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Walter Johnson, veteran pitcher of the Washington American League club, today signed a one-year contract for his twenty-first consecutive season with the club. His salary was not disclosed.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Zach Wheat, for 17 years regular left fielder of the Brooklyn Robins, was given his unconditional release today. Outfielder Edward J. Cox was released outright to Los Angeles. Another player to be agreed on will be released to the Los Angeles club later.

Pitcher George H. Boehler has been released outright to the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League.

BASEBALL INTEREST FOR 1927 CENTERS IN NEW CAST OF PERFORMERS

O'Farrell's Task Easier Than Most of Other Seven Managers Being Tried Out

Harmony Will Be Chief Problem of More Than One Pilot; Bill Tilden and Helen Wills Anxious to Regain Lost Titles.

By Herman Wecke.

Another year of athletic achievement is under way. Champions will defend honors in many sports. Some of these, as in the past, will be successful. Others will fall by the wayside. The 1926 campaign was filled with thrills. That of 1927 promises to be the same.

There is baseball for instance. The introduction of eight new managers, five in the American and three in the National League, will command the interest of the fans. St. Louis is vitally interested. Both St. Louis clubs will have new managers. Bob O'Farrell, "one man catching staff" and the most valuable player in the National League in 1926, will handle the world's champion Cardinals instead of Rogers Hornsby, traded to New York. Dan Howley has replaced George Sisler as manager of the Browns.

Other new managers will be: Ray Schalk, White Sox; Jack McCallister, Indians; Bill Carrigan, Red Sox, and George Moriarty, Tigers, in the American; and Owen Bush, Pirates, and Stuffy McInnis, Phillies, in the Heydler organization.

O'Farrell's Problem.

Five of the eight men are certain to have their hands full. O'Farrell takes hold of a world's champion. He has a good club. The loss of Hornsby is offset by the addition of Frank Frisch, a fine second baseman and batter. O'Farrell is well liked by the members of the Cardinals. He will be serving in the managerial capacity for the first time. What O'Farrell must get more than anything else to be a success will be the co-operation of the players on the Cardinal club. If he gets that, then the Cardinals will probably again be favored to win the National League pennant. The team has plenty of young blood.

The greatest need is an experienced catcher. O'Farrell with the added duties of manager cannot hope to go through another season like that of 1926, when he worked in 147 games during the regular campaign and then finished by catching every inning in the world's series.

Must Supply Harmony.

Owen Bush, former star shortstop of the Tigers, was willed a good baseball club at Pittsburg, where he succeeds Bill McKechnie, now first assistant to O'Farrell with the Cardinals. Bush has a great pitching staff, a fine infield, good outfield and catching. If Bush can instill harmony then the Pirates will be dangerous contenders for 1927.

The other new manager who has a fairly easy task will be Jack McCallister at Cleveland. He takes over a club that finished second to the Yankees in 1926; a club with two of the best young pitching prospects in the majors in Levsen and Miller. His chief trouble will be to fill Tris Speaker's shoes. And men, that's no easy task.

Pitchers Wanted.

With the other five its different. For instance there is Howley of the Browns. The Browns need pitching and need it badly. The outfield can stand strengthening. Trades are on the fire, but none has been made. Maybe there will be changes before the season opens.

With the other five its different. For instance there is Howley of the Browns. The Browns need pitching and need it badly. The outfield can stand strengthening. Trades are on the fire, but none has been made. Maybe there will be changes before the season opens.

At Chicago, Schalk will have to fill the shoes made vacant by the release of Eddie Collins. Collins, known as one of the "greatest money players" in the game was a great second sacker. It will be a hard place to fill. The Sox have a fine pitching staff, but unless the gaps in the infield—at second and short are filled—then Schalk's task will be a tough one.

George Moriarty has no easy one at Detroit. He takes over a club with three of the hardest hitting outfields in baseball. But he has a gap at third base, a position at which the Tigers have been weak ever since Moriarty quit the majors as a player. And then the new Tiger leader must get more out of the pitchers than Cobb was able to do. Maybe he will succeed.

No Bed of Roses Here.

Bill Carrigan, a successful leader 10 years ago, will attempt what others have failed to accomplish, turn a "comeback." He signed a two-year contract with the Red Sox. He will find a far different team than the one he chaperoned when he retired. If anything, the Boston Americans today are the worst club in the majors. If Carrigan succeeds, he will prove a real "miracle man."

Then there's Stuffy McInnis. The Phillies have not amounted to much in recent years. No noteworthy additions have been made. So it's a big task that faces the former Athletic first basing star.

In addition to the interest in the work of the new managers during the season, fans will be interested in young players. They will be looking for stars to succeed Cobb and Speaker; players to take their places alongside Babe Ruth, today the outstanding figure in the major leagues.

But baseball will not be the only interesting sport during the year. Two champions, dethroned during 1926, have already started "come back" campaigns. They are Bill Tilden, national singles' tennis champion for six successive years, and Helen Wills, queen of the courts, who was forced by illness to remain out of the women's title tourney, thereby relinquishing her honors to Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory. Their campaigns will be watched with interest.

Gene's Program Is Vague.

Then there is the heavyweight situation. Gene Tunney may or may not defend his championship. He may be selected to face one of the numerous contenders now appearing in eliminations. Outstanding among these at the present time are Jimmy Maloney and Jack Sharkey, although Jack Delaney, lightheavyweight title holder, also may get into the picture.

In golf, Bobby Jones will defend his national open, but it is not likely that he will go to England to defend his British open. Jess Sweetser is not expected to return abroad to defend the British amateur. George Von Elm will try to make it two straight in the United States amateur and Walter Hagen will again be on hand in the professional tourney. In the women's division, Miss Glenna Collett, now dethroned, will try a "comeback" and regain the laurels held by Mrs. Stetson. The work of Maureen Orcutt and Dorothy Page, two young stars, will be watched with great interest.

Locke Enlists Interest.

There will be more than passing interest in track and field sports. United States officials will be keeping their eyes glued for possible Olympic team prospects for 1928. Great interest will be centered in the performances of Roland Locke, the Nebraska flyer, present holder of the world's 220-yard dash record. It is expected that Locke will be given a chance to show his wares in the East during the campaign. Another whose work will be watched will be Borah, national sprints champion at the present time. There will be the usual major competitions during the campaign.

Football will again get its share of the play despite the passing of such combinations as Missouri and Washington and Princeton and Harvard.

Racing also faces a promising year. A truly remarkable list of three-year-olds, including Chance Shot, Scapa Flow, Osmand, Valorous, General Lee, Rip Rap, Fair Star and Candy Queen are in the field to strive for honors gained in 1926 by Crusader.

LONDOS AND TAYLOR TO MEET WEDNESDAY ON MAT AT COLISEUM

Jimmy Londos, Greek heavyweight wrestler, returns to St. Louis this week to match grips with Jack Taylor, heavyweight champion of Canada, in a finish match, the main event of a professional mat program Wednesday night at the Coliseum. The match will afford Londos his first opportunity to avenge a defeat he suffered in a contest with Taylor at Seattle, Wash., six years ago.

Taylor is trying to land a match in this city with Joe Stecher, the heavyweight titleholder. Londos also hopes to land a finish match with Stecher in this city in the near future.

The semifinal attraction of Wednesday night's program will feature Paul Jones of Los Angeles, and John Maxos, a rangy Greek heavyweight, in a one-fall trial match. Jones defeated Roy Steele of Seattle recently. Maxos won over Jack Roller and Herman Webber in previous local tryouts.

WYNDHAM MONROE TO OPEN GOLF SCHOOL

Wyndham Monroe, golf professional at the Midland Valley Country Club, announced last night that he would open a new indoor golf school Tuesday at the Famous-Barr department store. The school will be on the sixth floor in the sporting goods department.

Monroe is an excellent teacher, having worked with some of the best known instructors in the game. He formerly was connected with the Chester Horton indoor school in Chicago.

When necessary Monroe will engage Homer Herpel, professional at the new Osage Hills club, as his assistant.

Blades Hopeful, Now That He Has Lost External Semi-Lunar Fibro-Cartilage

Cardinal Outfielder Improving Daily After Operation—Injured When Spikes Caught in Wire Screen August 17.

By J. Roy Stockton.

RAY BLADES has lost the external semilunar fibro-cartilage from his left knee joint, but he hopes that he will be compensated for the loss by a return to a position as one of the best outfielders in the major leagues.

DISSECTION OF KNEE-JOINT FROM THE FRONT

Ray was chasing a fly ball from the bat of Gus Felix of the Dodgers at Sportsman's Park, Aug. 17, when he went too near to the left field wall. Blades during his baseball career had come out of many encounters with concrete and wooden walls, but the outfield walls at Sportsman's Park had been covered with a screen of chicken wire, stretched in the hope that it would protect the outfielders. The spikes of Blades' left shoe caught in the mesh and the leg was twisted. Something had to break and the wire screen held fast. But not Blades' leg. The leg twisted and the external semilunar fibro-cartilage, a pad on which the femur rests, was torn. Blades didn't didn't know he had a fibro-cartilage and it certainly was news to him that he had an external semilunar one. But he did know that there was considerable pain in the knee joint and that his old prop had become unfit for duty. He slumped to the ground and didn't play another game all year.

A Bench Rider.

Examination showed there was no fracture, but that the cartilage had been torn. Perhaps a rest would heal it. Blades rested. A few weeks later he was batting in practice before a game in Boston. He swung at a ball and missed and slumped to the ground. He could not get up and comrades had to carry him to the dugout.

The pennant race was drawing to a close and a world series was approaching, and Blades tried rest and he tried injections of serums recommended by an Eastern surgeon. But nothing helped the knee and even the long rest of the winter, following the series, was not restoring the knee to efficiency.

Blades journeyed to St. Louis and the club surgeon told him his only hope was an operation which might remake him into a great outfielder and which then again might not. Blades took the chance. The knee joint was laid open and the external semilunar fibro-cartilage, torn and doubled back, was removed, as shown in the accompanying drawing.

The surgeon who performed the operation said he had performed many such operations on men in other walks of life, but that he had never performed one on an athlete before.

Has a Fine Chance.

"I believe Blades has a fine chance to regain his strength and return to full duty," the surgeon said. "He is recuperating rapidly and is stronger every day. Of course, the real test will be when he returns to the baseball field."

Baseball players usually see the end of their diamond careers when they develop knee trouble. Heine Groh was still a good hitter and fielder when his trick knee forced him out of the majors. Joe Dugan's value is impaired by a knee that fails him frequently. Travis Jackson of the Giants occasionally takes a long vacation after straining a weak leg.

The lower limb of man, of which the knee joint is a rather important part, is primarily required for purposes of support and locomotion. The one function requires stability accompanied by rigidity, whereas in locomotion, especially on the ball field, the big thing is regulated and controlled mobility. In other words one relies a great deal on the knee joint for support when one stands at the plate waiting for a fast one or a curve, but one must shake the dogs with great celerty when one propels a baseball into the field or when one chases a festive ball, to turn it into a putout.

The Team Needs Him.

Cardinal fans, who can forget their regret over the loss of Rogers Hornsby, are hoping that the great surgeon has repaired Blades so he can return to duty fit for battle. For Blades, when he is fit, is as good an outfielder as there is in the game. He concedes nothing, tries for every fly, regardless of concrete walls and is a dangerous man at the plate. It will be a great blow to the Cardinals' chances if Blades is not able to take his regular position in left field.

It means a great deal to the Cardinals and a great deal to Blades. He is under contract for 1927, but if he is unfit for duty he will soon be on his way. There is no sentiment in baseball and Ray will soon be on his way if he can't field and hit, even if he was injured in line of duty, making a play that a more cautious fielder would have played safe.

THE HUNTING - - CALL - - By ALEC MERMOD

THE shooting season of 1926 is now only a memory. To many of us, the memory is not a very pleasant one, and we will do well to forget it. But we do want to remember why the upland shooting was so poor and take steps this coming year to prevent a repetition of conditions in 1926.

I have been shooting quail for 50 years and have never experienced such a bad season.

One thing is as certain as "death and taxes," and that is, if we want birds we will have to do something to keep them. We must leave more food or they will all leave us by another year.

From the fact there were very few birds in some localities and quite plentiful in others, we are inclined to believe that some of our quail traveled as far as 100 miles in search of better food and water. Four years ago, on the opening day, in Franklin County, with our fair dog we found 15 covies of birds, and on the following week found eight new covies, making a total of 23 covies in a territory that could be covered in a day.

Shooters Not to Blame.

The following year several farms were abandoned, and on these premises we found no birds, and that season we only located 12 covies, last year the same territory netted only eight and this season just passed only four bunches of birds were located.

Do we hear some one say, "No wonder the birds are getting scarce, they have been killed off by the shooters," but this is not the case, for my first trip was made in 1916 and each season afterwards have shot over the same ground six or seven times, and in 1923 we found more birds than ever before, and killed fewer than in former years.

The whole cause, in this section, is lack of food.

Game Refuge Bill.

A certain gentleman resents the criticism made by our Game Commissioner, Keith McCanse of the so-called "Game Refuge Bill" and this gentleman wishes to know what part of this bill is insidious, adding further that the bill has the backing of the Audubon Society and other conservationists.

The writer has not read Mr. McCanse's criticism, so we do not know just which clause Mr. McCanse considers insidious.

We expressed our views in the Hunting Call of Aug. 22, concerning this bill, and while, in our opinion, there are several bad features, the one that stands out particularly is the idea of combining a refuge with a public shooting grounds. "It can't be done."

If we are going to establish game refuges let them be real sanctuaries, where the birds will not be disturbed at any time. To attempt to open these so-called refuges to the shooting public is a joke. I believe that the intentions of the members of the Audubon Society are honest, but if they are backing this bill they certainly have failed to give it an intelligent "once over." The other so-called conservationists mentioned certainly must have "an ax to grind."

Suggests Rewriting.

We have before us a letter from the chairman of Missouri State Conservation Committee, also a copy of a proposed bill to be presented at the next Legislative session.

The intent of this bill is to remove the Game and Fish Department from political control, and we believe the thought is well taken, but so far I have not fully digested the entire contents, for like all bills of this kind, insurance policies, etc., the technical legal wording often hides a joker which the ordinary layman fails to locate. We suggest that this committee, which no doubt is familiar with the full intent of this bill rewrite, for publication, cutting out all legal phrases, and state, plainly just what this bill proposes, so that we who are not lawyers will be able to grasp the big idea.

In glancing over what we have written it may seem that we are hinting that the committee may be trying to "put one over," but that's not the idea, we simply want the matter predigested, as it were, so that all of us can understand fully the intent of the proposed bill. We have no chip on our shoulder, and if the bill is good, we're for it.

Lease 4000 Acres.

Another move towards game conservation and propagation is being made by The Western Cartridge Co., who have leased 4000 "American Wild Fowling" gives us acres of land in Mississippi where they propose to raise various game birds under the most advantageous conditions, particular attention will be given to the propogation of quail. Vermin of all kinds will be exterminated as far as possible, and the birds will not be disturbed while hatching, so that instead of less than 30 per cent of young birds reaching maturity the ratio should reach 75 per cent. Abundant feed will be left for winter, in the shape of small grain planted throughout the tract which will not be harvested.

If all of our ammunition companies will follow this lead an immense amount of good will be accomplished, and in the long run the ammunition companies will profit by the outlay and trouble. Unless something is done along the lines of propagation there will not be much use for loaded shells in a few years.

Balance Is Upset.

Our various State and Federal laws as they stand today are giving fair game protection against the hunter, but no attention is given to protection against natural enemies or against nature itself. As we have said before, civilization has upset the balance and very little thought is given towards restoring this balance.

Evolution of Shotgun.

The original shotgun barrel was a true cylinder and the killing range was limited, so various devices were brought out from time to time to increase the killing range by holding the pellets closer together, none of these proved very satisfactory, so gunmakers began to experiment by different methods of boring, which finally developed our modern choke bore.

As far back as 1781 a boring device was used by a French gunsmith, who claimed that barrels bored by him were far superior to any other, inasmuch as the load of shot was concentrated to a large extent.

An English gunsmith advertised in a London paper of May 7, 1789, stating that for 2 guineas he would rebore any gun in such a manner that it would kill a pigeon at 90 yards.

The invention of choke boring has been claimed by many, but it is generally conceded to an American gunsmith by the name of Roper, who was granted a patent April 10, 1866. Roper was only six weeks ahead of Pape, an English gunmaker.

Roper's invention consisted of a removable muzzle, but was adapted only to single-barrel guns, and this method did not prove popular.

J. W. Long, in his book on quite a bit of information on early choke bores and is credited with being authority on the subject.

Space does not permit describing the various methods of choke boring, so we will only mention the two methods used by modern gunmakers—one the recess or "jug" choke and the other the taper choke. Using either method, barrels are made slightly smaller in bore than the cartridges they are intended for; then a boring tool is used which rebores the barrel to proper size to about three inches from the muzzle. If the recess choke is used, then an expanding bit is used which bores out the metal to the intended size up to about an inch from the muzzle. It is rather difficult to describe this without an illustration, but imagine the inside of a 12-gauge gun barrel being bored true to size up to about three inches from the muzzle, then imagine a slight hump of about one-quarter of an inch, making the barrel at this point about 13-gauge, then a space of about two inches, when the barrel is again true to size, then an inch where the bore is 13-gauge.

This method seems to be the popular one in general use today.

Law Pinch Hits For Speaker in Scandal Case

Tris, Friends Say, Is No Longer the Man, Baseball Fans Knew.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Jan. 1.—A gray-haired ball player and a pink-skinned youngster met on a train Cleevland-bound from Detroit. One was Tristram Speaker, the dynamic manager who pulled Cleveland into second place in the American League last season only to follow the feat by the sudden announcement that he had played his last majo- league game. The other was the New Year, holding the fate of Speaker, of Ty Cobb, of Smokey Joe Wood, and, some said, baseball itself.

Speaker, accused of having figured in the throwing of a game so that a sure thing bet might be cashed by at least two other major league players in 1919, left his fight for exoneration in the hands of his lawyer.

Would Not Know Him.

But, win or lose in the fight for vindication, Tris today is a Speaker no American League fan today woud know. The wings of the "Gray Eagle" have been clipped. Lines, like those that mark the fouls in the diamond he graced for nearly a score of years, mark his face. Tris is older.

Courage shines from the sharp eyes that for years traced fly balls against the summer skies; but the fires burned low.

But Spoke today is not the Speaker who challenged umpires in decisions he thought were wrong, who threw his every energy into every minute of play, who led a team that "didn't have a chance" into the runner-up position in the 1926 American League race.

Some of his friends say with unconcealed bitterness that the crookedness charges of Dutch Leonard, former teammate of Speaker in Boston and former pitcher for the Detroit Tigers, have broken the man generally regarded as, next to Cobb, baseball's greatest ball player.

Fights by "Proxy."

Speaker fights for his baseball honor for the first time by proxy.

The law pinch hits for Speaker; Speaker, who on the diamond always was sufficient unto himself to walk to the plate in the crisis and take his chance on hitting safely. Out of the lineup, Speaker sends William H. Boyd, Cleveland attorney, to bat for him in the greatest pinch he ever has had to face.

But as Speakers' train pulled out of the city council expressed "its utmost confidence in the honesty and integrity of Tyrus Cobb and Tris Speaker."

Idea Worth Trying.

A. E. Jankowsky, Detroit member of the A. B. C. executive committee, and secretary of the Detroit Bowling Association, asserts that his organization recently adopted an idea which is worth trying out in this city. It has to do with the awarding of annual city tourneys. Each captain is given a ballot, which he turns in with his entry, specifying the alleys he prefers for the next rolling. These ballots are opened at the next annual meeting. In this way, the tournaments go to the drives, which the bowlers themselves really prefer.

HIGH SCHOOL BASKET SEASON TO OPEN WITH TWO GAMES SATURDAY

The 1927 basketball season of the Public High School League opens next Saturday night when Central and Roosevelt meet and Cleveland faces Soldan. Beaumont High School is idle, having drawn the bye, and will open a week later.

Pre-season showing of the teams indicate that the Roosevelt and Beaumont quintets are most likely to fight it out for this year's title with Soldan making a strong bid for third place. Central High has been handicapped through the lack of a suitable practice court, the old Yeatman Gym where the Central students are temporarily quartered, being much too small for extensive workouts. Coach Callan has obtained the Holy Name Hall but this court will not be available until early this we As a result, Central's strength h not been tested except for practice game with McBride Hi School from which Callan's te emerged the loser by the marg of a few points.

Coach Harry White's squad a Soldan High has been showi rapid improvement and the Brown and Gold team's record so far five victories and two defeats better than was hoped for. Cleveland High has also been perform ing in good style so that clo competition seems likely in th year's race.

WELLSTONS AND BEN MILLERS WIN IN SOCCER LEAGUE GAMES

LEADERS DOWN WHITE BANNERS BY FIVE GOALS

Penalty Kick Enables Foley's Men to Down Raticans—2 League Matches Scheduled for Today.

By Dent McSkimming

The sins of their predecessors are weighing heavily on the Wellston football club. Just because the St. Louis Soccer League matches played at the dilapidated, dirty High School Field last season were extremely unattractive to spectators, the attendance this season has fallen off. The thousands who are staying away from the weekly double-headers at the new Sportsman's Park are missing some of the cleverest football of years. The Wellstons, most attractive and most skillful of the four teams, are deserving of a large following, but instead of playing before packed stands, they are wasting their excellent exhibitions before empty seats.

Yesterday, this team of youngsters, who handle the ball with the cool precision of veterans, outgamed the sturdy White Banner team and scored an overwhelming 5 to 0 triumph. In thus shooting holes, great yawning holes, through the Banner defense, the Wellstons combined in some of the most spectacular passing movements that we have seen in a St. Louis team in years. The old-time fan who has not attended recently may be surprised to note that Allie Schwarz was at center forward for the Blue boys yesterday instead of George Corrigan. Schwarz was the center forward of the Scullin team when that club won the national championship, a fact which may seem to indicate that he is cheating the Old Men's Home when he goes out to play a game of football. However, the accurate passing style of play which the Wellston team employs, is just Schwarz's dish and he not alone fits in perfectly, but he dominated the attack, distributed the play in very intelligent fashion, scored two goals, was directly responsible for another by Jack O'Reilly and another by Eddie Hart. A full afternoon, surely. The 1400 who were present appeared to enjoy the performance.

Wellstons Play Millers.

This afternoon the Wellstons will oppose the Ben Millers in the second game of a league double-header at the same field. The Millers yesterday showed something of team cohesion in overcoming the greatly improved Raticans, 2 goals to 1, aided by a penalty kick. Thus, the Millers and the Wellstons were the best teams on the field, and if the latter club is to meet with any interruption in its march to the local championship, it will probably come from the Ben Millers.

There was another very interesting and optimistic note sounded yesterday in the game that Harry Ratican exhibited. He went at his task more in the manner of the Ratican of 10 years ago. Had his club been more fortunate in the matter of reserve strength, the score might have been different. Anderson, substituting for Menke at fullback, and Reid, who played halfback when Al McHenry withdrew from the game, were quite helpless. Anderson's futile efforts to body-check Curran, the Ben Miller outside right, were responsible for both Miller goals. Reid's game in the second half was too weak for words. The Ratican team, therefore, did rather well, with only nine first-class men on the field.

As in every recent game the Wellstons have played, Bill Lehman, the center halfback, was a very wall before which the opposing forwards spent their strength without gaining ground. Always, Lehman found time to assist his forwards, and so expert was he in taking and returning a pass that he served as a sixth forward. The Wellstons played as a unit, so much so, in fact, that it would be difficult to single out the star performers. Joe Hennessey substituted in goal for Leo Diel when the latter turned up with a bad leg and his work was so well done that the White Banners might have mistaken him for the regular guardian of the net.

Schurwan Plays Well.

Schurwan returned to the halfback line and showed a desire to keep his passes along the ground, a trait which he did not have before his removal from the lineup because of an injury several weeks ago. From this position as spectator he must have absorbed some of the accurate passing zeal which has transformed the whole team.

It must be assumed the White Banners did not put up much of a game in getting beat, 5 to 0. This is not entirely true. There were periods when Harry McCarthy's team played very nearly perfect soccer. It seemed the forwards did not take enough shots, considering the slippery condition of the frozen field, a situation which made the work of the goal tender especially difficult. LaBarge, in goal for the Banners, spent half the time slipping and sliding, diving on his stomach into the goal corners and otherwise trying to keep his equilibrium while the Wellston forwards took pains to knock him off his legs every time he stood upright.

Jimmy Dunn will be at center forward for the Millers today and Benny Nash, who played about 10 minutes yesterday, will try a comeback. He has not played since he underwent an appendicitis operation last summer.

TOMMY THEVENOW

THE Post-Dispatch presents herewith the fourth of a series of 10 articles by John J. McGraw, in which the manager of the New York Giants describes what he considers the "Ten Great Plays of the World Series." McGraw is recognized as one of the great strategists of baseball and in this series he tells of the plays which figured most prominently in the Cardinals' victory over the Yankees in the play for the 1926 baseball championship of the world.

MUCH has been written of the brilliant work of Thevenow, the young Cardinal shortstop, in the big series, but for some reason the one great play of his that stands head and shoulders above all appears to have been overlooked.

This can be accounted for in the lack of its importance in the result of the sixth game which was a one-sided victory for the Cardinals. It is certain that the experts noticed it. I could hear them comment all about me when it happened.

I wish the younger ballplayers would pay particular attention to this one. It may mean much to them in the future. It is a valuable lesson in judgment as well as execution. It shows above all that Thevenow is a really great ballplayer; that he is a thinker as well as a marvelous infielder.

Checked a Rally.

In the seventh inning of that game it looked as if the Yanks had started a rally. They did score one run, but it was discounted by the five the Cardinals had previously made in the same inning.

The Yanks after scoring the one run, had runners on second and third with two out and Babe Ruth at the bat. A home run here might have put the Yankees right back into the game again. Most everybody thought that Alexander would not pitch to Ruth. But he did.

Ruth met the ball squarely and it shot toward second base for all the world like a clean hit. The ball was bounding through on Hornsby's side of the bag, but it was impossible for him to reach it. Just as the crowd rose to its feet and started a big whoop Thevenow was seen to dart all the way across to the right side of the bag, scoop the ball up cleanly and with a snap throw get Ruth at first and end the inning. He picked up the ball just in front of where the umpire stood, a seemingly impossible play.

Good Judgment.

That play would have been impossible but for Thevenow having decided in advance just about where Ruth would hit the ball if Alexander could make him keep it on the ground. It worked out exactly as he had planned. Both his execution and his judgment were correct.

In the earlier games the Cardinal infield had noticed that whenever Ruth hit the ball on the ground that it always was on the right side of second base, usually nearer first. For that reason Hornsby played well over toward first base to help Bottomley close up the gap.

Thevenow did not disclose his intention until the very last minute. Just as Alexander wound up he moved over to within five feet of second and well back of it. If the fans had noticed this movement they would not have been so surprised to see him leap across the bag and come up with the ball that had started for a sure hit.

Thevenow made many other brilliant plays, but that one is an example of perfection in judgment and execution. It should be put down as one of the really great plays of the series.

BACKFIELD SCORED 540 POINTS IN 1926

KINGSPORT, Tenn., Jan. 1. — Here's the world's greatest scoring backfield. It's the "Pony Express" of Kingsport High School. It has a record of 540 points scored against six opponents.

All four of the backs are fleet-footed and elusive. They also can pass and punt, making a real triple-threat quartet. Hug and Dodd stood out a bit above the others as they are crack drop-kickers, too.

Kingsport started the 1926 campaign with a victory over Norton High. The count (as near as could be ascertained) was 193-0. The chap who scored the game was talking figures for weeks after, according to some of his closest friends.

Kingsport has averaged 90 points per game, or a point and a half a minute.

Preliminary Work On High School Stadium Started

New Field Expected to Be Ready for Use by Teams Sept. 1.

Two moves of the present Board of Education, headed by Stephen M. Wagner, during 1926 should mark the beginning of a new era in public high school athletics. A resolution of the Board last July authorized the construction of a concrete stadium as designed by R. M. Milligan, Commissioner of School Buildings, and to complete this forward move, President Wagner proposed the abrogation of the ruling limiting the athletic activity of the schools to local and county games. Wagner's suggestion eventually resulted in the revision of the rule in the board meeting of Dec. 14 so that championship teams of the several sports are now permitted to leave St. Louis or invite teams of other cities here. Intersectional games will be thoroughly practical in football with the completion of the new stadium promised for September 1.

Preliminary grading of the stadium site has already been started at Kingshighway boulevard and Norwood avenue. Actual work on the structure itself awaits more favorable weather. The stands, horse shoe in shape, will be of concrete and will seat 15,000. Provision has been made for temporary seats which will increase the capacity by 10,000, while the plan is such as to permit future extensions of a permanent character. The athletic field is arranged so as to contain a football field, soccer field, baseball diamond, and a quarter mile running track. The stadium, complete, will cost about $400,000.

Change of Pace Has Won Many a Tennis Match, Declares Helen Wills

Well Thought Out and Rightly Placed, Generally, It Annoys Opponent or Shakes His Confidence; Variety Adds to Interest of Match.

By Helen Wills.

Variety holds its place in the game of tennis. It is necessary to successful play. Variety in stroke, in placement, in strategy, and in speed is to be found in the games of the best players. In the last named, variety in speed, we have a very interesting problem.

It is interesting because its possibilities are so great. The player can use his knowledge of it in so many places, and to so great advantage. It is important to him not only because of its purely mechanical aspects, but also because of its psychological meaning.

Often an onlooker at a tennis tournament sees a match where both players keep up the same speed of play throughout the game. The score goes up and down, and finally the winner wins, as it were. The play has been monotonous, too regular. It has lacked the variety in speed which gives life and interest.

When Matches Are Dull.

There are certain players in the world of tennis who lack the feeling for variety, and when two such players meet, an uninteresting match usually results. The play seems to "keep time" to the speed that the two opponents have chosen. Variety is lacking.

There are, too, other players for whom only one speed throughout a match is impossible. One ball is swift, another soft, the next one of a different speed. These are usually the most interesting players, the ones in whom genius lurks or has already appeared. I choose William Tilden so frequently as an illustration because his game holds practically all that one may seek under the name of good tennis. His knowledge of the change of pace, and understanding of the wonders which variation in speed can accomplish is remarkable. With this in mind, a player, as an onlooker, watching closely, can learn a tremendous lot from Tilden's play.

Player Loses Pace.

As was said earlier in the article, there are advantages to be gained in a purely mechanical sense from change of pace, and the first of two players engaged in a match who thinks of it is usually the one who profits. Say, for example, that the ball has been going back over the net for several rallies at a good pace, and then one of the players sends over a ball of a much slower speed. His opponent is very likely to misjudge the ball and his timing may not be quite right. An error or a poor return may follow. To the reader, this may seem a trifle overdrawn, that so simple a thing as a change of speed could cause a player to miss his shot. But it frequently happens, and often among the best players. Sometimes the player is thrown off for not only one shot, but for several games.

Change of pace has, as well, a psychological meaning in tennis, and has value in this respect, too. Clever and understanding use of change of pace on the part of a player can sometimes serve to throw his adversary off his game for a time, or even for a whole match. The adversary may make a mistake, because of some change of speed of the ball, which is really quite excusable, but which, in his own mind, may seem foolish, and hopeless. He may become inwardly annoyed, or his confidence may become shaken, especially if the point comes at a crucial place in the match when his nerves are under strain. The tennis player entirely without any nerves is a rare creature. Well thought out and timely change of pace has won many a match.

Norman Brookes, the great Australian player, was considered, in his day, to be a past master where speed and variation were concerned. It is said that he always made a thinking opponent think harder, and an unthinking one fly up in the air completely, by his own marvelous understanding of the values of the change of pace.

Newcomer Beats Jean Borotra in French Tourney

Landry Downs Davis Cup Star in Semifinal Round, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 1.—Jean Borotra, French tennis ace, today was eliminated in the semifinals of the French covered court championship, 6—2, 4—6, 6—4, by Pierre Landry, young newcomer in the French tennis constellation. Landry's victory was the biggest upset in French tennis for a long time.

Borotra shared with Rene Lacoste and Henri Cochet first place in the French tennis rankings just made public by the French Tennis Federation. Landry, who is only 21, was rated in a tie with Jean Emile Couiteas for fifth place. He was ranked fifteenth in 1925.

The young star has not only prevented Borotra from meeting Lacoste in the finals tomorrow, but has brought himself into strong relief in the French tennis world. Borotra, it is said, was not in his finest form, as he landed from an airplane from Milan at noon, had his lunch and then went to the courts.

Bass Wins Over Chapman on Foul

Boston Boxer Is Disqualified in First Round of Feather Match.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Red Chapman of Boston was disqualified for fouling Benny Bass of Philadelphia in the first round of a 10-round featherweight match at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Frankie Fink of Texas bored his way to a draw with Bob Servain of France in the first 10-round preliminary. Servain scored the only knockdown of the bout in the fifth round, but Fink balanced the score by clever boxing in the latter sessions. Fink weighed 136 pounds, three more than his foe.

The sudden ending of the bout, the survivor of which had been promised a match with Honey Boy Finnegan of Boston for recognition as world's featherweight champion, stunned a crowd of 10,000 spectators. Only a half-dozen blows had been struck when Bass careened to the canvas under a sweeping right-hand blow to the body.

Doubled up in apparent agony, Bass refused to rise, and was assisted to his corner by Referee Johnny McAvoy, who awarded the verdict to the Philadelphian.

The fans filed out amid boos and hisses. Many believed Bass had not been struck low, but Benny's seconds spent several minutes working over him before he was able to go to his dressing room.

Bass weighed 126, Chapman 125½.

Paolino Stops Marty O'Grady

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Jan. 1.—Paolino Uzcudum, Spanish heavyweight champion, knocked out Marty O'Grady of California in the first round this afternoon. They fought in Alendarez Park.

The knockout came after a minute of fierce mixing. O'Grady was warned against hitting in the clinches only a few seconds before the knockout blow, a right to the jaw, which brought O'Grady to his knees. He doubled up and then rolled to the floor face downward.

BROADWAY JONES GAINS EASY VICTORY IN NEW YEAR'S HANDICAP

GEORGE DEMAR SECOND, WITH FIRE ON NEXT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 1.—The green and white silks of E. R. Bradley, vice president of the Louisiana Jockey Club, were conspicuous in the opening races at Fairgrounds this afternoon. His Broadway Jones won the New Year's Handicap, the principal feature, worth $5530 to the winner. Broadway Jones' success, followed a victory for Bradley's Bag Stock Joe in the Loyola purse, and Beneficient annexed the Winter Garden purse. A capacity crowd witnessed the running of the races.

Broadway Jones raced to victory over the mile and a sixteenth course without great effort. G. Johnson got him to the front at the final turn and was required to apply the whip but once. This application of the lash came in the final sixteenth of a mile where George Demar menaced. The latter, however, fell far short of overtaking the winner and the finish found him second, a mere neck in advance of Fire On. Old Slip finished in the fourth place with Navigator and Sir Peter, early forward ones, far back.

Vespian Gains Victory.

Thirteen tried for honors in the feature with the winner an odds on choice. He carried top weight and covered the distance in 1:47 1-5, a good effort, considering the muddy condition of the track.

Vespian was winner in the Col. R. W. Simmons purse at six furlongs and the supplementary feature. He overhauled Genuine in the final drive to win by a half length, while Arcady was third. Vespasian was another odds on favorite.

Bag Stock Joe's victory upset the many admirers of Scotland, an overwhelming choice, as the Bradley representative raced past the tiring and bearing out favorite in the last 50 yards to win by a length. Scotland saved second and Justice F. finished in front of the others.

The first race of the afternoon brought the 2-year-olds into competition and the babies performed to trials as Sport Halahan, the less than even money choice, triumped in a handy way over Roan Jack with Aromatic third.

MARY BLUE WINNER IN ALL-AGE STAKE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 1.—Dr. George Blue of Montgomery, Ala., took the lion's share of the honors in the all-age stake of the Cotton States bird dog trails, decided here yesterday. His good pointer, Mary Blue, was the winner of first, while Oklahoma City Jack, another pointer belonging to him, took second. The third dog was Edward's Free Lance, a setter, owned by M. R. Nesmith of Hazelhurst, Miss.

Mary Blue easily stood out above the field. Both of her races produced birds and in the matter of speed and range not one of the contestants approached her. Her performance here was easily the best of her career and she has been competing in field trials for more than two years.

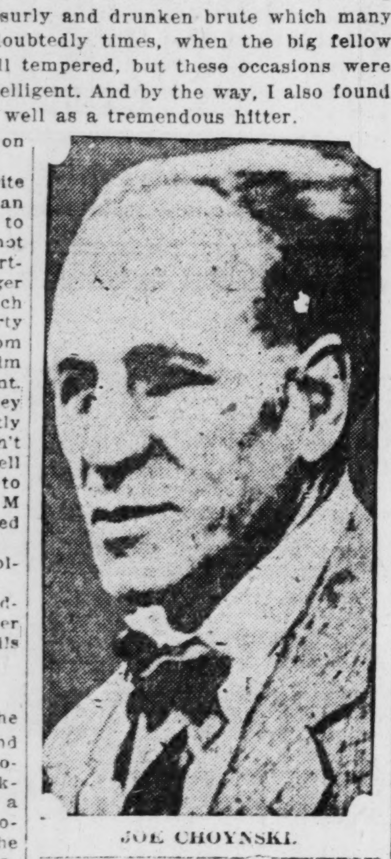
Choynski Was Rated Too Tough for Maher After Stopping Woods

Scotch Heavy Floored Joe in First and Did Not Go Down to Stay Until 34th Round—Tells of Meeting Samoan King.

CHAPTER X.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN and I were together most of the time on our voyage home from Australia. He was an affable and interesting companion—not at all the surly and drunken brute which many picture him. There were undoubtedly times, when the big fellow was in his cups, that he was ill tempered, but these occasions were rare. I found Sullivan very intelligent. And by the way, I also found that he was a skillful boxer as well as a tremendous hitter.



JOE CHOYNSKI.

Foley was unable to read or write although a successful business man in Sydney. Some one offered to bet him a "quid" he could not learn to write his name in a fortnight. Foley accepted the wager and hired Jim Fogarty to teach him to write his name. Fogarty rehearsed Foley on the name "Tom Baker" by carefully showing him how to draw the letters as in print.

When two weeks were up Foley met Corbett and triumphantly sneered: "Ha yer thought I couldn't do it, did yer? I'll bloody well show yer," and he proceeded to print the letetrs "T - O - M B-A-K-E-R" before the astonished crowd.

The derisive laughter that followed his effort amazed Foley.

"What's the matter," he demanded. "Why yer cawn't write yer name," he was told. "that spells Tom Baker."

Meets Samoan King.

FOLEY made a dash out of the place and hunted until he found Fogarty in another pub. He proceeded to denounce the "jawbreaker" for a fraud and demanded a return of his money. But Fogarty, unsmilingly, insisted that the name Foley had scrawled was Foley's own. Larry then ran back to his own place angrier than ever and offered to lick the whole crowd unless the wager were paid over at once. It required several hours to straighten him out on the puzzle and he did not speak to Fogarty for months after.

When we arrived at the Samoan Islands King Mateefa, who had learned that we American fighters were on the ship, sent us an invitation to visit him. The King was a magnificent physical specimen, 6 feet 4 inches tall, weighing 300 pounds and a perfectly proportioned athlete. Mateefa was a university trained man, and spoke English perfectly. As he shook hands with Sullivan he remarked, with a laugh, "Why, you are not such a big man; I would not be a raid to fight you myself."

Arriving home from Australia I was offered a finish fight at San Francisco with Billy Woods from Denver, a Scotch heavyweight, 6 feet 1 inch tall, and a well-built athlete. In the first session Woods floored me. I got up and floored him. The gong rang, with Woods taking the count.

Afterward I learned that many late arrivals in the audience came in while Woods was on the floor in the first round. On learning "Parson" advertised a purse of $100 that Choynski had knocked his opponent down in the first round for the count, they turned around and went home, thinking the fight was over.

Bout Went 34 Rounds.

BUT the fight went 34 rounds before I got Woods on the floor to stay.

Con Mooney, dog fighter and rat killer, a picturesque character, a pal of Bat Masterson, sat at the ringside plugging lustily for Woods. He kept yelling that I had weak legs and for Woods to stay away and tire me out.

I did not get home until 2 a. m. after the fight, at which time I decided to taper off my training by a walk out to Barney Farley's roadhouse, 10 miles. Some reporters there saw me and learned that I had hiked 10 miles after fighting 34 rounds.

John L. Sullivan was showing at the Bush Street Theater to small audiences. He asked me to box three rounds with him on Sunday night. I assented. The exhibition was advertised and drew a packed house. Sullivan was very grateful to me for this co-operation, and we remained warm friends until his death.

I discovered in that three-round bout with Sullivan that he was decidedly on the toboggan. He was slowing up and his wind was bad. I felt glad he had not fought in Australia for if he had the championship would have left America.

Too Tough for Maher.

NEGOTIATIONS were opened with me to meet Peter Maher at New Orleans about that time, but the Louisiana promoters decided I was too tough and they substituted Bob Fitzsimmons against Peter. Fitz asked me to second him, and I went to New Orleans. It should be remembered that Fitz was not rated high then and he himself did not then realize his real ability.

Fitz beat Maher in 12 rounds.

At Bay St. Louis, where Bob had trained for the Maher fight, a banquet was arranged in his honor after his victory. Fitz told me that he had never made a speech in public, and he wouldn't know what to say when the toastmaster called on him. I suggested he get some one to write him a speech. He liked the idea and hired a lawyer friend to do the work. Then he got me to help him rehearse. We stayed up nearly all night several nights practicing in Fitz's hotel room. Fitz had his talk down letter perfect. On the night of the banquet all present got gloriously full of wine and there were no speeches from anybody.

Up to that time I had no manager, and I decided to make a business connection with Charlie E. ("Parson") Davies, who was also manager of Peter Jackson and Jim Hall. The "Parson" had me go to Chicago, and immediately put me to work at the old Battery "knocking out all comers." The to any man I could not stop in four rounds.

TWO INTERNATIONAL SPEEDBOAT CARNIVALS PLANNED FOR SUMMER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Plans for two international speedboat carnivals next summer, with American craft meeting an invasion of French and British boats, were announced tonight by Charles F. Chapman, chairman of the Racing Committee of the American Power Boat Association.

One of them, for the newly offered Carl G. Fisher trophy, for liter and and a half class boats, already has been sanctioned for Lake Muskoka, Canada, Aug. 12-13. The other, for the classic Harmsworth trophy now held by Gar Wood, is expected to take place at Detroit in September. The Gold Cup regatta already has been fixed for Aug. 6 off Greenwich, Conn.

A challenge for the Fisher Trophy already has been received by Commodore Harry B. Greening of Hamilton, Ontario, from Dr. Etchegoin, owner of the French boat "Sadi II." Two british craft also are expected to compete, one of them the "Neug," winner of the Duke of York Trophy last summer, owned and driven by Miss Carstairs of the British Motor Boat Club.

Henri Eaders, noted French sportsman whose "France Excelsior" was unsuccessful in an effort to lift the Harmsworth Trophy last summer, is expected to challenge again.

SONS WILL OPPOSE FATHER'S CAGE TEAM IN DETROIT LEAGUE

DETROIT, Jan. 1.—Two sons will attempt to "show up the old man" when the Detroit Amateur Basketball League resumes play at General Motors gym on Jan. 4.

This unique family affair will come up when the Old Timers play Harry Leveys in an American Division game.

The father, Harold Springer, is coach of the Old Timers and he will match wits with his sons, Harold and Bertram, who hold guard and forward positions, respectively, for the Levey club. Bertram Springer was a member of the 1925-26 Southeastern High team, state prep champions, and was picked for two seasons on the all-state quintet.

Father Springer says he will bet the family car against a new overcoat on the outcome of the game.

Overwork Surest Way to Kill Team

Regular Schedule of Practice Is Necessary

CHAPTER XXXV.

"MY 25 YEARS ON THE GRIDIRON."

By W. W. "Bill" Roper.

AS I HAD decided to coach another year, and as the football season had only started, it seemed to me a good idea to go around to see some other teams play. My few short weeks of coaching at V. M. I. had showed me rather definitely how much there was to learn and how little I knew.

My friend and classmate, Gresham Poe, was coaching the University of Virginia team, and, as Charlottesville was on my way north, I was glad to get a wire from Poe asking me to stop off for a visit. I spent a very enjoyable week at the University of Virginia. Poe had what looked to me like a great team, with a particularly strong line. Counsel, the captain and left tackle, made a great impression on me. He was one of the fastest big men I had ever seen and very powerful with the ball. He reminded me something of Perry Hale when he hit the line. I helped coach the ends that week and went down to Richmond with the boys to see them play the V. P. I. team. Virginia Military Institute always played V. P. I. on Thanksgiving day, so I was very much interested in watching this game. They were no match for Virginia that afternoon; the university line was too big and powerful. I never saw anyon run better with the ball than Counsel.

Helps Out Brother.

AFTER I had spent a few days at home, I went up to Princeton to watch the team practice and to see what I could pick up. It looked as if Princeton would have a good team that year. John DeWitt was captain. There was a lot of veteran material back and some very good freshmen. When I got to Princeton I found my brother, then a junior, manager of the freshman football team. In those days the manager was supposed to coach the team himself or enlist volunteer help. My brother was trying to coach the team himself. His football experience had been very limited and yet here he was with an entire freshman squad on his hands. I offered my services to my brother and they were gladly accepted. I was anxious to try out some of the ideas I had gotten since I left Lexington, and while it was too late to make any radical changes, I think some of my suggestions were a help.

BILL ROPER.

I went up to New Haven to see the Princeton-Yale varsity game. Before the game Hildebrand, the Princeton coach, asked me to act as the Princeton linesman. The Princeton-Yale game of 1903 was one of the best football games I have ever seen. Princeton won by the narrow margin of a goal from placement. John De Witt, the Princeton captain, covered himself with glory. He first picked up a fumble and made a touchdown and later, in the closing minutes of the game, kicked the goal from placement. There were some great players on both teams in that game. I never saw better end play. Henry and Davis were on the ends of the Princeton line, while Tom Shevelin and Rafferty were the Yale wing men. I doubt if such end talent has ever gotten together before or since, in any single game. Jim Hogan was a tower of strength on the Yale line. He would be called back from his position to carry the ball. He was able to make short gains but the Princeton line held like a stone wall most of the time. Dana Kafer was Princeton's best offensive back. I was very much impressed with the way Foster Rockwell, the Yale quarterback, barked out his signals and at his pep and ginger.

Yale Tries Quick Kick.

IN that game Yale tried the quick kick for the first time. Mitchell, the Yale back, did it very effectively. The kick was made from a close running formation on the theory of catching the quarterback or safety man out of position. Today it is more necessary than it was ever in the old days, as the forward pass has put additional pressure on the defense and the safety man has a tendency to edge up. Many teams play what is known as a 7-2-2 defense with no safety man at all. I strongly advise every team to include the quick kick in its regular running plays.

In taking stock of what I had learned during my first year, I consider the most important thing the lesson I got from my first practice session on the parade ground of the V. M. I. when I realized the hopelessness of getting anything done in the short time for practice unless a regular schedule was kept and stuck to like a limited express train does its running schedule. When I was a player I had never noticed how the coaches regulated practice. I had always personally had plenty to do and time had never hung very heavy on my hands on the field. I am so strongly sold on the importance of keeping a regular schedule of practice that I never go out on the field at Princeton without a carefully typed plan of campaign for the afternoon. The manager or one of his assistants, who is always on the field, carries a duplicate, while a third copy is posted on the bulletin board of the clubhouse. In my opinion, no coach can get the best results from his squad unless he knows definitely in advance just what he is to do every minute of the time.

Overtraining Is Worse.

MY first coaching experience at V. M. I. also convinced me that in my own playing days we had been given too much work. I doubt if we had quite enough time on one hour of practice, but I would rather have one hour than three. Also I would much prefer a team undertrained than overtrained. The average college football player has not the temperament nor has he the age or strength to be handled like a professional prize fighter and the surest way to kill a team is to overwork it.

I was also very much impressed by Olcott's statement to me after the Carolina game, in reply to my query why he was not using the Yale tackle back offense, when he said he did not think it was adapted to his material. I am firmly of the opinion that this is one of the most important things for a coach to remember. No two squads are exactly alike and what suits one may not suit the other.

County Boxers To Meet Thursday

Officials of the South Broadway A. C. have scheduled a heavyweight boxing bout between John Schwake of Webster Groves and George Gallagher of Kirkwood, as one of the special events of a bimonthly fistic tournament to be held at the South Side arena next Thursday night.

The contest will mark Gallagher's introduction as a candidate for Western A. A. U. fistic honors. Schwake has been boxing about one year and is credited with five victories in a total of six bouts. His one setback was recorded in a match last winter with Dave Knost, the district titleholder, who outpointed him in a closely contested bout. In his last start, the Webster Groves mauler knocked out Jack Walton of Granite City, Ill.

Other amateur ring favorites who have filed entries for special events on Thursday night's program are: Frank Power, Western A. A. U. middleweight champion, and Tony Pirrone, the Sherman Park flyweight, who captured runner-up laurels in the district tourney last March.

Willie Miller, chairman of the matchmaking committee, reports a total of 17 entries for the open events of various weight divisions to be contested as preliminaries of the coming tourney. Miller expects to enroll at least 10 more contestants. Entry blanks can be obtained on application at the South Broadway gymnasium, 2301 South Seventh boulevard.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The Brooklyn Wanderers defeated the New York Giants by 3 to 1 at Hawthorne Field today in an American League game before a holiday crowd of 5000 enthusiasts.

Juse before time Herd handled in the penalty area and Eisenhoffer converted the spot kick which enabled the Wanderers to lead at half time by 2 to 1.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—Ed Strangler Lewis and Wayne Munn, heavyweight wrestlers who meet here Monday night, conferred with the State Athletic Commission on the referee of the contest. The commission, however, will not pick the referee until the principals climb in the ring. Lewis has posted his $10,000 diamond-studded championship belt to be at stake on the result of the match.

Sarazen Victor In Miami Open

Sinks 20-Foot Putt on Last Hole to Beat Klein by One Stroke.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 1.—Gene Sarazen, the only golfer with an impressive string of victories over Walter Hagen, the professional champion, is leaving the Haig's own stamping ground today, richer by $750 and with the Miami open championship in his possession.

Hagen was not entered in the tournament. He is expected early in the month from the Pacific Coast.

Sarazen sank a 20 foot putt at the home hole for a birdie three and a total score of 289, one stroke better than Willie Klein, of Wheatley Hills, who won the title last year with the same score. Klein collected $500 second money. Harry Hampton of Memphis finished third with 294.

Jock Hutchison found the going rough after a two months' lay off, and after a windy first round that cost him strokes, finished well down the list of a $90 prize.

Frank Ball, the English professional, spent the first round acclimating himself at the expense of any hope to win but burned up the course on his last nine holes. His card of 70 for the last 18 was not bettered by Sarazen.

Tony Manera, who succeeded Joe Turnesa as professional at Fairview, was the one shot sensation of the tournament. At the ninth hole on his last round he dropped his third shot in the cup from 150 yards away for an eagle. He was fifth, in the final rating.

LESS SMOKE MADE BY TERMINAL ENGINES

Reports Show 30 Per Cent Decrease for First Six Months of 1926.

Elimination of smoke through application of scientific methods of firing has made possible the handling of a greater volume of traffic with a smaller fuel consumption by the Terminal Railroad, Osborn Monnett, consulting engineer of the Citizens' Smoke Abatement League, announced yesterday, in calling attention to the progress made by the Terminal Railroad in its smoke abatement effort. Reports received by City Smoke Commissioner Gordon show a 30 per cent decrease for the first six months of 1926.

Full reports for the year 1926 are not yet available. The statistics compiled by the Terminal Railroad Association show that while business increased during 1925 over 1924 approximately 6.8 per cent, fuel consumption actually showed a decrease of approximately 4.3 per cent, which, officers of the Citizens' Smoke Abatement League figure, means an actual saving in fuel of approximately 11 per cent for one year.

The Terminal Railroad during 1924 handled 2,434,554 loaded freight cars and 1,665,150 empty freight cars, or a total of 4,099,704 cars. This movement was accomplished with a fuel consumption of 417,127 tons of coal. In 1925 the Terminal handled 2,571,178 loaded freight cars and 1,807,268 empty freight cars, or a total of 4,378,446. This movement was accomplished with a fuel consumption of 399,818 tons of coal.

Records for the first six months of 1926, as compared with a similar period in 1925, show approximately the same increase in business handled with a like decrease in fuel consumption. When complete records are available the elimination of smoke from Terminal locomotives, it is predicted by Monnett, will show a decrease of from 30 to 40 per cent.

Railroads of St. Louis, Monnett said, are vitally interested in smoke abatement because it means a substantial saving in their fuel bill, which is the second largest item in the cost of operation. He called attention to the fact that the railroads entering St. Louis are spending more money on smoke abatement than the City of St. Louis.

As an evidence of what the railroads are doing to eliminate smoke and conserving fuel, Monnett said the Wabash, at the suggestion of J. W. Jones, terminal superintendent, has equipped all its locomotives with brick arches, this change resulting in a net fuel saving of 30 per cent, at the same time prolonging the service of the locomotive.

The Terminal Railroad has had in service for some time a locomotive build in its own shops embodying all of the latest ideas in smoke abatement, including self-cleaning grates which enable the fires to be maintained in serviceable condition 24 hours per day, whereas ordinary locomotives must be taken out of service for cleaning of fires, a process which causes considerable smoke.

Success in railroad smoke abatement, Monnett said, depends on the co-operation of all departments engaged in the movement of locomotives, engine crews, hostlers and all others having to do with keeping the engine in shape. Commenting on the co-operation given by the railroads in the effort to eliminate smoke in St. Louis, William G. Christy, executive secretary of the Citizens' Smoke Abatement League, declared, "If the same degree of co-operation and the same interest were displayed by other classes of industries commonly regarded as the greatest smoke producers, St. Louis' smoke problem would be well on the way towards solution. Terminal officials working in co-operation with J. W. Burrows, who operate a joint railroad smoke inspection bureau of all railroads entering St. Louis and City Smoke Commissioner Gordon may well be proud of the record made in the last two years."

SPRING FLOWERS CAN BE FORCED TO BLOOM

Entire Branch Should Be Put Into Warm Water at First, Bulletin States.

Many spring flowers may be brought into bloom inside the house in winter, and all they require is ordinary room temperature, a jar of water and a little sunlight, states the current bulletin of the Missouri Botanical Garden.

"Quicker results usually may be obtained," the bulletin instructs, "if the entire branch is soaked in warm water for 10 or 15 minutes when first brought into the house. The branches may be brought in almost any time after the turn of the year, although it goes without saying that much better results are obtained by waiting until late February or early March."

Bare for First Week.

Care is urged in selecting branches well provided with flower buds, as distinguished from leaf buds. Flower buds generally are larger and fit less closely to the twigs.

"They will be bare or practically so for at least the first week," states the bulletin, "and the flowers, when they do appear, are usually smaller than those which open naturally out of doors. The branches may be of any size, however, from small twigs to six-foot sprays.

"Almost any of the spring-flowering shrubs will produce a few leaves and a flower or two, and some bloom almost as well as they do out of doors.

Best Kinds to eGt.

The Cornelian cherry is one of the very best, as the flowers begin to appear almost at once and are fully open inside of a week. The golden-bell, or forsythia, is almost as desirable. Other promising subjects are pear, crab-apple, sycamore (with flowers like small, fuzzy, green lemons), barberry, silverbell and Japanese quince.

"Strangely enough there seems to be no absolute relation between the flowering time of the shrub and and the ease with which it may be forced. The fragrant sumac and the spice bush are both among the very earliest of our flowering shrubs, but the sumac blooms almost as soon outdoors as when forced inside, and the spice bush is very slow to open its flowers."

PANIC SWEEPS LONDON THRONG CELEBRATING NEW YEAR'S EVE

Women and Children Trampled as Crowd Surges From St. Paul's Cathedral.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—New Year's eve revels in front of St. Paul's Cathedral ended in a panic which, starting from some undertermined cause, swept the great crowd down Ludgate Hill in wild rout.

Women and children were trampled, and kicked, others fainted and some of those thrown down were cut by broken bottles with which the street was strewn.

The stampede was saved from becoming a disaster only through police precautions and by the presence of several cool-headed persons among the throng.

The crowd had gathered before the cathedral in accordance with custom to celebrate the coming of the new year. The fact that it was unusually large, with a big rowdy element, led the police to call reinforcements at 11:30 p. m., and this strong force, although unable to stop the rush at its outset, checked the panic and guided terrified women and children to safety.

Ambulances removed six persons to the hospitals. The affair had a sobering effect on the merry-makers and they quickly melted away.

Lecture on Art and Industry.

Dudley Crafts Watson, extension lecturer of the Chicago Art Institute, will lecture at the City Art Museum Tuesday at 3:15 p. m. on "America's Achievement in Art and Industry," illustrated by lantern slides. The lecturer will make a particular appeal to the householder and interior decorator. There is no admission charges.

BUSINESS MEN OPPOSE INSURANCE RATE RISE

A formal protest against any unwarranted increases in insurance rates under the recently enacted workmen's compensation act has been filed with State Superintendent of Insurance Hyde by the Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber's action was taken at a meeting last week of the board of directors, acting upon recommendation of a subcommittee which recently conducted a public hearing in conjunction with the Insurance Commissioner, at which manufacturers were given an opportunity to compare the schedule of rates proposed in the new law with those under existing conditions. The Insurance Commissioner is empowered to order a change in rates subject to review by a court.

In protesting against any increase, William T. Findly, general secretary, acting on behalf of the chamber, said:

"The committee at public hearings brought out the fact that in many instances the new compensation act will work to the advantage of many industries. On the other hand, the protests filed by numerous industries indicated charges which appear unwarranted and of such magnitude as seriously to threaten the existence of those industries in this State.

"It is the desire of the Chamber of Commerce to protest for those industries of St. Louis and to protest against rates which may inflict a greater cost upon industry than may be applied to surrounding cities. Furthermore, the board recommends that this committee be continued in force to guard the interest of industry until these matters are finally adjusted in an equitable manner.

"In the name of the Chamber of Commerce I am making a general protest, calling your attention to the facts brought out at the hearing and asking you to investigate carefully and finally approve only such rates as will be fair and equitable."

Escaped Missouri Youth Caught.

ALEXANDRIA, La., Jan. 1.—Torbie Abies, 20 years old, who said he just "walked away" from the Missouri reformatory at Boonville, is not Erdman Olson, who is sought as the slayer of Clara Olson, his sweetheart, at Prairie du Chien, Wis. Police said the identity of the youth, who resembled pictures of Olson, had been established, and he is willing to return to the reformatory.

AWFUL GAS PAINS AND SICK HEADACHES

Mrs. John Brogdon, who lives near Altoona, Ala., says:

"Five years ago I was in very bad health. I had suffered for years with constipation, and my system had become so thoroughly poisoned that I experienced all kinds of discomfort.

"My skin was yellow and my tongue was badly coated. I had gas pains, and it seemed like I could not get rid of them. Every now and then I would have an awful spell with my side. I had sick headaches which would come on me suddenly and I would have to give up and go to bed.

"I had read the Ladies' Birthday Almanac and made up my mind to try Black-Draught. I had known about it for years, but it just happened that I had never taken it until that time. I sent to the store and got some which I began at once to take. I took it regularly for several weeks, and I began to improve almost immediately. My color cleared up, I had a good appetite, and I no longer had the pains in my side.

"I was so pleased with my improvement that I began giving the children Black-Draught for colds and constipation. It has proved to be an invaluable family medicine, and I have recommended it to several of my friends."

SENATORS SEEKING CHECK TO PRESIDENT'S POWER OF REMOVAL OF APPOINTEES

Supreme Court Decision Voiding Act of 1876 Curbing Executive's Authority Lays Thousands of Heads Under Presidential Ax.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.

IS the United States moving toward monarchy? Is our Government of "checks and balances" turning into a one-man show bossed by the President? Is the Anglo-Saxon system, of divided responsibility and limited powers, fading out in this country?

The arresting character of the questions is heightened by their source. A Socialist bawling them from a soapbox would excite no alarm. Uttered by an insurgent Senator, they might be attributed to the heat of debate. The fact is, however, that they were raised by one of the most conservative members of the highest court in the land; to wit, by Associate Justice McReynolds of the United States Supreme Court. They were raised deliberately, solemnly and with aforethought, in a formal opinion rendered publicly from the bench.

By a majority of six to three, the Supreme Court on Oct. 25 gave decision for the defendant in the suit of Lois P. Myers, administratrix of the estate of Frank S. Meyers, former Postmaster of Portland, Ore., against the United States. Of itself, the case was of slight importance. Its immediate effect was merely to deny Mrs. Myers' claim to the salary which her husband would have drawn had not his term been ended by his removal from office. The amount involved was only $8838.71. Perhaps Mrs. Myers can get along without it.

Effect of Decision That Alarmed Congress.

But actually, the thing involved was the power of the President to remove from office without the consent of the Senate, public officials whom he can appoint only with the consent of the Senate. Chief Justice William H. Taft, himself an ex-President, and five Associate Justices held that the President possesses such power. Three associate justices dissented, and in such fiery and violent language as to be almost without precedent in the history of that august court.

The matter did not end there. Congress is thoroughly alarmed over the possible consequences of the decision. That it greatly strengthens the authority of the President, and correspondingly reduces that of Congress, is admitted. Consequently, several of the foremost constitutional lawyers in the Senate for weeks have been working out legislation to counteract the effect of the decision. Justice McReynolds pronounced it "revolutionary." Justice Holmes declared the arguments on which it was based were "spiders' webs." Justice Brandeis said it was "a doctrine not to be learned in American Government."

And, indeed, numerous members of Congress do not hesitate to assert that the decision has changed the entire structure of the Government, as it has existed since revolutionary days.

The learned justices were fully aware of the seriousness of the issue. For months after arguments had been concluded and briefs submitted, the question was debated behind the brass-studded leather-bound doors of the court chambers. No outsider knows authoritatively what occurs there, but it is no secret that the court divided with extraordinary sharpness and that Chief Justice Taft was concerned over the vehemence with which the dissenting minority took issue. The depth and violence of the split within the court was disclosed finally with the utmost reluctance.

Great Authorities Cited To Support Wilson's Act.

The majority and minority opinions were sprinkled with names illustrious in American history. Chief Justice Taft supported the majority opinion with the utterances of Jackson and Marshall. From the judgment of his colleagues, Justice McReynolds appealed to Webster, Clay and Calhoun. Even Hamilton, that original American monarchist, was quoted in support of the opinion that to give the President such power as this decision gives him, is to threaten the existence of republican government.

It was to curb the President that Congress passed a statute in 1876 providing that he could remove certain officers only with the consent of the Senate. In 1920, President Wilson dismissed Postmaster Myers without obtaining the Senate's consent. Myers sued the Government to recover salary for the remainder of his term. He died, but his widow carried on the suit. It came to the Supreme Court on appeal.

In pronouncing the statute of 1876 unconstitutional, Chief Justice Taft, speaking for the majority, enunciated an interesting theory of the presidency. He held that the Constitution, in vesting "executive power" in the President, and in charging him "to take care that the laws shall be faithfully executed," had conferred upon the chief executive a number of implied powers not expressly named. Among these powers, he held, was the power to dismiss without the Senate's consent, any officer whom he had appointed.

It did not matter that the officer had been appointed with the Senate's consent; it did not matter that the office itself might be one which Congress had created, and could abolish at any time; it did not matter that it might exist for the purpose of discharging a congressional duty. So long as the President appointed the officer, he could dismiss the officer at his pleasure.

Ruling Lays Many Heads Under President's Ax.

To understand the terrific consequences of this decision, it is only necessary to look at a partial list of those whose official lives are now at the mercy of the President. Among others, they include the members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Tariff Commission, Shipping Board, Federal Reserve Board, Railroad Labor Board, officers of the Army and Navy, Postmaster-General and Comptroller-General. These are but the most important. The total number of public officials affected runs into many thousands.

"The power to remove executive officers," argued the majority opinion, "is an incident of the power to appoint them, and is in its nature an executive power."

Admitting that when Congress invests department heads with the power to appoint officers, it can impose the conditions under which such officers can be removed, the opinion argued that no such conditions could be imposed against the President. Department heads are themselves the holders of offices created by Congress, and can never be more powerful than their creator, but the office of President is created by the Constitution, and the power to remove those whom he has appointed is inherent in the nature of the office. So ran the opinion.

In other words, it established around the presidency a certain "constitutional position," by virtue of which the President can exercise powers not specifically granted him by the Constitution.

Budget System Urged on Missouri As Government Cost Rises 1200 Pct. And Concealed Taxation Flourishes

"Painless" System Helps to Fool Public as to How Much It Pays—Business Men Will Offer Plan to Legislature to Condense Present 123 State Bureaus Into Nine Departments and Stop Leakage of Taxpayers' Money.

Cost of Administration Has Advanced From $4,116,348 in 1900 to $54,665,983 in 1925—Under the Present Happy-Go-Lucky System Every Department Spends All of Its Appropriation and Deficits Are Common.

By CURTIS A. BETTS.

IN 25 years the wealth of Missouri has increased 200 per cent. In the same period the expenditures of the State government have increased 1200 per cent. The State expended $4,116,348 for all government purposes in 1900. It expended $54,665,983 in 1925.

Year after year in that quarter of a century the taxpayer, the citizen who has little and the citizen who has much, has seen his tax bill growing. He has "cussed Jefferson City," has talked about "graft," but has done nothing. After these many years a few of the big fellows have got together in an effort to call a halt in the wild orgy of wasteful spending of public money.

As a result, for the first time in Missouri a serious effort will be undertaken at the coming session of the Legislature, which convenes Jan. 5 to reform the disjointed, extravagant and inefficient system under which the State's officials spend all it collects from its citizens and constantly are alert to devise new things to spend money for so that it can collect more money for them to spend.

Business Men Combine to Put Stop to Waste

The reform movement which has taken shape in the Missouri Association for Economy in Public Expenditures had its origin in the Associated Industries, an organization of manufacturers and business men formed several years ago for mutual protection and benefit. Though these business men have engaged in a work which, if successful, may be expected to have good for all, it is not to be doubted that self-interest had most to do with their plans. There existed a situation in which everybody's business was nobody's business until hard-headed business men, who could afford the expense, organized to protect their own pocketbooks, and in their work there is prospect for protection not only of themselves but of the average citizen who could do nothing for himself.

These business men became indignant at the amount of money they paid out in taxes of one sort or another, taxes which in most instances they were able to pass on to the consumers of the products they manufactured or sold, but taxes which were a nuisance and which interfered with business.

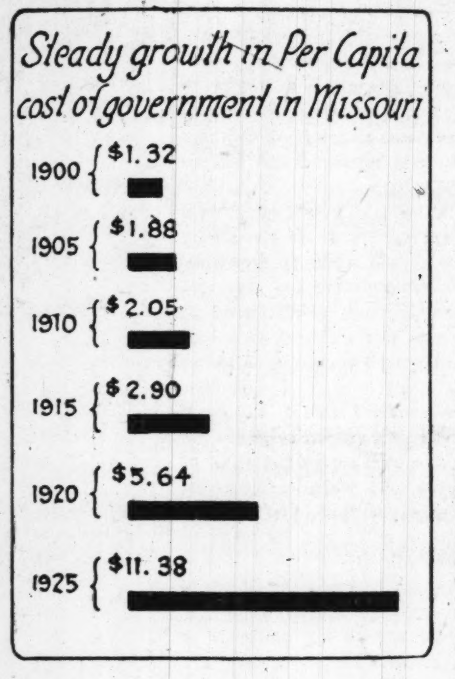
They as business men saw the state, a huge business institution collecting and spending $50,000,000 a year, conducted along lines which would throw any business except the state into bankruptcy. So they formed their association to study the state government, to find out where the wastes were, and to present to the Legislature a comprehensive plan for a reorganization of the executive branch of the government in such manner that it would be possible to have good, economical government if the officials in power were willing to have it. They realized that no system they could devise could guarantee that kind of government if the officials wanted the other kind.

Propose Nine Bureaus to Replace 123

The first step was the selection of Thomas H. Rogers, a former newspaper man who during 25 years had been in touch with affairs of the state government, and who had devoted much study to it. Rogers has done nothing during the past year except direct the research and plan the legislative campaign.

In brief, the Legislature will be asked to consolidate under nine State departments all the activities of 123 bureaus, commissions and boards, centralizing authority and responsibility so that there will be nine departmental heads with clearly defined jurisdictions and with accountability in the last analysis brought to the Governor, himself, as the responsible head of all.

Rogers has not proceeded with the idea of curtailing activities of the State. He has recognized that there is some need or reason for virtually all of the new functions undertaken during the past few years. He will not propose reduction in salaries. He probably will urge salaries of sufficient size to attract capable men. He has a system which the directors of the association have approved as making possible deep cuts in the cost of Government through the elimination of waste.



When Chancellor Hadley of Washington University was Governor nearly 20 years ago and his Democratic critics complained of the State tax, Hadley took the position that Missourians were not penurious and that they did not object to paying whatever good government cost. He said what they were interested in was getting their money's worth. That has been the theory of the association in working out the economy scheme, though its officers hold to the expectation that it will actually reduce taxes.

State Uses Painless Method of Taxation

Before going into the plan to be submitted to the Legislature, some of the faults of the present system and the effects of those wrongs may be pointed out.

The per capita cost of the Missouri State Government, which means the average cost to each man, woman and child in the State if each paid the same, was $1.32 in 1900. In 1905 it had risen to $1.88, in 1910 to $2.05, in 1915 to $2.90, in 1920 to $5.64, and in 1925 to $11.38. It has more than doubled in five years, and increased more than nine times in 25 years. This figure for 1925 does not include costs of State highway construction. If those are included the per capita cost for that year would be $15.69.

The State has adopted the so-called painless method of extracting most of the money it takes from its citizens. The taxpayer does not feel the knife of the tax surgeon at the time of the operation. Nearly all the money the State spends is in indirect taxes. Business pays the bill but business charges it on to the consumer, just as it does in the national tariff. Though he may not feel the knife, the average citizen finds the scar when he tries to figure out where all his money has gone.

So that in reality the average citizen, though he may think he pays little in taxes, has a vital interest in stopping the leaks in Jefferson City.

The concealment of taxation is revealed by the State financial records for 1925, when the total money receipts of the State from all sources aggregated $52,196,594, but only $2,317,176 came from direct property taxation, only about one-twenty-fifth of the total. The remainder was from automobile licenses, gasoline tax, charges of the Public Service Commission, oil inspection fees and many others. In all there are 79 sources of revenue for the State, the direct property tax shown on the tax bill being only one and an inconsiderable one at that.

Political parties in control of the State government or of the Legislature have at times made great to-do about reducing the property tax rate or refusing to raise it, inconsequential political clap-trap, when at the same time they were creating new State functions and providing new and concealed sources of revenue which aggregated many times the saving in the property tax rate.

The association reported from its investigations that one of the greatest incentives to waste in Government has been the habit of appropriating more money than the State would collect in the period for which the appropriations were made.

Missouri has no budget system, nor has it ever had. Each head of a department asks the Legislature for a considerably larger appropriation than really is needed, with the expectation that it will be cut. Sometimes it is and sometimes it isn't, but almost invariably the appropriation is for a larger amount than economical administration of the department requires. The total of all the appropriations usually is several millions of dollars in excess of the money which will be available.

The head of the department, having the appropriation, proceeds to spend it all and more, the result being that at the close of the biennial period there is a deficit in nearly every department. The succeeding Legislature appropriates the money to meet it and in addition a large amount for the next biennial period, enabling the department head further to increase expenditure and create another deficit to be met by the next Legislature, and so on endlessly.

In 25 years the deficiency appropriations have aggregated $14,596,779, or in other words, State officials have in that time spent nearly $15,000,000 more than there was in the State Treasury.

It is common knowledge among State officials and employes and among those in contact with affairs at the State Capitol that there is waste in the employment of clerks, the payrolls of many departments containing the names of more clerks than are needed.

The Legislature itself is one of the chief offenders in this respect. Each session the rolls of the Senate and House are loaded with clerks, janitors and employes of various classifications, many of whom are admittedly incompetent, and many of whom never appear in Jefferson City except on payday. Members put their wives and children and friends on the rolls at $3.50 to $5 a day, not expecting them to do any work.

"The imperative need of a remedy is stressed by a study of the State's financial condition," it is stated in a recent report of the association. "Waste and extravagance are apparent in too many services. Lack of governmental supervision prevails throughout the State government. Nobody knows the cost of government. Nobody knows the number of men on the State payroll. No one knows either the actual receipts of the governmental structure, nor governmental costs.

Politics Prime Test in Candidate for Job

"Apparently millions of dollars are collected and spent annually without passing through the office of either the auditor or treasurer. It is true that most of these funds are collected and spent by the institutions and departments and an accounting made in a report submitted to the Legislature. But these reports are seldom read. No intimation has been made that these funds have been misspent, but financial responsibility in government cannot be fixed until all funds collected and spent by State agencies shall pass through the hands of proper fiscal officials of the State."

In choosing employes for State positions, except in rare instances and those for places requiring high technical skill, there has been only one consideration — politics. The adaptability of the employe for the particular job has been given virtually no consideration. The test of fitness was the extent of political loyalty to the appointing power.

Through jobs State executives with further political ambitions were able to build up powerful machines. The more jobs there were to distribute the more loyal friends could be taken care of and the more incentive for loyal political service. Officials in many instances lost sight altogether of an obligation for economy and efficiency in their departments, and expanded their payrolls to the extreme limit to take care of their friends for the political benefit that would accrue to themselves.

The association does not expect to take the selfishness out of job holders or heads of departments, realizing that this is a government by political parties and that rewards with jobs constitute about the only way parties and politicians can pay political debts.

What it hopes to do is to create a changed governmental system which will make possible the fixing of direct responsibility so that the public may know the particular individual to credit or blame for good or bad government.

So the scheme has been proposed to consolidate all of the 123 State executive-controlled departments into nine administrative departments, headed by an Administrative Board, and included among them a Budget

Interest in Diaz-Sacasa Fight Centers Mainly on Purchased Canal Route in Republic and Protection of Panama.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.

ARE the United States marines in Nicaragua merely to protect American lives and property or does their presence at Puerto Cabezas and Bluefields mean that the United States State Department intends to establish a protectorate over the country that possesses a prospective Isthmian canal?

President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg have given assurances that Rear Admiral Julian L. Latimer and his armed forces are in the Central American republic only because Americans there have asked for protection. The Admiral, they say, has definite instructions that he is not to favor either the Conservative President, Adolfo Diaz, who has been recognized by the United States Government, or the Liberal, Juan B. Sacasa, a former Vice President, who has been recognized as the constitutional President by the Calles Government of Mexico.

Increasing Demand For a Showdown.

In spite of these assurances, however, there is undoubtedly a conviction in the minds of Central and South Americans that the United States is not as disinterested in Nicaragua politics as these United States officials have contended, and in Washington there is an increasing demand that our State Department lay all its cards on the table, face up.

Diplomats, like the Bishops in chess, move obliquely. The maneuvers of the State Department have been even more difficult to follow than a chess game because Secretary Kellogg has taken the position that he is not obliged to make known any moves he or his subordinate have made.

The result has been that some Senatorial leaders have become distrustful of State Department announcements, or lack of announcements, and even Senator Borah, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, has had to threaten that he would conduct a private investigation to ascertain the facts of the Nicaraguan situation.

As late as Thursday Secretary Kellogg flatly told the newspaper correspondents, "There is no announcement about Nicaragua today and I do not intend to discuss the situation." All efforts to obtain comment or information about Nicaragua affairs were met with evasive answers.

Three Main Points That Concern U. S.

Despite official announcements to the contrary, the State Department is interested in political developments in Nicaragua for the following reasons:

1. The right of the United States to build a canal across Nicaragua, obtained by the payment of $3,000,000.
2. The alarm in the State Department at the alleged spread of Mexican culture through the Central American republics.
3. The need of protecting the Panama Canal.
4. The growth of United States trade in Central America.

The known and admitted facts disclose that there is reason for concern over the recent developments in Central America. Whether the State Department has imperialistic designs on this section, as charged by Liberals of the United States and in Central and South America, does not enter primarily into the situation.

The present problem revolves around the American and Mexican recognition of two opposing Nicaraguan factions, each of which claims to be the constitutional Government. Each faction has its propagandists in Washington, where intrigue takes the place of bullets. The battles of the 1926 Nicaraguan revolution are being fought as hard in Washington as in the forests of Nicaragua itself.

Although President Diaz has apparently been a protege of the State Department since 1909, when President Zelaya was overthrown with the aid of United States marines, the history of the present revolution extends back only to October, 1925, when the Conservative, Gen. Emiliano Chamorro, once Nicaraguan Minister to Washington, by coup d'etat took over the Government of President Carlos Solorzano and Vice President Sacasa, who had been elected to office in 1924 by a coalition of Liberals and dissatisfied Conservatives.

Gen. Chamorro belongs to the Chamorro family which has dominated Nicaragua since the overthrow of the Zelaya government. At one time his father was President of the republic and he, his brothers and cousins virtually ran the government on feudal lines.

The government of Solorzano had been recognized by the United States but when Chamorro had himself elected, the United States withdrew recognition on the ground that he had come into power by force.

This action of the United States was in keeping with a treaty of peace and amity which had been signed in Washington by the five Central American republics, on Feb. 7, 1923. The United States did not sign this treaty, but the conference which drafted it had been called by Secretary of State Hughes. In this treaty the five Central American republics, to check revolutions, agreed not to recognize any government established by force "so long as the freely elected representatives thereof have not constitutionally reorganized the country."

Sacasa Illegally Exiled for 2 Years.

Chamorro came to Washington last winter seeking recognition. He was told informally that he could not be recognized because he had obtained his election by force of arms. In June he was formally denied recognition for the same reason.

After their leader's coup d'etat, the Chamorroists had exiled Solorzano. According to a strict reading of the Constitution, Sacasa should have become President. The Chamorroists in the Legislative Assembly met this situation by impeaching Sacasa for treason and sentencing him to two years' exile, although the Constitution stated that impeachment trials must originate in a court, to show grounds for impeachment, and after appropriate action by the Legislature, must be heard by the Supreme Court.

Sacasa agents now claim that their leader left Nicaragua because his life was in danger. The former Vice President came to Washington and, as Chamorro had done before him, tried to obtain recognition as the constitutional President. But he was no more successful than his opponent. News reports at the time stated that from his room in the Hamilton Hotel here he directed by wireless his forces in Nicaragua.

Failing to obtain recognition from the American Government, Sacasa went to Mexico City, where he eventually obtained recognition by the Calles Government. Conservative agents in Washington claim that he not only obtained recognition, but also $30,000 or $40,000 in cash and promises of

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Cobb and Speaker Scandal.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOUR recent editorials on baseball are not justified by the facts, it seems to me. Why condemn baseball because a discharged employe tries to make trouble for Cobb by peddling a letter?

Fans like the writer who have seen Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker give their very best for 20 years will be mighthy hard to convince that they ever threw a ball game. They may have bet on ball games, or known of their fellow players doing so; but betting is not a crime in our minds, and if they bet on the game and tried to win the game there was nothing wrong about it. If they bet against themselves then the tone of your editorial would be justified.

So far as any of us know from what has been published, there is nothing whatever to show that either Speaker or Cobb ever purposely lost a ball game. Cobb's letter shows that he knew of Leonard's bet on the game, but his explanation has all the earmarks of truth. It is a condition that is common in life—most of us are at some time asked to do something for a friend that we don't really like to do, though there is nothing actually wrong about it. It may get us into trouble and put us in bad, but rather than pose as a saint and turn down a friend we take a chance.

Not that we would excuse Cobb or Speaker if they had any part in throwing a ball game. That would be treason to the game and their admirers. But we have seen nothing in the papers to warrant even a suspicion that they ever did so, and there is every reason in their record and personality to honor them above all others as a credit to baseball and the U. S. A.

CHAS. S. HARRIS

Blame for Poor Movie Films.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE producers of motion pictures in this country are the ones to be blamed for poor pictures. The director of a motion picture is simply a hired hand for the producer who insists upon having the picture made the way he wants it made willy-nilly. It takes more than fancy crust to make a pie and time has proven that it takes more than good photography and expensive balderdash to make a good picture. When P. T. Barnum said "There is a sucker born every minute," he left a sinister imprint upon the philosophy of the show business. Motion picture producers would be better off if they paid less heed to Barnum's advice and more attention to Lincoln's warning that "You can fool some of the people all of the time, and all of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time."

OBSERVER.

Foresight to Avoid Charity.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ST. LOUIS leads in many things, but to a newcomer in your midst your laudable, infectious Christmas generosity was amazing. In no city of my knowledge does this spirit of Christmas charity seem to affect in the same way the successful man of small means as well as the big capitalist. In fact, everybody seemed to be doin' it.

We understand that the Christmas Bureau of the Community Fund is attempting to develop some order and system out of this orgy of giving an increasing army of those socially below par; but, after all, is this Christmas spirit a thing which ought to be subjected to work-a-day controls?

Fortunately or unfortunately, I have come into contact daily for many years with hordes of men and women looking for work. I found out that in normal years this number of jobseekers increases alarmingly the two months before Christmas. Some only go through the motion of looking for a job, others want to make a pay and perhaps get into a position to get money otherwise, but we find a very large number who are thrown out of work by concerns which retrench and take stock, but invariably announce in the papers big dividends and later contribute heavily towards large Christmas charity efforts.

As a hindsight suggestion at this time, why not spend money, if necessary during the pre-Christmas months, to hold at work all of one's employes and even add more workers at good wages so that more of those who are now the subjects of charity will themselves be in position to properly understand and appreciate the Christmas spirit?

JOHN T. CLARK.

For Safer Streets.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SEEING that there are practically no accidents on the one-way streets, why are not all our streets made one-way streets? The other streets are full of confusion and accidents, the people and drivers do not understand the motions of the traffic policemen and people are being killed and crippled for life on all sides, so why not make all the streets one-way streets, where there is no confusion and few accidents?

If it is good for some of the streets it is better for all of them. Try it and see.

PUBLIC SAFETY.

LAW ENFORCEMENT BY POISONING

The Post-Dispatch indulges the hope that the Congress will amend the Volstead act by a clause providing the death penalty by hanging or electrocution for the crime of drinking intoxicating liquor. An amendment to this effect would relieve the Government of the necessity of poisoning denatured alcohol, much of which is used for beverage purposes, and thus of poisoning those who drink these beverages.

We have never approved of poisoning, either as a means of conducting war or enforcing law. We believe this disapproval of the poisoning method of disposing of enemies or law breakers is shared by an overwhelming majority of the people, not only in America but in the civilized world. There is, in fact, a tremendous protest among civilized people against the use of poison gas in warfare. The practice of poisoning wells has long been looked upon with horror and has been condemned as dishonorable and inhuman by the best authorities.

The practice of poisoning alcohol, now used by the United State Government, ostensibly to deter but in reality to punish by death, those who drink unlawful beverages, is not in accord with civilized usage, either in warfare or law enforcement.

But that the practice is effective in killing off all those who either from weakness or on account of conscientious protest against a law which they believe to be tyrannical and un-American drink unlawful liquor is manifest from the rapidly increasing number of deaths caused by the consumption of liquor. We find from the record that there have been 34 deaths in New York alone since Christmas, and the death toll there for the year is expected to exceed 800. This is more than twice as many deaths from drink as in all of England and Wales, and four times as many in all of Australia, where alcoholic liquors of all kinds are lawful beverages. In Chicago the alcoholic deaths for the year number 328. In Philadelphia 300. All of the cities show substantial rolls of deaths by alcoholic poisoning. New York State has a record of 808.

Of course, drinkers of unlawful alcoholic beverages from whatever reason deserve death. That apparently is the opinion of all those individual citizens and groups of citizens who support Federal prohibition. Since there has been no protest against the poisoning of alcohol by the Antisaloon League, the churches or the Women's Christian Temperance Union or any of the organizations of Christian men and women that are ardently supporting prohibition against the poisoning of alcohol, we assume they agree that the death penalty should be inflicted. We assume that prohibitionists hold that drinking should be put in the category of heresy in the old days, which was punished with death in the most inhuman form.

Accepting the view of the Christian prohibitionists that drinking of alcoholic beverages should be punished with death, we protest against the method of inflicting it. We think the United States Government at least should conform to the standard of civilization in this matter.

Instead of surreptitiously poisoning the drinker, openly inflict the death penalty. It would be more honorable. Of course, the passing of more than 1600 citizens in New York into the death chamber, and the dangling of several thousand citizens from gallows throughout the country would be rather grewsome. Nevertheless, it would be better from every civilized standard than to have this number of citizens poisoned by Government order.

The infliction of the death penalty by law upon drinkers of unlawful alcoholic beverages would not only relieve the United States of the shameful reproach of surreptitiously poisoning its citizens who disobey its tyrannical laws, but it would relieve Secretary Mellon of the necessity of evasive quibbling with regard to the amount of poison which shall be put into denatured alcohol.

ROMANCE WINS.

We never thought they would treat Aimee McPherson as if she were not a red-headed woman and we have not a mandate from history to make these Helens, Sapphos, Pompadours, etc., an exception.

It seems that we were right about it. The case is about to be abandoned. The Prosecuting Attorney has been reading the classics, and he realizes the futility of trying to do what has never been done.

Aimee, therefore, is to suffer only the punishment that all the red-headed women of history have suffered. They are romantic, and if they are for that reason less than they ought to be they have suffered from that judgment for several thousand years.

Anyway, it was not a matter Los Angeles is either qualified to decide or add anything to, and we are glad to see her giving it up.

KIPLING AT SIXTY-ONE.

Rudyard Kipling is 61. Not old as we reckon anno domini now, but, of course, not young. Old enough by the twilight fireside to be looking backward and finding bits of pain and glints of joy in what was rather than thrilling to the vision of future triumphs. Old enough to have the values well assorted, and the futilities, too. Old enough to choose one's companions wisely and young enough to enjoy their qualities.

Who are those friends with whom Kipling foregathers at 61? They must be, we are sure, those "dear hearts across the sea" he knew and loved in the magic land of youth.

"I have eaten your bread and salt,
I have drunk your water and wine,
The deaths ye have died I have watched beside
And the lives ye have lived were mine."

And so did we. In the songs he sang and the tales he told we, too, felt the spell of the old Moulmein pagoda, lifted a glass to the "yaller gal" faithfully waiting for the Tommy that never returned, heard "the dawn come up like thunder," personally joyed and sorrowed in all the romance of the road to Mandalay. But sweeping aside the ghosts of buried loves and long-forgiven hates, comes that reckless servant of the Widow of Windsor, the gay, irresponsible, unforgettable Mulvaney, whose brogue and Celtic swagger, we imagine, will confer immortality on the British poet.

Mulvaney and Kipling must have had great affairs to talk about, great accounts to pore over, great, noble lies to tell each other on this sixty-first birthday.

AN OIL MILLIONAIRE.

Oklahoma is sprinkled with oil millionaires, and the State's terrain proclaims their handiwork. That handiwork is, of course, varied. Those rich men have builded stately mansions, the show places of communities which visitors are always shown. In the business sections, too, brick and stone have been piled high in memoriam to oil. There is one town in Oklahoma, Ponca City, which Marland's millions have made "a lovely place to dwell"—the capital of Utopia, so to speak, were there such a commonwealth. And oil, by way of the 3-per-cent production tax, yields a revenue, say, of $10,000,000 annually to finance a considerable part of the State's public activities.

But one of the interesting and peculiarly appealing exhibits of success in oil in Oklahoma is the Orphans' Home at Sand Springs, founded by Charles Page, whose death was reported Tuesday, and permanent maintenance for which has been arranged in his will. It is a big institution, providing for 400 children. The word institution in this connection is forbiddingly cold and austere. Certainly it is not institutional in spirit or methods of management. It was Page's purpose to make the place as nearly like home as possible. It has been so administered and will so continue to be administered.

Page, we suppose, might be called a "typical" oil millionaire, though the expression is really meaningless. There is no such person. But in many respects this man's career complies with the essential requirements of romance. Up from a childhood of poverty, following adventure's trail through camps of gold and silver when the West was young, making an occasional stake and losing it with the predestined certainty of the prospector's ritual, taking a flyer at fortune as proprietor of a saloon or gambling hell—in short, writing in his own script the Iliad of border days. Then, graying and worn, perhaps secretly discouraged but concealing that base complex behind a front of indomitable optimism, he treks to Oklahoma and there strikes oil.

Page vindicated Lady Luck. He used his fortune well. And that, we believe, is the verdict which informed opinion must render of the big majority of the men who have made millions in oil. They have proved themselves citizens of public worth and public spirit. With beauty, utility and philanthropy they are enriching the State which enriched them.

WHITEWASHING THE INDIANA KLAN.

The authentic history of the Republican-Klan alliance in Indiana is not to be divulged at this time. This is the meaning of the refusal of the Indianapolis grand jury, after deliberating 11 weeks on charges of corruption among high State officials, to render a single indictment.

Though the event is unfortunate from the point of civil righteousness, it has been taken for granted by all observers since the day D. C. Stephenson, once grand dragon of the Indiana Klan, now a convicted murderer in the Michigan City Penitentiary, refused to testify before the grand jury. It was only because of the promise of Stephenson that he would produce corroborating evidence in the form of photostatic copies of contracts, receipts and checks, which had passed between himself and prominent public officials during his reign as boss of the Republican State machine, that Thomas H. Adams, the public-spirited and courageous editor of the Vincennes Commercial, made public the startling charges of political debauchery which kept Indiana on the front pages of the papers of the country for many days, and eventually brought about the investigation by a Marion County grand jury. The failure of that body to render indictments is not a reflection on Mr. Adams' veracity or sincerity, but merely further proof of the contemptible nature of a klansman who for several years dictated the administration of an American commonwealth.

Just why Stephenson, by refusing to testify, double crossed the men who trusted him is likely to remain a mystery for some time, despite the intimation in newspapers of states other than Indiana that he was promised a pardon in return for his silence. There is a conviction among the more thoughtful Hoosiers that he could have substantiated all the charges made by Adams, had he cared to do so. That he is still intimately connected with political events in Indiana is attested by the fact that he prophesied correctly the ratio by which the grand jury would vote upon the question of rendering indictments.

MURDER A MISDEMEANOR?

Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson of Texas has added to her fame as a dispenser of clemency by pardoning Frank Collier, former Mayor of Wichita Falls, who killed his son-in-law, Elzie Robertson. Collier's wife was pardoned several weeks ago.

Elzie Robertson was an unimportant youth, who had done nothing worse than marry the Mayor's daughter. For this he was deemed worthy of death. Collier killed him, Mrs. Collier instigating and participating. They were found guilty. Mrs. Collier was given 10 years and her husband three years in prison. Now, after serving a few months, they are free.

Gov. Ferguson tries to justify her action on the ground that 11 members of the jury that convicted Collier petitioned her to undo what they had done.

It used to be that the American jury ceased functioning when it had brought in its verdict. Nowadays, increasingly, it plays a part in the remission of penalties. As memory serves, the conviction of the Colliers was hailed as a righteous verdict. The jurors evidently were convinced that the accused were guilty of killing an unarmed man. Now 11 of them co-operate in procuring their pardon.

Does Texas want us to believe that down there murder is a mere misdemeanor?

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

DISCIPLINING THE HOME.

From the Omaha World-Herald.

THE young folks, it appears, manage to keep just one jump ahead of school boards, superintendents, principals and teachers in matters of dress. In consequence the school authorities spend an endless amount of time which might be devoted to matters strictly educational in fussing about how the youngsters are to be clothed. And the only result is that what they fuss about this year becomes standard good form next year and some other innovation appears to provoke worry.

A few years ago, when ankles were perfectly proper, the more advanced misses caused scandal with their calves. Now that calves are perfectly proper the worry is all about knees. When knees cease to be novel you may depend upon youth's adaptation of some new feature of the changing mode to keep the pedagogues in a state of scandalized disapproval.

That it is difficult and perhaps even impossible to set definite metes and bounds to a proper school room discipline may be admitted. But it seems as though the limit had been considerably exceeded when the attempt is made to extend that discipline from the pupil in the school room to a discipline of the great American home. And that is just what much of this bickering about clothes amounts to. It seems to be directed toward an objection to something which is sanctioned by parents who probably have just as much sense and just as much inherent decency as the average school board member or superintendent.

The tendency of the public school seems more and more toward an interference with the pupil's home life. It concerns itself no longer exclusively with his education, but undertakes to regulate his diet, his play, his health, his dress, his moral development and even sometimes his religion. It is small wonder that the cost of education is mounting to figures that are becoming prohibitive with no appreciable results toward turning out pupils any better grounded in the fundamentals of education than were their fathers and mothers before them.

SECRET DIPLOMACY.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

SECRET diplomacy almost always defeats its own purposes, even when the matter is of minor importance. The United States a few months ago negotiated a treaty with the Republic of Panama, a summary of which was given to the press in July. For some presumably valid reason, it was agreed that the text should not be published until congressional action had been taken. That was enough to arouse curiosity. It did. What purports to have been the text of the treaty was soon printed—in the Heraldo de Cuba of Havana and in the Costa Rican journal Reportorio Americano. Copies of these papers were confiscated in Panama early this week. Summaries have been published in Paris and commented upon there. Finally the text has found its way into Panama newspapers. All the world, with exception of the United States, it appears, knows all about this treaty. This is the sort of thing that arouses suspicion, even though ground for it does not exist. It is secret diplomacy at its clumsiest and most ridiculous.

CHRISTMAS CARDS.

From the Worcester Telegram.

AN attack on Christmas and New Year's cards is being made by a Rhode Island citizen. In a letter to the Providence Journal he says the thousands of dollars spent for these cards could be used to provide food and clothing for many a shivering child; that the mailing of the cards puts an unfair burden on the postal clerks and carriers; that many people send the cards chiefly because they are too lazy to write letters; and that many who cannot really afford to do so will spend several dollars in buying cards to mail to a "topheavy list of friends and acquaintances." As a substitute he makes this suggestion: "Personally, instead of Christmas cards from friends here in Providence, I would be really pleased if each one would, instead, telephone me on Christmas to inquire how everything is going and to express a wish for a merry Christmas."

Isn't that a brilliant idea, to have everybody telephoning everybody else on Christmas morning? As if the telephone exchanges were not busy enough already.

BASEBALL AND BLACK SHIRTS.

From the Baltimore Sun.

AN arresting story is told by the one-time dispenser of A. E. F. supplies in post-war Rome. Four carloads of baseball bats, the tools of America's tranquillizing sport, were used by Black Shirts as weapons in their forcible seizure of power. Present difficulties in the League of Nations are thus apparently due to the fact that there were no baseballs with the bats. But perhaps it is just as well. If there had been, Italy might now be making the members nervous in one of the other two big leagues.

Disease is being conquered, and they're lengthening life's span;
And should their present progress hold, we need not die at all,
Although at times that prospect is sufficient to appal;
The ills to which our flesh is heir are conquered one by one,
The doctors labor patiently, and germs we learn to shun;
At present, we must have a war for death to take its toll,
But what will heal the smarting wounds on my too tender soul?

Perhaps you think me happy, since I play a lighter part,
But clownish grins and sportive quips may hide a broken heart—
(I think that last one of the best of lines I ever wrote—
I hope 'twill be remembered, if by chance you wish to quote).

But what will heal the smarting wounds on my too tender soul?

munitions and further financial support from the Mexican Government. These charges the Mexican Government has denied.

When the United States refused to recognize Chamorro, the Central American republics followed the example, citing the 1923 treaty of peace and amity.

Chamorro, apparently disheartened, resigned and gave his support to Diaz, who he believed would be persona grata to the United States State Department. The election was held by the National Assembly, and was not by direct popular vote. This election was strictly in accordance with the Constitution.

Conservative agents here emphasize that all the old Liberal representatives ousted by Chamorro, were invited to return to this National Assembly. Nevertheless, these agents reply vaguely when asked how many actually returned. The Liberal propagandists insist that Diaz was elected by a "rump" Parliament, and ignore the assertion of the State Department that Diaz obtained an overwhelming majority when only a bare majority was needed.

Election of Diaz Recognized as Valid.

This election, according to the Conservatives, was constitutional in every respect. It did satisfy the United States State Department and in the latter part of November Diaz was recognized.

The recognition brought on the Mexican complications and the Olds incident, which was exposed by the Post-Dispatch.

Coupled with the State Department's recognition of Diaz there were news stories carried by the Associated Press, picturing a bolshevistic hegemony being set up in Central America by the Calles Government of Mexico.

But no authority was given for the alarming assertions. The Post-Dispatch later ascertained and published the fact that Assistant Secretary of State Robert E. Olds had inspired the report, which he had hoped all the press associations would carry over their wires without disclosing the source of information. The Nicaraguan recognition had given him his opportunity.

Immediately after being recognized, Diaz called upon the United States for help, declaring that the Sacasa forces were being aided by the Mexican Government. The inspired State Department story covered more ground and said all Central America was threatened.

The State Department has refused to disclose what information it has regarding the alleged bolshevistic activities in Nicaragua and Central America of the Mexican government. Some administration newspapers have gone so far as to say that the activities were initiated by the Soviet government at Moscow. These assertions gave the Soviet trade representative in Washington the opportunity to say that the Soviet government had had no more to do with the political affairs in Nicaragua than it had with the election of Will Rogers as Mayor of Beverly Hills, Cal.

Officials See Red a Long Way Off.

But apparently the "specter of bolshevism" in Central America is no joking matter with the State Department. The officials who refused to let little Anna Lerner come into the United States because she might overthrow the Government, who refused a visa to the Countess Karolyi and the communist member of the British Parliament, Saklatvala, can see "red" farther away than most persons.

Under the rules of diplomatic procedure, no matter what damaging information the State Department has regarding these alleged activities of Mexico, it cannot make it public directly. Theoretically Mexico is a friendly, sovereign nation and such action by the State Department would be construed as an unfriendly act. Senator George H. Moses (Rep.) of New Hampshire has come to the rescue and introduced a resolution, now pending before the Foreign Relations Committee, calling for this information, "if not incompatible with the public interest."

Thus indirectly and obliquely the State Department can make public whatever information it deems proper and yet remain true to the diplomatic traditions.

Borah's Position Not Quite Clear.

Borah, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, is not in complete sympathy with the State Department but it is difficult to say just what his position is. He has publicly accepted the assurance of Secretary Kellogg that the marines will not intervene in Nicaraguan political affairs and in the same breath stated that he was making an investigation of his own to see whether they were there to further American business and financial interests.

On the constitutional issues involved between Diaz and Sacasa, Borah prefers Diaz, while admitting Sacasa may have a claim. Taking a pragmatic attitude, Borah declares that the election of Diaz was as constitutional as any election in Central America could be.

On the Mexican angle of the situation, Borah is directly opposed to the State Department. He insists that since Mexico and the Central American republics are sovereign states, the United States has no authority to interfere in any arrangements they might make among themselves. If the United States is to interfere, it must first announce a frankly imperial policy and be prepared to establish, by force, if necessary, United States suzerainty over all countries from the Rio Grande to the Panama Canal, he declares.

This policy, he says, would at least be honest and would save the dignity of the United States, which would no longer be compelled to intrigue with and against lesser Powers.

No Solution in Sight Yet.

No one in Washington dares predict the outcome of the present imbroglio. The Diaz agents have no solution. They admit the United States cannot intervene without an act of Congress, which, they say, is impossible to obtain.

Hard-boiled American imperialists who believe in the "dollar diplomacy" of Secretary Knox, declare that the logical step is complete disarmament of the Sacasa forces and active support of Diaz. They admit this is a mere hope.

The Liberal representatives claim that the United States forces should be withdrawn. This, they say, would result in an immediate victory for the Sacasa forces and the Nicaraguan people because without American support the Diaz forces would be virtually powerless.

The Liberal proposal throws the State Department and the dollar diplomatists into a horrible fright. A Sacasa victory is the last thing they want, for, if their reasoning is to be accepted, it would push Nicaragua into the waiting arms of Mexico—just what the State Department is trying to avoid. If Sacasa wins he would naturally be grateful to the Calles Government, whether he has received material aid from that source or not. He certainly owes nothing to the United States Government, which has declared neutral zones on the eastern coast, just where they would prove embarrassing to him. Even if the United States forces have been as neutral as Secretary Kellogg has claimed, their mere presence has given moral support to the Diaz Government.

Mexico's Moves Also in the Dark.

If Mexico has been interested in Nicaragua, as charged by Diaz agents, it has played the same obscured game as the American State Department. Where the American administration has denied the Sacasa charges, the Calles administration has denied the Diaz charges.

The disinterested observer can only hope for a showdown.

One thing is certain, however. If Secretary Kellogg has a Nicaraguan policy, he has succeeded in hiding it from observers in Washington, including members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who are expected to be informed on all phases of American foreign policy. If he withdraws the American forces now, as demanded by Senator Wheeler, Diaz will probably be defeated and the prestige of the United States, now at a discount in Central and South America, will get a severe jolt; if he adopts an out-and-out imperial policy with armed intervention in behalf of Diaz, he will be compelled to repudiate and explain some of his most recent statements.

If he were the British Foreign Minister he would have to do a lot of explaining before the House of Commons. In England, he would be compelled to take responsibility for all his actions and only in a most delicate situation would he be allowed to escape a rigid cross-examination on why and wherefore of his policy. If his policy did not suit a majority of the members, out he would go.

As Secretary of State of the United States he escapes this ordeal and he gets only a mild admonition from the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee that he must be vigilant to see that the commander of the United States forces in Nicaragua "does not allow the United States to be tricked into intervention."

INSULL TO ADDRESS BANQUET

Samuel Insull, public utilities magnate of Chicago, will be the principal speaker at a banquet Jan. 12, at Hotel Chase, under auspices of the St. Louis Convention, Publicity and Tourist Bureau. His subject will be "Civic Leadership, Civic Development and Civic Responsibility.

The dinner is being given to explain the work of the bureau. Others who will make short speeches are Mayor Miller, former Mayor Kiel, H. M. Bixby, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Dan Hyland, president of the Gavel Club, and Paul J. Wielandy.

clared: "They seem to me spiders' webs, inadequate to control the dominant facts.

"We have to deal with an office that owes its existence to Congress and that Congress may abolish tomorrow. Its duration and the pay attached to it depend on Congress alone. Congress alone confers on the President the power to appoint, and at any time may transfer the power to other hands. With such power over its own creation, I have no more trouble in believing that Congress has power to prescribe its term of life, free of interference, than I have in accepting the undoubted power of Congress to decree its end. The power of the President to see that the laws are executed is a duty that does not go beyond the laws."

If this be considered spirited language for a Judge to use toward the opinion of his colleagues, observe the following from the dissenting opinion of Justice McReynolds:

"It is utterly impossible not to feel that, if this unlimited power of removal does exist, it may be made, in the hands of a bold and designing man, one of high ambition and feeble principles, an instrument of the worst oppression and the most vindictive vengeance. The President should promote and not subvert orderly government. The evils which followed the practice of dismissing civil officers as caprice or interest dictated, are known to all. It brought the public service to a low estate."

Clay and Webster Both Rejected the Doctrine.

Whereupon he quoted what Daniel Webster said on the subject of limiting the power of the President to make dismissals: "I deem this degree of regulation necessary, unless we are willing to submit all these officers to an absolute and perfectly irresponsible removing power, a power which, as reecntly exercised, tends to turn the whole body of public officers into partisans, dependants, favorites, sycophants and man-worshippers."

And the even more fervent words of Henry Clay: "It has been argued that there is a sovereign power, an inherent power and that it belongs to the President. If that is true, the people of the United States have totally misconceived the nature of their Government. Sovereign power is supreme power, and in no instance is there any supreme power vested in the President.

"Inherent power, indeed! Whence is it derived? The Constitution created the office of President, and made it just what it is. It had no powers previous to its existence. Do gentlemen mean by inherent power such power as is exercised by monarchs in other countries? If so, let them avow it!"

Enumerating a long list of the most important public offices affected by the decision, Justice McReynolds continued: "We are now told, in effect, that every one of these officers holds his place subject to the President's pleasure or caprice. The suggestion that different considerations may apply to judicial officers, I regard as a mere smoke screen.

"If the phrase 'executive power' includes the power now claimed, many others heretofore totally unexpected may lie there awaiting future discovery, and no human intelligence can define the field of the President's permissable activities. A masked battery of constructive powers would complete the destruction of liberty."

Decision "Revolutionary," McReynolds Declares.

High and fierce, the Justice's fiery pen rides onward to an even more thunderous conclusion:

"It is admitted that the President may remove with the assent of Congress; but the present theory is that he may override the declared will of that body. This goes beyond any practice hitherto followed or approved, it conflicts with the history of the Constitution, and with the construction approved by Congress and repeatedly sanctioned by this court. To adopt it would be revolutionary."

In singling the phrase "executive power" out of the Constitution, and investing it with such profound and far-reaching meanings, the majority of the court did something which had been attempted before, although never with such sweeping consequences. As seen from the history of Congressional debates, however, the question was not a new one. It was 137 years ago that Congressman Stone uttered words which Justice McReynolds quoted in his dissent:

"Gentlemen talk of the implied power of the executive. How far does it go? What are its limits? Does it extend to absolute monarchy? Or is it confined to restrained monarchy? My conception may be dull, but this general talk of 'executive power' leaves no complete idea in my mind."

In concluding his opinion, one of the most remarkable ever handed from that bench, Justice McReynolds bluntly accused his colleagues of having nullified the intention of the men who framed the Constitution, of having overturned the construction which had existed ever since Chief Justice Marshall's day, of having overriden Congress, and of having profoundly altered the fundamental nature of the Government.

Brandeis Searches Intent of the Fathers.

In a shorter and slightly less vigorous opinion, Justice Brandeis supported the conclusions of Justice McReynolds. The argument advanced by Chief Justice Taft, that the power to dismiss must accompany the power to appoint, was an argument based on "efficiency," Justice Brandeis observed.

"But," he went on, the doctrine of the separation of the powers between the three branches of Government was never intended to promote efficiency; it was intended to prevent tyranny. It was not to avoid friction, but by the inevitable friction incident to such a division, to save the people from autocracy."

He concluded with the following reference to the convention which drafted the Constitution:

"Nothing in support of the claim of uncontrollable power (for the President) can be inferred from the silence of the convention on the subject of removal. The outstanding fact remains that every specific proposal to confer uncontrollable power on the President was rejected. In America, as in England, the conviction prevailed then that the people must look to representative assemblies for the protection of their liberties."

Puts Power of Congress In President's Hands

Let us come now to the practical aspects of the decision, as seen by Senator Norris (Prog. Rep.) of Nebraska, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, and one of the outstanding constitutional authorities of the Senate.

"It means," he declared to the writer, "that the President can usurp some of the most important powers of Congress. Take the case of the Interstate Commerce Commission: it exists to exercise a power delegated to it by Congress. The power to regulate interstate commerce is one possessed exclusively by Congress. In order that it might be scientifically and properly carried out, Congress created the Interstate Commerce Commission to perform the work. It authorized the President to appoint the Commissioners, but only with the Senate's consent, and authorized him to remove them only with the Senate's consent.

"Under this decision the President can remove any or all the members of the commission at any time he chooses, without consulting the Senate. Every intelligent man knows that the power to dismiss is the power to control. If a President desires a change in railroad rates, and the present commission will not make the change, he can dismiss it and appoint one that will.

"In other words, the President acquires the power to regulate interstate commerce, which the Constitution gave to Congress alone.

"Precisely the same thing is true of the Shipping Board and the Federal Trade Commission. They were created to act as agents of Congress. They belong to the legislative branch of the Government. But if the President has arbitrary and uncontrolled power to dismiss them, any sane person knows that the President will control them. In short, Congress is shorn of the powers which they exercise, and those powers are added to the already kingly prerogatives of the President. Thus gradually and surely, the encroachment of the executive upon the legislative branch of the Government proceeds."

Proposal to Shift Appointing Power

Accordingly the question arises: What, if anything, can be done about it? The Supreme Court has spoken, and from its decisions there is no appeal—at least no judicial appeal.

It will be recalled that the majority opinion admitted that when appointments are made by department heads, and not by the President, Congress can fix the conditions under which the appointed officers can be removed. Only the President has the unlimited power of dismissal. Hence Senator Norris and several of his colleagues intend to introduce in some form or other, amendments which will take the appointing power away from the President, and vest it in department heads.

Thus, for example, members of the Interstate Commerce Commission would be appointed by the Secretary of Commerce; the Tariff Commission by the Secretary of the Treasury; the Shipping Board by the Secretary of Commerce or the Secretary of the Navy, and so on. With the appointing power thus transferred from the President to officials whose own offices were created by act of Congress, it is admitted that Congress could define the conditions under which those appointees could be removed.

Divided Opinion as to Senate's Rights.

Whether Congress could require the consent of the Senate for such dismissals, however, is a debated question. Some Senators believe it could. Senator Norris, on the other hand, believes the Supreme Court has held that senatorial consent cannot be required, even when appointments are made by department heads. However, Congress could require that no department head could dismiss an appointed officer without first filing charges and affording a public hearing.

Thomas Jefferson feared the stealthy encroachment of the judiciary upon the executive and legislative fields, "until all powers shall be usurped, and all consolidated into one." But there are many nowadays who believe that the more pressing danger is from the executive department. Gradually after the Civil War, and swiftly since the World War, the tremendous powers of the President have been broadened and strengthened at the expense of Congress, and more and more Congress tends to become a mere rubber stamp for the administration. The conquest of the House of Representatives is almost complete; the decision of the Supreme Court in the Myers case will hasten the capitulation of the Senate.

Budget System Urged as State Costs Rise 1200 Pct.

Commissioner, who will be charged with the duty of preparing recommendations for an executive budget and with power to prevent departments from spending more money than the Legislature appropriates for their use.

Substance of Proposal.

The Administrative Board, of which the Governor would be chairman, would have four other members, commissioners, to be designated by the Governor. Its duties would be to act as a board of appeal to adjust the work of the departments, and where differences arise between two commissioners or directors, to determine the issue. The board also would have power to transfer employes from one department to another, thus utilizing employes of any department in another in rush periods.

The nine departments proposed are:

Department of Agriculture—To consist of the Board of Agriculture, one member from each of the Congressional districts, as at present, to be appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate, and a Director of Agriculture to be appointed by the board. In this department would be grouped all of the activities of the State touching agriculture and the marketing of farm products, with the exception of the experimental and educational work of the College of Agriculture of the State University.

Department of Conservation and Development—To be headed by a Director of Conservation, under whom would be centered all the State activities concerning fish and game, geology and mines, State parks, forestry and every other function of government dealing with conservation and development of the resources of the State.

Department of Finance.

Department of Finance and Taxation—The State Tax Commission would be retained with most of its present duties, and with the Director of Finance to be appointed by the Governor as ex-officio chairman. Under this official would come the duties of preparing the budget, supervising expenditures, purchasing supplies, collection of State taxes, except the personal and property tax collected by the counties for the State, and, in fact, every financial function of the State Government except those specified by the Constitution for the Treasurer and Auditor, elective officials.

Department of Health—The State Board of Health would be retained and a Director of Health appointed. All matters of public health and sanitation would come within the jurisdiction of the director.

Department of Labor—The Workmen's Compensation Commission would be a part of this department and a Director of Labor would be appointed. He would have jurisdiction over industrial inspection, free employment branches, mine inspection and all services of the State touching labor.

Military Department — To be headed by the Adjutant-General and to function as the present Military Department.

Department of Trade.

Department of Trade and Commerce—The Public Service Commission would be retained with all its present powers and duties. A Director of Trade and Commerce would be appointed by the Governor to have supervision over State bank inspection, insurance and grain and warehouse inspection.

Department of Public Welfare—There would be a Board of Public Welfare of five members to act in an advisory capacity to the Director of Public Welfare, who would have control over all penal and eleemosynary institutions, soldiers' homes, almshouses and State charities.

In some one of these nine departments would be placed every function now performed by the State.

While the detailed plan worked out by the association must be taken as a whole in considering the good that might come from it, there is no doubt that the proposed Budget Commissioner is the key to the success of the entire scheme. If the Legislature should refuse to create that job, it might as well junk the reform program, as the benefits that might be expected from the whole would diminish materially without a budget. And to be really effective the commissioner must be given the power to supervise and limit expenditures to the amounts appropriated. This the association has sought to do.

The Present System.

Under the present system the State Tax Commission makes recommendations to the Legislature as to the amounts needed for all State departments and institutions, but the commission has no power over expenditures. The appropriations, theoretically made by the Legislature, actually are made by the Appropriations Committees of the Senate and House. These committees meet after the Legislature convenes, without any information other than the report of the Tax Commission and the demands of the heads of institutions and departments. In a few weeks they submit the appropriation bills to the Legislature, and they are rushed through virtually in the form prepared by the committees.

The result of this system is that department heads who have influential friends on the committees generally get all they want, while departments which at some time may have incurred the enmity of one or more members of the committee get less than they actually need.

Under the proposed plan the Budget Commissioner, after careful study, would prepare for the Governor a budget of every financial need, showing just what revenue might be expected and just what the actual demands on the revenue would be. The Governor would go over this and send it to the Legislature with his recommendations.

Then if the Legislature appropriated amounts in excess of the budget recommendations, the responsibility would be definitely fixed on the Legislature.

Veto Power Unchanged.

After the appropriations were made, the Budget Commissioner would have power to prevent expenditures in excess of the amounts appropriated. It is proposed that he be given authority to approve all vouchers, thus limiting legal expenditures to the vouchers bearing his approval. This would mean that the State Treasurer could not pay out any money without the O K of the Budget Commissioner.

This official would be the most powerful in the State with the exception of the Governor, and being an appointee of the Governor, the responsibility for economical administration in his hands would be centered with exactness on the chief executive. There is now no such centering of responsibility.

Notwithstanding the association has been extremely practical in providing that none of the changes shall be effective until the terms of the present office holders expire in 1929, its program is certain to encounter much opposition.

Cause for Delaying Plan.

While it might be said that if the plan is a good one, the quicker it is put in operation the better, undoubtedly the experience of former Gov. Hyde had in 1921 in attempting to consolidate departments influenced the decision to permit the present officials to serve out their terms. Hyde sought to abolish certain jobs immediately and those holding the jobs circulated referendum petitions, which held up and eventually defeated the entire program.

The opposition that will come from official sources probably will be from State officers who expect to be candidates for re-election or candidates for some other office, and who will object to giving up any of the prerogatives of the offices. The Governor is ineligible to succeed himself and there would be no reason why he or anybody who might aspire to the governorship, would oppose the changes, as the Governor would have more power, and likewise more responsibility, than he has under the present system.

The bills to accomplish the plans of the association are in preparation, and will be ready for introduction soon after the Legislature convenes.

MORRIS PLAN BANKS LOANED $160,000,000 DURING YEAR

As an indication of the growth in industrial banking in the United States representatives of the Morris Plan Banks yesterday made public statistics showing that during the calendar year of 1926 $160,000,000 was loaned; $98,000,000 represents the working capital of all Morris Plan companies, $62,000,000 is invested in Morris Plan savings and $850,000,000 has been loaned on their plan since start of business.

The Industrial Loan Co., 710 Chestnut street, the local Morris Plan bank, made loans of more than $7,000,000 in 1926, an increase of 20 per cent over 1925. Despite this increase in volume, the outstanding amounts payable on matured loans are less this December than they were last. In 14 years it has made 189,612 loans, aggregating $39,948,152.17. The only Morris Plan banks to exceed this amount are those in New York and Detroit.

SHAW 'IDEAL STAGE MANAGER'

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—George Bernard Shaw is the ideal stage manager. Sir Johnson Forbes-Robertson says so, and he ought to know, because he worked under a good many. Speaking at the annual dinner of the Hypocrits Amateur Dramatic Society, of which he is president, Sir Johnston said: "I have been rehearsed by all the leading dramatists of the day, from Charles Reade, the novelist, and Tom Taylor down to those of modern days, but of them all the most able and wisest was George Bernard Shaw. I told him so once.

"I said, 'My dear Shaw, I am grateful to you. You have swept Henry Arthur Jones, Pinero and others off the stage. You are the ideal stage manager because you allow the individuality of the player to press through.'"

Natural Glade in Shaw's Garden Is Setting for Moore-Rodes Wedding

IN a green enchanted glade, Miss Harriet Moore, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George T. Moore, became the bride at noon yesterday of Boyle Owsley Rodes. The lovely sylvan setting was built adjoining the spacious Moore home at the edge of the Missouri Botanical Gardens, of which Mr. Moore is director. A great stone-flagged open veranda was inclosed and heated and its walls hidden by masses of smilax, while the ceiling was thickly covered with evergreen and dotted with lights. Palms and feathery ferns in abundance filled the corners. In the center of the glade at either side two giant trees broke through the masonry of the floor, their branches seeming to fade into the green of the ceiling, and about their trunks were circular beds of syprea-like white blossoms.

The bridal party walked through the reception hall and entered the marriage bower by wide steps marked at the sides by ferns, and walked down a white-carpeted aisle to the opposite side, where a natural slope of green growing things gave a perfect background for the ceremony. Dozens of velvety [illegible] white roses arranged in two tall wicker vases, one at either side of the improvised altar, comprised the only floral decorations.

The service, attended only by members of the families and close friends, was read by the Rev. George R. Dodson of the Church of the Unity, and the Rev. Dr. John W. Mac[illegible] of the Second Presbyterian Church, made the prayer.

The stately beauty and queenly bearing of the bride were enhanced by her wedding gown of ivory satin, exquisite in its simplicity, adorned with rose point lace, heirlooms in both families. A bertha of the lace finished the rounded neck line, and dropped to a low oval at the back, and more of the lace formed the end of the long, close-fitting sleeves. The gown itself, which was quite [illegible], was made on straight lines to the hips where it flared into a winged train which [illegible] into a fan-shape on the floor. A rose point lace wedding veil depended from a tiny flared coronet of rosepoint lace caught at the side with orange blossoms. She carried white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Woods King of Cleveland, who served as matron of honor, was gowned in beige georgette trimmed with the same material in a deep orange, and carried Pernet roses and iris. Her slippers were dull gold. Jane Hudson Carpenter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Oliver Carpenter Jr., the flower girl, wore a green frock. Nelson Rodes of Danville, Ky., was his brother's best man, and Woods King, and Thomas Gaunt Moore, brother of the bride, were ushers.

A reception followed the ceremony. The large rooms on the lower floor of the house, with their lovely Colonial furniture, were covered with smilax, and cream-colored roses in vases and on the reception table completed the decorations.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodes will sail Jan. 5 for Naples, Italy, and upon their return in the early spring will occupy an apartment in the Greystone, Newstead and McPherson avenues.

The out-of-town guests included Mrs. Charles H. Rodes of Danville, mother of the bridegroom; his sister, Mrs. Ewing Harris of Louisville and Mr. Harris, visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. Lionberger Davis of Brentmoor; another sister, Mrs. M. Moore of Louisville, and Mr. Moore, and Miss Amelia Yerkes of Danville, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burkham; Prof. and Mrs. Harold Bradley, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McKittrick Jones. Mr. and Mrs. Woods King are with Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter.

The bride was graduated from Mary Institute and Smith College. She made her debut three seasons ago and is a member of the Imperial and the Junior League. Old St. Louis Families Hold Traditional New Year's Receptions

AN OLD-FASHIONED custom of calling on New Year's day, unchanged by the innovations introduced into modern entertaining, is still popular among a number of St. Louis families where it has endured for generations. Among the larger receptions yesterday was one at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Maffitt, 4315 Westminster place, who kept their house open from 1 to 6 o'clock, in accordance with their annual practice. Such parties at the Maffitt home are institutions, begun years ago by Mrs. Maffitt's father, the late Julius S. Walsh, a most genial host, and continued out of respect to him. The old Walsh silver is used and friends of each generation in the family attend. Receiving with the Maffitts yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. Jack Geraghty of Minneapolis, the latter formerly Miss Marie Walsh, a cousin of Mrs. Maffitt, who are their guests for the holidays.

Many of the receptions are given from 11 to 1 o'clock, as was that of Mr. and Mrs. Herman von Schrenk, who also followed an annual custom. Other morning hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Church Bixby of Southmoor, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Tupper of Wydown boulevard and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Harry Class, who entertained for their niece, Miss Martha Love. Miss Gertrude Catlin, Miss Anne Kennard Wallace, Miss Mary Carter and Miss Clarissa Dyer served. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Gwynne Evans of 10 Hortense place, with their daughter, Miss Julia, received more than 200 guests. The house was decorated with holly and Christmas colors. At 4 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Foster Bixby received friends at their home on the Clayton and Conway roads, while simultaneously Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Corby had a similar affair at their new home on the Price road. Mr. and Mrs. Douglas B. Houser kept open house from 4 to 6 o'clock.

There was dancing on the lower floor of the home from 5 to 7 o'clock.

"Rose Marie" Back With A St. Louis Girl as Star; "Cocoanuts" Stays On

The "Jazz Singer," With George Jessel and "Laff That Off" to Follow at Local Houses.

THE pretty and tuneful "Rose Marie," which has been seen here several times before, comes back to the Shubert-Rialto tonight for a week's stay, this time with a St. Louis girl, Ethel Louise Wright, who has had a sudden rise to stardom, in the title role. Miss Wright is the daughter of A. D. Wright, a building contractor, who lives at 6120 Virginia avenue. Her mother died when she was a little girl, and as there were a number of children the duties of keeping house fell upon her. These duties, her father says, she performed well and sang as she went about them.

It was during this time that Ethel Louise decided that some day she would be a singer on the stage. She was encouraged by her family, and her father sent her to St. Joseph's Academy, where she learned to play the piano and took her first singing lessons. She was graduated in 1918. She had also learned stenography at the academy, so she went to work. After a few weeks in one situation, she was given employment by the Mercantile Trust Co., in the trust department, and remained there for five years. During this time she saved her money and took singing lessons.

In New York there is the Juillard Foundation, made by a wealthy Frenchman for the purpose of aiding deserving young women who are ambitious to pursue a musical career. In the spring of 1923 Ethel Louise took a hasty trip to New York to appear before the board of examiners. She returned to St. Louis and went about her work as usual, but in a short time a letter came with the tidings that she had passed the necessary tests and had been awarded one of the Juillard scholarships. In the summer of that year she resigned her position and went to New York to take up her studies.

Lean days followed. She eked out her slender means by going in the chorus, doing odd jobs at singing and stenography. Later she went to Atlanta and was in the chorus of the municipal opera company there. Upon her return to New York she was given a small part in "Princess Flavia." This was followed last spring by an offer to tour New England with a "Firefly" company. But Arthur Hammerstein had heard about her and signed her for one of his "Rose Marie" companies.

WHY are the Marx Brothers, the comedians in "The Cocoanuts," which begins its second week at the American Theater tonight, using nicknames, instead of their real names, is the question asked many times a day, both by mail and in person.

The answer is simple, says "Groucho," who always acts as spokesman for the group.

"We want to be different and attract unusual attention," he says. "There are five of the Marx Brothers," he lets you know, "but my brother Milton, known as 'Gummo,' never liked the stage. He quit us for good when the war broke out and went into the ladies' dress business. The rest of us stuck to the stage and always play together. We wouldn't know how to behave apart.

"'Harpo' gets his nickname from the fact that he plays the harp and has always done so in his specialties. Me, that's 'Groucho,' they gave that nickname because I always play older roles than my brothers, usually an elderly man with a comical grouch. 'Chico' was given his nickname on account of his fondness for poultry, while 'Zeppo' was named for a freak in a circus which visited a farm where we used to live as boys.

"Some people think we are brothers for stage purposes only, but I can assure everybody that we are honest-to-goodness brothers, and that's been half the fun of our stage work. There's about two years between the age of each of us."

The National Players at the Empress this week present "White Cargo." This drama of the South Seas was written by Leon Gordon, who appeared in it here at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater a year ago and who now is playing in this same production in Australia.

Daphine Pollard, petite comedienne, returns to the Orpheum today after an absence of five years, in which time she was winning additional laurels in the English music halls and in the London Hippodrome revues. A native of Australia, Daphne became a star on the Pacific Coast at the age of six and has maintained her stardom continuously since then. She has played here in "The Passing Show of 1915" and in an edition of the "Greenwich Village Follies." Her company is known in theatrical parlance as "low." She impersonates slavey types and her present repertoire includes songs and character delineations. Another feature of the bill will be Solly Ward, late comedy star of Irving Berlin's "Music Box Revue." He will present a humorous travesty on the vacation hysteria, entitled, "Off to Maine." Ward appeared at the Orpheum last season in a sketch called "Babies."

On next Sunday night, "Laff That Off," Don Mullallay's comedy, which played here previously at the American Theater, comes to the Shubert Rialto for a week's engagement. The present company includes Marion Wells, Pauline Drake, Hattie Foley, Clarence Oliver, William Gargan, Norval Keedwell and Jack Matthews.

Second Thoughts
ON First Night

By Alexander Woollcott

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.

THIS spoiled, careless city's standing supply of charm and loveliness was increased perceptibly on Monday night when the curtain of Chanin's Theater rose on the sight and sound of Yvonne Printemps. This is the fair, adroit, supremely capable young French actress who is the wife of Sacha Guitry and the center of his stage. For her now all his plays are written or rewritten and the dainty "Mozart" can be seen and heard here at last for what it was meant to be always—just an exquisite and enhancing setting for the art and wonder of Yvonne Printemps.

But, for reasons of sentiment and guile and showmanship, he chose to have the rising of that first American curtain find her not in the powdered periwig, satin kneebreeches and buckled shoon of the young Mozart, but in the foamy, billowing lace and silk of Marie Duplessis, the cool, sweet courtesan who once set the heart of the younger Dumas a-thumping and so, in the whirligig of the theater, became the Camille over whom our mothers and grandmothers wept, in their time, a very Atlantic of sympathetic tears.

As a prelude to his first engagement in America Guitry presented on Monday night the second act of his beloved "Deburau," his tender, rueful comedy of the theater which was done so vilely into English by Granville Barker and so handsomely produced here by Belasco a good six years ago. Its second act is laid in the house of Marie Duplessis, just as she was when she loved young Dumas and bore him a book.

EIGHTY years ago this girl reigned for a little time in Paris. Many men loved her, among them the younger Dumas, and when she died the world and his wife went to the sale of all her pretty things—auctioned at once to quiet her shrill despited creditors. You will find an account of that sale in the letters the wide-eyed and somewhat scandalized Mr. Dickens wrote home to his folks. When, in no time, she loved and lost and died under the name of Marguerite Gautier, in "La Dame aux Camelias" of the younger Dumas, it was the mannerly thing in Paris to assume that this nice young man had gleaned his material by a scholarly study of the letters and withered flowers which went under the hammer at that famous sale. But really he had known and loved her in his fashion.

It was not so deep a tie that the worried elder Dumas had not been able to sever it by the ingenious device of giving the girl a little something—25 louis, perhaps—and advancing his son enough money for a jaunt to Spain. So many lives are thus altered by someone providing the car fare to Spain, just as so many lives are held together by lack of the price of a railroad ticket.

I know a great lady beaming tonight at the head of her husband's table who had meant to leave him forever one day some years ago but could not quite manage it that day because her things had not yet come home from the cleaner's. One wonders how many homes are kept intact every day in the year because the things haven't come home from the cleaners. But that is another story. Several other stories.

WHEN the younger Dumas came back to Paris his fair lady had died. His love for her grew as he got to thinking about it and, after heaping her grave in Montmartre Cemetery with the white camellias which she always had worn, he worked himself up to the point of writing that celebrated novel and play which had so long and tough a life in the theaters of the world during the nineteenth century. By some preposterous fancy of the first translator, she was renamed Camille in

Fewer Productions With More Failures Marked Past Theatrical Season

Stock Companies on the Increase Throughout the Country Which May Lead to Revival of Old Visiting Star System.

By NIE.

THE past year in the show business has been looked upon as a poor one and reference has frequently been made to the fact that fewer companies were being sent upon the road. Many shrewd showmen profess to believe that in a few years more there will be no road at all and actual figures show a decided falling off in new productions and in failures which "flopped" early in New York.

Let it be remarked here, however, that in St. Louis, as elsewhere, the good shows are doing business as usual and the present season is only a bad one for the type of offering which used to "get by" before the movies came along and provided something else—not always something better—to see.

EQUITY Magazine, the organ of the Actor's Equity Association, taking stock of the situation, points out that for the period from Aug. 1, 1926, to Nov. 15, 1926, there were.

Companies engaged in and through New York (productions only)	282
Companies still running	190
Companies closed	92
Compared with the same date last year:
Companies engaged in and through New York	298
Companies still running	221
Companies closed	77

This comparison indicates that this season there have been 16 fewer companies organized and 13 more companies closed than in the same period last season.

Against this, however, the figures on stock companies show a decided gain. On Nov. 15, 1925, there were 94 stock companies in operation. In 1926 on that date there were 130, an increase of 36 companies.

Between Nov. 15, 1926, and today, while the exact figures are not available, the number of failures in New York has been large. The increase in the number of stock companies around the country may be taken as an index of what is happening and points, perhaps vaguely, to a return to the old system of local organizations which will support visiting stars.

BUSINESS in the movie theaters has dropped considerably in the last few months. Well wishers of the cinema blame this on the tremendous mass of poor pictures but the fact that there are too many motion pictures dividing up the business probably has a great deal to do with the situation.

St. Louis is looked upon as the most "overseated" theater city in the country, yet William Fox is apparently going ahead with his plans to put up a 4000-seat house on Grand avenue. The word "apparently" is used here because the rival movie interest are moving heaven and earth to persuade Mr. Fox to keep hands off. Only on rare occasions has Fox been able to get a first run for his films in St. Louis and it was to provide a showing for the output of his studios that he planned the new theater here.

There is a possibility that Fox will be allowed to buy a big theater already successfully operating in order to keep him from putting 4000 more seats in the city. Just how he would provide 52 pictures suitable for a new house on Grand avenue is hard to see. While he is producing a number of big films he could not hope to do business with his Tom Mix dramas and plays of that sort and if he builds a house of his own he will get no outside help from other producers whose films are all controlled here by rival theaters. On the other hand, if he should buy one of the theaters already built it would probably be sold to him along with enough film to insure him audiences.

WHAT the regular show houses have to combat in the movies which, more and more are putting on extensively varied entertainment, is exemplified at the Ambassador where Paul Whiteman and his band entered upon his second and last week yesterday. Whiteman is one of the highest priced acts on the stage today but the movies can meet his demands without a murmur—and make

Behind the Screens

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 1.

THE New Year is going to see increased production activity among the film makers out here all of the studios starting off at top speed to meet the demands of the movie houses. At the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot Hobart Henley is completing "Tillie the Toiler," the new Marion Davies piece in which the star has the lively role of the slangy stenographer whose adventures are daily recorded in the comic strips. Ernst Lubitsch is planning on starting there soon his long announced "Old Heidelberg," with Ramon Navarro as the student Prince. In work at present is "Diamond Handcuffs," under Edmund Goulding. This is the piece on Park avenue society which was haughtily refused by Mae Murray and Greta Garbo. Pauline Starke took the role. United Artists have some of their productions under way. The Talmadge sisters are busy, Norma in "Camille," under the direction of Fred Niblo, and Constance in "The Vamp of Venice," with her director Marshall Neilan. Mary Pickford is making preparations for her next. Sam Taylor will be the director. So far the announced details on Douglas Fairbanks are only that he is about to do "Two Arabian Nights." D. W. Griffith, whose name is mentioned these days for practically all productions since his hasty divorce from Paramount, is whispered for the Fairbanks picture direction. In New York Sam Goldwyn, Vilma Banky and Rudolph Lothar are conferring on "King Harlequin." Miss Banky and Ronald Colman will have the leads, and Henry King the direction.

Over at the new Burbank studios of First Nationals, Alfred Santell will begin soon on the Richard Barthelmess piece, "The Patent Leather Kid," written by Rupert Hughes.

"The Show" has been selected as the title of John Gilbert's new starring picture in which Renee Adoree plays opposite him for the first time since "The Big Parade."

Director Marshall Neilan is preparing for one of his most spectacular scenes in "The Venus of Venice," Constance Talmadge's latest picture. It is to be a wild gondola chase through the canals of the city, settings for which have been constructed at United Artists studio. The star is supported by Antonio Moreno, in the leading male role; Edward Martindel, Lilyan Tashman, Julanne Johnston and others.

Preparations are being made for two new productions to be started immediately on the Warner Bros.' lot in Hollywood, while six others, now in process of being filmed, are rapidly nearing completion. The two pictures on which work will soon be commenced are "Noah's Ark" and "What Every Girl Should Know," Patsy Ruth Miller's initial starring vehicle.

A. L. Rockett's production, formerly called "Three in Love" will be released under the title of "An Affair of the Follies." Millard Webb is directing this picture with a cast including Lewis Stone, Billie Dove, Lloyd Hughes, Arthur Hoyt and Arthur Stone.

Having completed the screen work in "Homestruck," Viola Dana, F. B. O. star, is now engaged in making "Snappy Jane," from a story originally titled "Salvation Jane."

"Lily of the Laundry" will be the title of a picture featuring Anna Q. Nilsson and which will be released next summer.

The title of "The River" has been definitely changed to "The Notorious Lady." Lewis Stone and Barbara Bedford are featured.

Under the title of "Sheiks and Shebas," Paramount will launch production on a "youth" picture in January. Charles Rogers, graduate of the Paramount Pictures School, who is now appearing in the leading male role of "Wings," will be the leading man. Sterling Holloway, who made his bow before the camera in "Casey at the Eastern Theater Men To Help Fight Proposed Amusement Tax in State

Fear That Other States Would Follow Suit Will Lead to Hard Battle Against Measure.

NEW YORK has heard the cry of the theatrical managers of St. Louis and the rest of Missouri for help in fighting a bill which will probably be introduced at Jefferson City this month, putting a 10 per cent State tax on all amusement tickets—theaters, movies, baseball, boxing and wrestling matches and all other athletic or sporting contests. The Review, a weekly organ published in New York in the interest of the Shubert theatrical enterprises, last Sunday announced that arrangements were being made to fight the bill. Some twenty or more States are said to be preparing like measures but the Missouri bill is scheduled to come up first and the managers consider it of importance that the Missouri tax law be defeated for the possible effect it will have elsewhere.

THE theatrical interests the country over hope that Congress will kill the present Federal amusement tax of 10 per cent on all admission tickets costing more than 75 cents, but if it is not repealed soon there is a chance that Missouri show-goers will have to pay 20 per cent extra for their theater tickets this winter.

Motion picture theater owners are leaving their fight on the proposed bill in the hands of State Senator Joe Mogler, who is the head of the local Movie Managers' Association and the owner of three picture houses in St. Louis. The St. Louis Theatre Managers' Association, composed of the managers of the "legitimate" and vaudeville houses here, discussed plans for a fight on the bill last week but has made no announcement as to what would be done except to say that "every legitimate means would be taken to prevent its adoption."

WHETHER or not the State tax goes on or the Federal tax comes off there is no possibility of the movie customers paying less money for their admissions—and they will pay more if the State tax is added. When the Federal tax on all tickets costing less than 75 cents was removed did the fans reap the benefit? They did not. Yet it was only a few years ago that Marcus Loew, one of the most powerful men in the industry, in an interview in New York, said:

"I am convinced that when the point is reached at which 25 cents is obtained for pictures, you cannot go much beyond that price without becoming prohibitive.

"I believe that I own as many picture theaters as anybody in the country. I believe that I know what I am talking about when I say that when you go much beyond the 25-cent limit, there is doubt of your ability to hold the motion picture public."

Eucharistic Congress Film Showing Tonight

The official motion picture of the twenty-eighth International Eucharistic Congress will go on view tonight at the Odeon, starting a limited engagement.

The film is said to be the first complete cinema record of such an event as the great Chicago pilgrimage of last summer and was made originally for an exclusive showing at the Vatican.

Phonograph Novelty to Be Introduced in Week's Two Symphony Concerts

The Carolling Notes of a Nightingale to Be Offered as a Treat to Music Lovers—Sylvain Noack to Be Soloist Friday Afternoon and Saturday Night.

A PHONOGRAPH, caroling the recorded song of the European nightingale, and a violin made by Giovanni Battista Guadagnini in Turin in 1779—and one of the finest products of that master's workshop—will be heard as solo instruments in the regular Symphony concert programs at the Odeon Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week. The program marks the first use of the phonograph in connection with an orchestral concert in St. Louis.

The violin will play the Bruch Concerto for violin, No. 2, in D minor—one of the greatest of that master's compositions. The phonograph will sing the nightingale's solo as incidental to the symphonic poem, "The Pines of Rome," by Ottarino Respighi.

Sylvain Noack, the Symphony Orchestra's new concert master, plays the Bruch Concerto, as he makes his debut as a concert soloist in St. Louis.

A native of Holland, Mr. Noack began his musical career as a pianist, making his debut at 15, when he played the Mozart D Minor Concerto. As mastery of a second instrument was required by his school, he took up the violin and so rapid were his strides in the study of that instrument that at 17 he was a first violin in the famous Concertgebouw Orchestra at Amsterdam. He had entered the conservatory there at the same time, studying under Andre Spoor, and after graduating with the Prix de'Honneur he studied with Prof. Bram Eldering. Finishing the conservatory course, he became associated with that school as a teacher and for four years was the assistant to Carl Flesch, one of the most renowned of European masters and who is to appear as a soloist with the St. Louis orchestra later this season.

In that association with Flesch he became second violin in the famous Conservatory Quartet, of which the master was first violin. In 1906 Mr. Noack became concert master of the orchestra at Aix-le-Chappelle, and two years later came to Boston as assistant concert master, serving in the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Karl Muck and later Henri Rabaud. In 1919 he became concert master of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, where his success attracted the St. Louis orchestra and brought him to this city.

The program presents Smetana's overture to "The Bartered Bride," one of the most melodic overtures in music. It presents also Respighi's "Pines of Rome" and closes with the "Suite for Orchestra Op. 19" of Ernst Dohnanyi. The offerings in detail are:

Overture to the Opera "The Bartered Bride"	Smetna
Concerto for Violin, No. 2, in D Minor Opus 44	Bruch
Adagio ma non troppo—
Recitative: Allegro molto—
Symphonic Poem, "The Pines of Rome,"	Respighi
The Pines of the Villa Borghese—
The Pines near a Catacomb—
The Pines of the Janiculum—
The Pines of the Appian Way.
Suite for Orchestra Opus No. 19	Dohnanyi
Andante con variazione.
Scherzo: Allegretto vivace.
Romanza: Andante poco moto.
Rondo: Allegro vivace.

Bat," will have the leading comedy role. The balance of the cast will be composed of young contract players of the Paramount company who are new to the screen.

Having completed his ninth screen role of the year in "Love's Greatest Mistake," William Powell went to Kansas City to spend Christmas with his mother. This week he will return to Hollywood, where he will play a featured part in Eddie Cantor's "Special Delivery."

As his first assignment under his contract with Paramount, Lothar Mendez, European director, will pilot Pola Negri through her next starring vehicle, "Confession." Mendez, following the production of two pictures for UFA, "Love Brings Blindness" and "The Three Cuckoo Clocks," came to the United States last February. He made "The Prince of Tempters" in New York for Robert T. Kane with Yya de Putti and Lois Moran in the leading feminine roles. "Confession" is from the story by Ernest Vajda, Hungarian author and playwright.

Eddie Cantor's newest comedy starring vehicle, "Special Delivery," will be the first production to be started in the Paramount West Coast studio for 1927. Under the direction of William Goodrich, work will begin soon. The story of "Special Delivery" was written by Cantor.

Having taken up the production of Westerns in a serious fashion, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is progressing to the field of dog pictures again. "A Dog Mystery" is announced, with Chester Franklin as director. Several years ago he made some animal pictures for Metro, including one with Peter the Great. No dog has yet been selected for the name role in the new work.

Two scenarists are at work in the William Fox plant trying to put together a satisfactory script for the use of Victor McLaglen, the Capt. Flagg in "What Price Glory." Raoul Walsh, who directed the war story, will make the new picture.

"Beautiful Women" will be Raymond Griffith's next comedy and Virgiina Valli will appear opposite Adolphe Menjou in his next one "Evening Clothes."

Colleen Moore will include for her movies this year "Naughty But Nice," a tale of a girls' finishing school, and then, "Oh, What a Life," a drama of a theatrical troupe.

The Milton Sills Co., numbering more than 200 persons, has returned to the Burbank studio after three weeks spent on location at Laguna Beach, Cal. The company included among the featured players, Mary Astor, Alice White, Arthur Stone and Kate Price. A Spanish village, of the type found in the Canary Islands, where the story is set, was built for the filming of exteriors of this production. The story itself, as yet untitled, is adapted from Mary Heaton Vorse's "The Runaway Enchantress."

Shirley Mason will be the only feminine player to appear in Douglas MacLean's latest comedy, "Let It Rain." The cast includes Frank Campeau, Wade Boteler, Lincoln Stedman, Jimmy Bradbury, Lee Shumway, James Mason, Ernest Hilliard and Edwin Sturgis.

Raoul Walsh, who did "What Price Glory," has begun preparations for "Carmen," in which Dolores Del Rio will have the name part.

Ben Lyon and Billie Dove will be co-featured in "The Tender Hour." The locale of the story is Paris and Miss Dove will have the role of the young wife of a Cossack Grand Duke.

Bebe Daniels' next starring vehicle following "A Kiss in the Taxi" will be "Mlle. Jockey," adapted from a French stage play of the same name.

Mack Sennett has returned from New York to reopen his studio for another season of faster and funnier comedies. The studio has been closed since Sept. 1. Three two-reel comedies went into production immediately, with a fourth to begin in 10 days. Ben Turpin is being directed by Ralph Cedar in a farce having to do with the adventures of an innocent country youth. Peggy Montgomery, Irving Bacon, Sunshine Hart and William McCall complete the cast. Madeline Hurlock and Eddie Quillan are being featured in a comedy of college life, with Barney Hellum and Ruth Taylor in important roles.

Clara Bow and Esther Ralston let a coin decide whose name should appear first in the billing of "Children of Divorce." They flipped and Miss Bow won.

Kissing scenes are considered immoral by the Japanese, and therefore are always cut from American movies sent across the Pacific. Consequently, Japanese audiences will miss the climax of the first "love" scene in Norma Talmadge's version of "Camille."

Tom Meighan has been supplied with the story for his next production. The prolific Owen Davis has turned out the plot. In its present status the piece is known simply as "Fate." Mr. Davis, whose playwrighting experience has ranged through some 200 plays, was forced by the studio editors to rewrite his script three times before suitable for filming.

money. Whiteman is one of the few big attractions which did not come to the movie houses by way of a raid on the vaudeville or musical comedy stage. As a matter of fact, jazz king though he is today, and scorned together with his upstart music by the more supercilious critics, he rose to his present dominance in popular music chiefly because his training was strictly classical.

For, after all, Whiteman's distinctive contribution to music was his original conception of "arranging" jazz—that is, orchestrating popular melody after the fashion of a symphonic composition. From this idea was born Whiteman's success and his development of jazz to the point where he is playing such a singular number at the Ambassador as "Rhapsody in Blue" by Gershwin.

From early youth Whiteman was reared in a musical household. His father, Wilberforce J. Whiteman, was for 30 years director of musical education in the Denver schools. His mother was a vocalist of some local distinction through her appearances in Denver choirs.

As a result of such an environment Whiteman was early taught the violin, and when about 17 was given the first viola chair in the Denver Symphony Orchestra. After leaving Denver he again played in Symphony at the San Francisco Exposition in 1915 and after its close joined the San Francisco Symphony.

A coincidence arose out of Whiteman's playing at the San Francisco World's Fair. Victor Herbert at that time directed the orchestra. Nine years later when Whiteman took jazz into Aeolian Hall in New York for a special concert, Victor Herbert composed a suite for the program.

IT is no tawdry, old fashioned "Camille" which Norma Talmadge is making for the screen out in Hollywood. Not on your life. Norma's version of the famous Parisian lady of the cough and unconventional morals is to be a 1927 version with automobiles and telephones and hot and cold running water. Likely as not there will be a swimming pool, too.

Although the main essentials of the celebrated classic are to be faithfully adhered to, Miss Talmadge is anxious to give a portrayal of the Paris siren which she thinks will be acceptable to the younger generation, who are supposed to demand sex apepal in modern dress—and undress.

Joseph M. Schenck, who is producing the modern "Camille" at the United Artists Studio for First National, has intrusted the direction to Fred Niblo. Gilbert Roland, a young Spanish actor, whom the Schenck organization recently placed under contract, is Armand, and other players in the supporting cast include Lillyan Tashman, as Olympe, Rose Dione (Prudence) and Oscar Beregi (Count de Varville). Others will be added as the picture progresses. "Camille" in its present continuity form is the work of Chandler Sprague, a former Los Angeles newspaper man, and Olga Printzlan.

Edgar Shelton Of St. Louis "Pop" Soloist

ST. LOUIS will hear as soloist of the "Pop" concert at the Odeon at 3:15 p. m. today, Edgar Shelton, a native St. Louisan, and a graduate of McKinley High School who has recently won recognition as a young artist of great promise and is now pursuing studies in piano in New York. Shelton, who appeared with the orchestra two seasons ago, is now a fellow in piano of the Juilliard Foundation which seeks to encourage and develop genuine American musical talents.

His offering this afternoon will be the "Caprice Brilliant" of Mendelssohn, a work exacting in its demands upon the technique of the performer.

The orchestral program opens with Nicolai's merry and tuneful overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor." It includes the "Largo" from Dvorak's symphony "From the New World" and Grieg's "Peer Gynt" suite, together with the intermezzo from Mascagni's "William Ratcliff"; a novelty by a Boston composer, Stuart Mason, in which from old material found in the Near East he develops "Rhapsody on a Persian Air" and the Johann Strauss "Emperor" waltzes.

In detail it is:

Overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor"	Nicolai
Second movement "Largo" from Symphony No. 5 in E Minor Op. 95 "From the New World"	Dvorak
Capriccio Brilliante Op 22 for Pianoforte	Mendelssohn
Suite No. 1, "Peer Gynt," Op. 46	Grieg
Intermezzo from "William Ratcliffe"—	Mascagni
Rhapsody on a Persian Air	Mason

How Some Present Day Stars Got Vaudeville Start

THOS. J. RYAN, veteran comedian, who has never been known to spell out his first name, and who has been on the stage more than half a century, is in St. Louis. He is making a special tour of the Orpheum Circuit this season as a feature of the centennial celebration. He is at the St. Louis, this week, after concluding an engagement at the Orpheum last week.

"The youngsters nowadays can't imagine conditions 50 or more years ago," reminisces Ryan, "when dressing rooms did not have private baths, with hot and cold water, and elevator service to boot. Back in the old days oftentimes there were no dressing rooms at all and frequently what was called a dressing room was nothing but a piece of scenery slanted against a wall. It was a great life, however. The old oil lamp, and later gas, footlights would almost smother one to death on the stage. But we survived and had a glorious time just the same."

Ryan was the partner of Dan Diamond, who died in 1875. He then teamed up with Thomas J. Kelly and, later, married Mary Richfield, continuing the partnership with her under the team name of Ryan and Richfield.

Going back several generations, Ryan gives a list of some of the living stars who got their start in vaudeville, and a bit of data as to how they "came up."

Take McIntyre and Heath, for instance. Fifty-two years ago two blackface kids were doing a double song, dance and dialogue, at Jack Harris' honkatonk in San Antonio, Tex. Ben Thompson, gunfighter, gambler and allround "bad man," was the ruling personage of San Antonio, which, at that time, was 90 miles from any railroad. McIntyre and Heath lost all their savings playing faro, roulette and stud poker and when the time came for them to move on, they didn't have enough money between them to get as far as New Orleans.

They told their troubles to Ben Thompson, the boss gambler, who seems to have had "the makings" of a real showman, and he told the two kids that they were the best he ever saw, that they belonged in New York and that he was glad and proud to stake them for traveling expenses. It took McIntyre and Heath five years to reach Broadway, but when they did vaudeville (or variety, as it was then called—1879) gave them a great reception From vaudeville they swung into musical comedy and even comic opera.

FRANK TINNEY, Al Jolson, Bernard Granville and other comparatively young stars of vaudeville, musical comedy and revue are all living examples of the swift development which vaudeville is now celebrating. Vaudeville found them, placed them, made them and rewarded them.

Will Rogers, an Oklahoma cow-puncher, was found (not so many years ago) doing a broncho-busting act at the old Fifth Avenue Theater, New York. He had a bunch of ponies and one assistant. There wasn't a laugh in the act, and it was by way of being a genuine "flop" when a wise and observant vaudeville agent suggested to Rogers that he drop the horses, use his roping stunt and add a monologue. Rogers, naturally taciturn, took the hint. Strangely enough, his natural, dry humor, his genius both as a comedian and at writing his own stuff, added to his amazing and nonchalant skill with the lariat, combined to make an act that made Rogers an immediate favorite on the Orpheum Circuit. Then he rode into New York and the Shuberts grabbed him for "Hands Up," and then Flo Ziegfeld monopolized his services at a four-figure salary.

Eddie Cantor was "found" glooming along in his original way with Bedini and Arthur on Hammerstein's roof (where the Rialto Theater, New York, is now), whence he was snatched to enhance the humor of one of Gus Edwards' kid acts. Then he went to England to study the music-hall style of British stars and came back to join with Al Lee in a vaudeville act. Cantor was playing at the Orpheum Theater in Los Angeles when Oliver Morosco signed him for "So Long, Letty," out of which he emerged to become a star funmaker in Ziegfeld's Follies.

Elsie Janis, then about 15 years old, played in vaudeville all over the Middle West before she made her first hit in "The Vanderbilt Cup." She was only 16 when she went to New York for Louis F. Werba and Mark A. Luescher for their Wistaria Grove, here youth having previously barred her from the metropolis of the East.

Belle Baker started in a little Yiddish theater in Grand street, New York, got a job at $60 a week on the Poli Circuit, and went to the Keith metropolitan houses at a first salary of $100, which has since multiplied tenfold.

Douglas Fairbanks started in vaudeville in an act called "A Regular Business Man" for what was at that time considered a noble salary.

T. Roy Barnes and Harry Langdon also came out of the West as "unknown geniuses" to find high stations as entertainers. Both were big favorites in vaudeville before they joined forces with motion picture celebrities.

Caupolican, a baritone, has sung in St. Louis a number of times, as an attraction on vaudeville programs.

For the purely orchestral numbers of his program, Don Al has selected three of the things in Mascagni's "Caval Rusticana"—the Prelude, "Si ana" and the intermezzo; Nich overture to "The Merry Wive Windsor"; Victor Herbert's "Al Ballet," Charbrier's "Spa Rhapsody," and Franz Schube "Unfinished Symphony," wh show-goers will recognize as inspiration for Sigmund Romb "Song of Love" from "Blos Time," woven about Schube life.

this country and in the tearful tragedy "Camille: Or the Fate of a Coquette," was first played here by Matilda Heron, whose grandson, Gilbert Miller, now directs the destinies of the Frohman Company.

When one remembers the columns of reproof the late William Winter used to turn out because actresses would go on playing this fallen woman, one cannot help speculating pleasurably on what he would have said about the two dramas, "The Captive" and "The Constant Wife," which Matilda Heron's naughty little grandson has produced with so much profit this very season.

EVERY actress did play Camille. As that lachrymal heroine must expire of consumption in the final act, the players of yesteryear used to pride themselves on the skill with which they suggested the symptoms of that plague. One painted on the hectic flush, another mopped her lips ceaselessly with a handkerchief. Still another—that was Duse—suggested its march by lifting her hands and staring at their dread translucence.

Modjeska did it with a cough and it was as a kind of intramural dramatic criticism of such tricks and manners on the stage that the impish Eugene Field, when he was reviewer for the Denver Tribun long ago, once went into the wi alone and there practiced a cou so sepulchral that when Modjes opened at the Tabor Grand—Mo jesky ez Cameel—and sound forth her first faint whoop fro the stage, Field responded an phonally from the audience, an as she continued, so excelled hi that he had to be removed by th ushers, to the vast entertainm of the unregenerate.

IT was the tradition that any ac tress, of whatever age and be might play Camille. Indeed I saw Bernhardt play the part wh she was a great-grandmother wi a wooden leg. Nor is it altogeth fair for me to suggest that su anachronisms have passed out o the theater—not with Otis Skinn (aged 68) bounding back o Christmas night to play the swa gering young bully in "The Hea of the Family," and E. H. Sothe (aged 67) brisking forth in a n play for Mr. Belasco only la Tuesday. Small wonder, howe that most of us grew up under th vague impression that Camille wa a rather rampageous lady of mid dle years who was given to em tional crises, to tearing up th chintzes and who, seemingly, ha complicated the natural wastage o tuberculosis by a rather liberal di of carbohydrates.

SUCH is the confusing way o the theater. The real Cam was a fragile creature—co slim, fastidious, elegant—who di when she was 20. Her years in great world were few, her fasci tion tremendous. He mother was a mere washwoman But certain footnotes to Ninteent Century History place her in a weird family-tree full of bars sin ister and dotted with murders an crimes too monstrous to chron here or anywhere.

COMMERCE GOOD WILL TOUR STARTS JAN. 23

Delegation of 125 St. Louisans Will Be Guests of Leading Southern Cities.

This year's "good will tour" of the Chamber of Commerce will take a large party of St. Louis business men on a special train to Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, the Carolinas and Florida. The party will leave St. Louis on Sunday, Jan. 23.

The chambers of commerce of the cities to be visited in these states have arranged receptions for the St. Louis delegation. The visitors will also meet Governors Martin of Florida, Walker of Georgia, McLean of North Carolina and McLeod of South Carolina, at special receptions. About 125 persons will make the trip.

Louisville is to be the first stop. From there the delegation will go to Winston-Salem, N. C., and then to Charlotte. From Charlotte the special train goes to Columbia S. C. and then to Augusta, Ga. Among the cities in Florida to be visited are St. Augustine, Daytona Beach, Ormond, Seabreeze, Miami, Palm Beach, St. Petersburg, Sarasota and Jacksonville. On the return trip stops will be made at Macon and Atlanta, Ga., and Chattanooga.

Parades, luncheons and visits to manufacturing plants are on the schedule. James A. Troy, assistant general secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, is in charge of arrangements for the tour. This will be the first time a Chamber of Commerce party from St. Louis has visited the southeastern section of the country.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product for only 75 cents. It is improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

ST. LOUIS WILL JOIN FIGHT AGAINST CANCER

An educational campaign designed to acquaint both the public and medical profession with the "danger signals" of cancer and the immediate steps to be taken when such signs are discovered will be conducted throughout Missouri, Jan. 17 to 26, under the direction of the St. Louis Committee, American Society for the Control of Cancer.

The campaign, plans for which will be completed at a meeting of the committee Tuesday, will include posters and literature of an instructive nature and addresses at public gatherings. The posters will be placed on busses, at traffic intersections and other prominent places. Literature dealing with the discovery and treatment of cancer will be distributed through schools, libraries and in stores and industrial plants.

Specialists Will Speak.

Speakers will include cancer specialists detailed to assist in the campaign from the national headquarters of the association at New York. They will address civic, educational, religious and social organizations and will be available for any other gatherings during the week of the campaign. The disease will also discussed before meetings of physicians through the co-operation of the various State and city medical societies.

"Although the campaign is designed primarily for the public, the medical profession also will receive certain instruction," Dr. Ellis Fischel, chairman of the St. Louis committee, said: "It is the family physician who often 'wins or loses' a cancer case. The most important thing in the treatment of cancer is an early diagnosis.

Hope to Increase Cures.

"Cancer specialists believe that the percentage of cures can be increased from 30 per cent, the present rate, to 75 per cent through proper education of the public and medical profession in discovering the disease."

According to medical statistics approximately 110,000 persons die of cancer in the United States annually. It was to reduce this high mortality that the American Society for the Control of Cancer was organized 10 years ago. The efforts of the organization have borne some fruit, but the disease cannot be controlled except through public co-operation, experts have pointed out. It is with the idea of enlisting this co-operation in Missouri that the educational campaign will be launched.

DEERPLAIN DUCK CLUB'S BUILDING RAZED BY FIRE

The clubhouse of the Deerplain Duck Club, a hunting organization which had its base on the west bank of the Illinois River eight miles north of Grafton, burned to the ground on the afternoon of Dec. 23.

The keeper, Henry B. Husman, reported to members that the fire began while he, his wife and son, Raymond, were at dinner. Raymond ran to the second floor of the house to turn on the water in a tank there and had fifficulty in escaping when the flames reached the foot of the stairway before he descended.

Sterling Edmunds, acting secretary of the club, said the house, built in 1892, was insured for $7500, but was worth considerably more. It was the headquarters of the club from its foundation in 1892. Stewart McDonald, president of the Moon Motor Car Co., is president of the hunting organization, which has 15 members. The clubhouse was a rfame structure with three rooms on the ground floor and three rooms and a large dormitory on the upper floor. It will be replaced by another building.

JOKER SPOILS PREMIER'S REST

Uses Novel "Ad" to Have Poincare Routed Out of Bed by Phone.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 1.—Premier Poincare, ex-premier Briand and prefect of police Morain, lost some sleep recently as the victims of a practical joker.

A watch-making company conducted an extensive publicity campaign, promising to awaken people daily for a week by telephoning them at whatever hour they wished. Someone gave the firm the telephone numbers of the homes of the Prime Minister, Foreign Minister Briand and Prefect of Police Morain, setting a very early hour for each. Poincare simply hung up the receiver when his slumber was disturbed. Briand used not a little of his montmartre vocabulary. As for Morain, he sent a pair of police inspectors to the watchmakers' offices to present something besides his compliments. The company has since changed its advertising methods.

Gifts of Life Insurance.

More than 100 employes of Prufrock-Litton Furniture Co., Fourth and St. Charles streets, have been given life insurance policies of $500 to $1000 for 1927 by the company. Employes with the company five years or more were given $1000 policies and the remainder were given $500 policies.

AUTO FATALITIES EXCEED OTHERS IN ACCIDENT LIST

An analysis of the 405 accidental deaths which occurred in St. Louis during the first 11 months of this year has been prepared by Girard C. Varnum, secretary-manager of the St. Louis Safety Council, in an effort to show the predominant causes of such deaths.

Motor vehicle fatalities far exceed the other classifications with a total of 157; falls are second with 99 fatalities, and industrial accidents third with 48.

Comparing the figures with those for similar periods of previous years, Varnum said that at least 100 lives were saved during 1926 through accident prevention work. Accidental deaths in the first 11 months of 1925 totaled 552, of 1924 468 and of 1923 467. Industrial accidents dropped from 80 in the 1925 period to 48.

50 Drivers Held for Trial.

Varnum divided the fatalities into public accidents and home accidents. In the "public" list are 12 steam railway accidents, 10 electric railway, 27 falls, 10 drownings, two elevators, three horse-drawn vehicles and two firearms. Under "Home" are 26 cases of burns, 13 asphyxiation, 72 falls, six firearms, four infections, six poison and one explosion.

Of the motor vehicle fatalities, Varnum said:

"One of the most significant things is the fact that during the period in question 50 drivers were held by Coroner's juries, 35 of them charged with criminal carelessness and 15 with homicide. Fourteen of the 15 drivers indicted for homicide fled from the scene of the accident.

Accidents to Pedestrians.

"This is a most disgraceful record, as it means that 31 per cent of the drivers involved in accidental deaths this year were deemed by the Coroner's juries to be guilty of criminal negligence or of leaving the scene.

"Of the motor vehicle deaths, 119 occurred to pedestrians, 41 of them under 16 years old. This shows clearly that pedestrians must observe precaution in crossing our busy thoroughfares as the number killed this year represents 75 per cent of the total number of deaths.

"The statistics show that 68 deaths occurred between street intersections and 73 at intersections. This indicates a need for drivers to have their cars under better control at corners. It also shows that jaywalking has been the underlying cause of a good many deaths this year."

WOMEN BUY FURS IN NEW WAY

Choose Pelts While They Are Still On Animals' Backs.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Jan. 1.—Going after the fox itself is a new way women have of getting furs. Since cold weather set in, putting the skins at their best, society women from London and other centers of wealth have been flocking to the Highland silver fox farms to choose the pelts while they are still on the true owners' backs.

Silver fox raisers have not been keen on encouraging the idea of selling furs on the hoof because of the bother of waiting on customers, and they quote anything but bargain prices. The average price is at least £20, plus the expense of the buyer's trip to the Highlands.

PRESIDENT WANTS PRESS TO SHOW 'AMERICAN ATTITUDE'

Feels It Important That Government's Efforts Under International Law Be Supported.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—President Coolidge wants the press of the country to show an "American attitude," and he feels it highly important that newspapers support all the Government's efforts to live up to the rules of international law.

His view, as outlined by the White House spokesman to newspaper correspondents yesterday, is that the press of the nation can be helpful to American foreign relations and can aid the Government through correct presentation of its foreign policies and conduct.

The President is of the opinion that foreign nations often have been misled, particularly with regard to the Government's policy of protecting American lives and property abroad by what has been printed in American newspapers.

Officials of foreign governments, he believes, have been given the mistaken impression that the United States is not united on such a policy, and that Americans do not fully support it, all because of criticisms made by the press of this country.

The President is convinced that the Americans have united on this policy and wants to see it carried out. He also was represented as believing that the press of country is thoroughly Am and is interested in the dev ment of American commerce high standards of international

In international law, as in mestic, the President holds the view that if it is disregarded chaotic condition results and body knows whether his rights going to be respected.

NOTED PIANIST TO BE SOLOIST WITH VIKINGS

Percy Grainger Scheduled to Play From KSD Next Tuesday Night.

Percy Grainger, noted Australian pianist composer, will be the soloist when the half-hour program of the Vikings is broadcast Tuesday evening from KSD.

Grainger is acknowledged piano virtuosi. His participation in the Viking half hour marks his first American appearance since his return from Australia.

Grainger will play selections from the works of Grieg, and will also relate brief personal reminiscences of the composer. Grieg once wrote of Grainger, "What is nationality? I wrote Norwegian peasant dances that none of my own countrymen could play and here comes this young Australian and performs them as they should be rendered. Yet, it is a far cry from Australia to Norway."

Percy Grainger was born at Melbourne, Australia, and owes his artistic gifts to his mother. She taught him music very early and sat at the piano with him daily for two hours from his fifth to his [illegible] year. Then he studied with Louis Pabst for two years, and at [illegible] appeared frequently in concert, earning enough money to go to Europe for further study. For six years he studied under Kwast at Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany. In 1901 he went to live in London. Then followed a concert tour in Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Scandinavia. He and his mother came to America in 1914, and after a recital in New York, early in 1915, he became as famous on this side of the Atlantic as in Europe. In 1917 he joined the army as a bandsman and stayed in service until early in 1919. In 1918 he became an American citizen.

Grainger has appeared extensively as pianist-composer. In 1911, conducting his own music for orchestra and chorus, he soon became one of the most frequently performed orchestral composers of Anglo-Saxon stock in England. For years before that he had done experimental work as a composer, chiefly in irregularly-barred rhythm, that was widely adapted and developed by English composers.

Grainger's offering in the Viking half hour will include: Grieg's "To the Springtime," "Wedding Day at Troldhaugen," "Rotnamsknut," "In the Valley" and "Jon Vestafay."

Louise Homer on KSD Tonight

Famous Contralto Will Share Weekly Atwater Kent Hour Program With Her Daughter.

The Atwater Kent Hour to be broadcast at 8:15 o'clock this evening by KSD will be of outstanding interest through the participation of Louise Homer, famous American contralto, and her daughter, Louise Homer Stires, soprano. Louise Homer has previously been heard in the Atwater Kent Hour, but this program marks the debut of her daughter.

Louise Homer Stires always cherished the ambition to become a pianist so that she could accompany her mother. The development of her own voice until she has become as well known as her mother came as a surprise to her.

Louise Homer was selected as one of the 12 greatest living American women by the National Association of Women Voters, which marks a climax in the honors which the American public has heaped upon this great singer.

Louise Homer was born in Pittsburg, where her father, Dr. William Trimble Beatty, was founder and first pastor of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, and also founder of the Pennsylvania College for Women at Pittsburg. The quality of her untrained voice created so deep an impression that her parents were urged to have it cultivated, and at the age of 15 she began her vocal studies in Philadelphia. A few years later she went to Boston, becoming a pupil of Sidney Homer, whom she later married.

Soon afterward she and her husband went to Paris, where Mme. Homer continued her preparation for an operatic career. She made her operatic debut in Vichy, France, before one of the most critical audiences in Europe. Her debut with the Metropolitan Opera company took place in November, 1900, and her subsequent appearances there form a chapter in American musical history. Last fall she as heard with the San Francisco and the Los Angeles Opera companies.

The joint program by Mme. Homer and her daughter, assisted by the Atwater Kent Orchestra, under the baton of Louis Edlin, and Miss Ruth Emerson, accompanist, will be as follows:

FOUR FAMOUS WORKS IN KSD BALKITE HOUR

Weber, Wagner, Mozart and Tschaikowsky Represented on Orchestral Program.

The twelfth concert of the Balkite hour by Walter Damrosch and the New York Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast from KSD at 8 o'clock next Saturday evening.

Naturally, such an outstanding musical organization as the New York Symphony Orchestra numbers among its musicians many who are prominent in music. One of these with the New York Symphony Orchestra is George Barre phony Orchestra is George Barrere, whose silver flute has been known to New York Symphony Orchestra audiences for a score of years. Whenever "the bearded musician," as he humorously refers to himself, lifts his instrument before a visible audience for a solo passage, eyes that may have been wandering before automatically focus on the stage. The members of the radio audience, who are not privileged to see the New York Symphony Orchestra in action, nevertheless focus particular attention upon that part of the program which brings them one of the exquisite flute solos by Barrere.

He is well known to part of the radio audience through his earlier appearances before the microphone with his own "Little Symphony," which for several years has been heard on many occasions. He also has his Barrere Ensemble of woodwind players.

The program to be rendered by the New York Symphony Orchestra in this second Balkite hour of 1927 will be as follows:

Overture, "Oberon" ....Weber
Siegfried's Death ....Wagner
Andante from Symphony in D—Mozart
March Slav ....Tschaikowsky

LUDLOW'S PROGRAM TONIGHT

In his regular Sunday night broadcast from WJZ at 8 o'clock this evening, Godfrey Ludlow, violinist, will play his own arrangement of "Mother Machree."

Opening this broadcast, the "Adagio Movement" of Nachez's "Second Concerto" will be played, followed by the "Nocturne in D" of Chopin, "Canzonetta" by Bendix, "Legenda" of Winiawski and Huby's "Zephir" and "Mother Machree."

SOUTHERN STATIONS JOIN CHAIN WITH KSD

WSB (428 meters, 700 kilocycles) at Atlanta, Ga.; WSM (283 meters, 1080 kilocycles) at Nashville, Tenn., and WHAS (400 meters, 750 kilocycles) at Louisville, Ky., have been taken into the WEAF broadcasting chain of which KSD is a link.

This begins the expansion of the National Broadcasting Co. chain, which now covers the United States east of the Rocky Mountains and north of the Ohio River. Eventually, it is expected, this chain, together with that centering in WJZ, will blanket the country.

New Orleans and Fort Worth have been hoping that they would be included in the chain this winter. But indications are that it will be a good many months before they are linked in, because of the cost and other problems incident to arranging the necessary telephone wire connections.

WSB, WSM and WHAS are to broadcast the Eveready Hour every week, beginning next Tuesday night. WSB and WHAS are to broadcast the Capitol Family programs Sunday nights. For the present WEAF programs will not be broadcast by these Southern stations on other nights.

WJZ MALE QUARTET TO BE REGULAR WEEKLY FEATURE

The WJZ male quartet, which made its bow before the radio audience just before Christmas, was so successful that they have been accorded a regular place on WJZ's weekly program. Their next program will be broadcast at 7 o'clock Thurdsay night. The quartet is composed of Milton J. Cross, singing announcer; Marley Sherris, another of WJZ's singing staff; Walter Preston and George Tyler. They are supported by Keith McLeod, studio manager and pianist, who plays vibraphone solos in this feature, and by Godfrey Ludlow, the violinist, another member of WJZ's studio.

The name "The Arm Chair Hour" is descriptive of the type of selection given by this group. They are all old favorites.

After the first announcement, no announcer's voice breaks the continuity of the Arm Chair Hour, the quartet numbers and solos running from one selection into another.

OPERA "RIGOLETTO" FROM KSD TOMORROW

Famous Verdi Work Will Be Sung by WEAF Company Direct From New York.

Verdi's "Rigoletto," will be presented again in tabloid form at 9 o'clock tomorrow night for the audience of KSD under direction of Cesare Sodero.

The cast will include the following well-known soloists of the WEAF Grand Opera Company: Gilda, Genia Zelinska, soprano; Maddalena, Devora Nadworney, contralto; Duke of Mantua, Guiseppe di Benedetto, tenor; Rigoletto, Millo Picco, baritone; Sparafucile, Nino Ruisi, basso.

The text of the opera "Rigoletto" was written by Piave and the music by Verdi. The scenes of the opera are laid in Mantua and vicinity, in the sixteenth century. The principal characters are the Duke of Mantua, an unprincipled ruler, his jester, Rigoletto, and the latter's daughter, Gilda. The father of one of the Duke's victims, being mocked by Rigoletto, launches upon him an awful curse which Rigoletto takes muct to heart.

The Duke carries on a love affair with Gilda, unknown to Rigoletto. His courtiers abduct Gilda and take her to the palace. In the meantime Rigoletto meets Sparafucile, who offers to kill any enemy he may have for money. When Rigoletto learns that his daughter has been taken to the castle, he is enraged and plans to have the Duke killed. Accordingly, Sparafucile arranges for his sister to lure the Duke away and is about to murder the Duke when his sister, taking a fancy to him, pleads for his life. Sparafucile consents to provide a substitute should one happen to appear before the hour of midnight.

That Gilda may see the fickleness of her lover, Rigoletto disguises her as a page and takes her to see the Duke in his new love affair with Sparafucile's sister. The disguised Gilda enters and is stabbed by Sparafucile, who, according to the agreement, delivers the body to Rigoletto. Rigoletto, hearing the Duke's voice in the distance, opens the sack and, seeing his daughter's body, falls senseless at her side.

RACHMANINOFF PROGRAM FROM WBBM TUESDAY NIGHT

The Prelude in C Sharp Minor, by Rachmaninoff, will open the program of Rachmaninoff's works to be broadcast at 8:15 Tuesday night by the Stewart-Warner Air Theater, WBBM, Chicago (226 meters). It will be played by Lester D. Mather, concert pianist and director of the classical programs of the station.

Several Rachmaninoff songs will be sung in the original Russian by Cantor Aaron Kritz, who has appeared on others of the series of Russian music presented recently by WBBM. Hazel McBroom, contralto, will sing translations of the songs, "Waving Fields of Corn," "Lilacs" and "In the Night."

"Pictures" is the title of a suite for two pianos. From it, Mather and Shura Guroff, a young Russian pianist, will play "Barcarille," "The Night," "Tears" and "Bells."

A sonata for 'cello and piano will be played by Peter Quinn and Mather.

TRADE NOTES.

Carrington Stone, chief radio engineer of the Stewart-Warner Corp., came to St. Louis Thursday to address a meeting of Stewart-Warner radio dealers. Stone discussed Stewart-Warner receivers and speakers, and went into the use of batteries and eliminators with Stewart-Warner sets. Dan Hyland, general manager for Stewart-Warner in St. Louis, presided.

Here's a 9-Tube Set to Build

Bird's eye view of the H-F-L super, a 9-tube receiving set that has created much interest among set builders. It is said to be selective to a hairline degree, to reproduce with very fine tone and to be a real distance getter. Absence of oscillation, simplicity of construction, ease of tuning and economical operating cost, are other advantages of this set.

The layout is "straight line," and permits of exceptionally neat appearance of the finished set.

In tests in Chicago this set is said to have reached out when 12 local stations were on the air on an average midsummer night and to have brought in a number of distant stations, and in the daytime to have brought in with loud speaker volume stations 600 miles distant.

ENTRANCE TESTS FOR MUNICIPAL CHORUS

Applicants for Opera School to Be Examined as to Voice and Appearance.

About 500 St. Louis singers who applied for places in the Municipal Opera Chorus Training School will be examined as to voice and appearance Tuesday night, beginning at 8 o'clock, when the first session of the school will be held in the Jefferson Memorial in Forest Park.

Charles Sinclair and Louis Kroll, who have been re-engaged as general stage director and musical director, respectively, will arrive tomorrow to consider plans for the school. Sinclair and Kroll will direct the training course, and with David E. Russell, manager for the Municipal Theater Association, will select the 100 members of the 1927 chorus when the training school closes late in April.

It is expected that at least half of the applicants will pass the entrance tests Tuesday evening. The successful ones will be required to devote three nights weekly to training work, and only those attending the school regularly will be considered for places in the summer chorus.

While the chorus school is in operation, the Executive Productions Committee of the association will consider a repertory for 1927, and on Jan. 22 the Cast Selections Committee will depart for New York to engage the principal members of next summer's company.

Advance reservations for the 1927 season now exceed $90,000, a new high mark for this time of the year.

BATTLE STREAMERS ARRIVE FOR THE 138TH INFANTRY

Two World War battle streamers, commemorating the Meuse-Argonne offensive and the defensive action in the Vosges Mountains have been received from the War Department by Col. Stephen E. Lowe, commander of the 138th Infantry, National Guard, and will be formally attached to the regimental colors at a ceremony at the Armory, Grand boulevard and Market street, on the evening of Jan. 18.

Col. Lowe has invited Secretary of War Davis, a former officer of the 138th, to present the streamers. Gov. Baker, Major-General B. F. Poor, commanding the Seventh Corps Area; Mayor Miller and other civil and military executives, as well as all former members of the 138th, are invited to the ceremony.

The streamers are the first to be issued to a Missouri regiment and will be the first battle insignia attached to the 138th colors. The 138th Infantry first went into action in the Vosges Mountains and performed its most important service in France in the battle of the Argonne.

B-T COUNTERPHASE EIGHT IS EXCEPTIONAL RECEIVER

One of the specially interesting radio receivers is the Bremer-Tully "Counterphase Eight". One of these sets was tested in St. Louis the past week for tone quality, selectivity and distance getting, and performed exceptionally well in every respect.

It picked up stations all over the United States with great volume and clarity, caught half a dozen Canadian stations, brought in KFI, Los Angeles, and KGO and KPO, on the Pacific Coast, and held them as long as was desired, and in general, showed itself a real front rank receiver.

In this set, a special coil, designed to reject unwanted stations that interfere with the station sought, takes the place of the usual first tube. This coil is a very great help in cutting through the short wave St. Louis stations and in separating stations in other parts of the country that are jammed together.

This set is wholly shielded, and massively built. It has single control and is calibrated carefully at the factory, so that there is no need to "fish" for stations or keep a log. Virtually all one has to do when tuning this Bremer-Tully is to select a station from the programs published in the Post-Dispatch and turn the control to the wave length mark.

The Bremer-Tully Counterphase Six" factory-built receiver is made after the same design, only having two less tuned stages.

Incidentally, the Bremer-Tully Counterphase Six for set builders has been redesigned for use of the new power tubes and other improvements.

DEFINE NEW DUTIES FOR SCOUT TROOPS

Directors Adopt Plans of St. Louis Council for Standard Committee.

Definite duties for troop committees, those heretofore rather vague and elastic boards of directors for Boy Scout troops, have been formulated and adopted by the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, in an effort to place them on a standardized basis, and enable them to perform their proper function in all troops. An ideal Standard Troop Committee of definite size and function, has been worked out, and the sphere of each member clearly defined. Adoption by a troop of the Standard Committee plan has been made one of the first quarter requirements for the first quarter of the new troop objective system which went into effect in St. Louis yesterday.

Heretofore the size, duties and activity of a committee depended upon the whims or facilities of the troop. It might have three members, or it might have ten, while in many troops it had none. Its duties ranged from the mere signing of the troop's re-registration application and attendance at the annual banquet to performing the acts and holding the powers of the scoutmaster. Its personnel was selected at random, and no provision was made to assign the individual members with definite work.

Duties of Members.

Under the new system the committee consists of five boys, selected if possible from the organization sponsoring the troop, and each assigned regular duties. One is chairman, while the others are designated "Thrift Member," "Educational Member," "Outdoor Member" and "Advisor." The chairman is the troop representative on the local and district council. He is responsible for the proper functioning of each member of the committee, a quarterly report to the sponsoring institution, the creation, promotion and reporting of troop service and good turns, the reporting to headquarters of troop activities, the promotion of social affairs, the re-registration on time of the troop, and the conducting of a Tenderfoot Investiture ceremony.

The thrift member supervises and audits the troop finances, makes periodical reports to the treasurer of the institution, stimulates individual savings among the scouts, aids the boys to earn uniforms, and is responsible for all troop equipment. The educational member supervises the work of the troop scribe, helps the scoutmaster conduct contests and merit systems, arranges for demonstrations meetings, encourages the attendance of scouts at Court of Honor meetings, and stimulates the interest of the parents in the scouts' advancement.

Certificates for Troops.

Hikes and camping are in the province of the outdoor member. He must promote an average of one hike a month, pass scouts on the 14-mile hike test, see that records are kept of all hikes and camps, and interest the parents in having their boys participate in outdoor activities.

The advisor is the troop counselor. He makes monthly short talks on the elements of the scout oath and laws and on other subjects pertaining to the moral and spiritual life of the scouts, provides means of educational and vocational guidance, stimulates Sunday school and church attendance, and presents problems of discipline to the committee.

The committee as a whole has charge of the selection of scoutmaster and assistant scoutmaster, and must provide leadership when the scoutmaster is inactive. It meets with the scoutmaster, troop officer and head of the sponsoring organizatoin to consider troop policies and objectives, and attends at inspections, contests and the awarding of badges and honors.

A certificate has been prepared by the St. Louis Council to be awarded to troops whose committees comply with these standards.

FIFTH ANNUAL BOY SCOUT CIRCUS AT COLISEUM IN MARCH

Event 40 Days Later Than in Former Years to Permit of Awards Under New System.

The fifth annual Boy Scout Circus will be held at the Coliseum March 25 and 26, headquarters announced Friday. This date, 40 days later than in other years, was set to allow awards won by troops during the first quarter of the new objective system to be presented at a public function.

The quarterly objective, approved by the council only two weeks ago, has supplanted the January Roundup, during which the greatest efforts were made by troops to advance in size and scouting activities. The circus, the largest annual undertaking of the local council, formerly was given at the close of the roundup, for the awarding of honors won therein. It is participated in by several thousand scouts, and annually attracts the study of scout officials from all over the country.

Percival Chubb to Speak.

Percival Chubb will address the Ethical Society, 3468 Washington boulevard, of which he is the leader, at 11 a. m. today, on the subject: "New Year Wishes for Our Country: A Glance at Safety Signs and Danger Signals." A musical program will be presented.

Of General Automotive Interest in St. Louis District

Many Improvements and Refinements on 1927 Models —Sport Cabriolet Added.

The Chevrolet Motor Co. announces an entirely new line of automobiles, declared to be by far the finest in Chevrolet history.

In the new line, which goes on display throughout the country today, are numerous improvements, some of them found hitherto only in larger and more costly cars. The economies of tremendous volume production have made possible the marks of distinction which individualize the new line, according to a factory statement.

The new cars are mechanically finer, entirely new in body lines, smarter in appearance, complete in equipment and outstanding in the display of colors. Seven models, five closed and two open cars, comprise the line. A sport cabriolet has been added.

Bullet-Type Head Lamps.

Beauty and refinement has been stressed in the design. Appointments have been made with a thoroughness that promises to please the most fastidious motorist. Succeeding the smoothest Chevrolet, the new line has been built to establish a new standard in the low price field.

All closed bodies are by Fisher and finished in Duco. The seven models are finished in five color combinations, and contrasting color stripes. "Fish-tailing," hitherto employed only on the more expensive cars, lends a striking appearance to the rear deck of the coupe, sport cabriolet and roadster. A reduction in the 'over-all' height of the cars has been made, without sacrificing head room.

The radiator of polished airplane metal follows a new design. It is longer and larger and with the centrifugal water pump provides for high cooling efficiency. Sweeping one-piece full crown fenders are topped off by bullet-type head lamps with cowl lamps to match.

Air Cleaner Provided.

Steel disc wheels in colors are standard equipment on all models. Natural wood wheels are optional at a small additional cost.

The Chevrolet engine has been made even smoother and its efficiency further improved by the use of a new and improved oil pump. Another advance on this year's car is the use of an AC air cleaner which supplies clean, filtered air to the carburetor and prevents dirt and grit from getting inside the engine and damaging moving parts.

Greater mileage, fewer oil changes and a minimum of engine wear is promised as a result of the adoption of an AC oil filter which removes impurities and dirt from the oil supply.

The 17-inch steering wheel provides for easier handling. The tire carrier is mounted on the frame, entirely free from the body and is braced in a vertical position by heavy steel brackets. A new gasoline gauge and a combination stop and tail light are standard.

On closed models new and narrower windshield pillars greatly improve the vision permitting a commanding view of the road. Doors are equipped with remote control handles.

Cabriolet Has Rumble Seat.

The new instrument panel includes a lock that automatically locks both steering gear and ignition. Speedometer, oil gauge, ammeter, carburetor choke and dash light are also on the panel. The windshield is of full vision, one-piece VV Fisher design, with automatic wiper and rear vision mirror standard equipment on all closed models.

The sport cabriolet has a four-passenger carrying capacity, with a rumble seat, a tan whip-cord top and tan upholstery of grain leather. The body is Fisher-built and finished in Royal Oak green Duco. The landau irons, window frames, ledges, windshield frame and automatic wiper are finished in nickel.

The landau is finished in Beige brown Duco on the body, window mouldings and wheels, with chrome yellow striping on the streamline moulding. The interior is upholstered in brown plush. Oval plate glass windows in the rear may be opened, assuring clear vision and ample ventilation. One-piece windshield with narrow metal corner posts, sun visor, rear vision mirror, dome and dash lamps, automatic stop light, and smoking set are among other items of equipment.

Coupe Has Rear Compartment.

The sedan is finished in Marine blue duco with gold striping on the body moulding. The interior is upholstered in blue corduroy. The coach has a new streamline moulded body, finished in St. James gray Duco, striped in pistache green. Upholstery is in green corduroy. The two doors are unusually wide.

"Fish-tail" modeling, emphasizing the streamline effect, is also used on the coupe. The body, window moulding and steel disc wheels of the coupe are finished in Beige brown Duco, with light chrome yellow striping. Blue corduroy upholstery harmonizes with the exterior finish. A ledge is provided behind the seat for carrying small parcels. The rear deck is arranged into a compartment large enough to carry a full-sized steamer trunk.

An equally generous compartment space is available on the roadster on which the "fish-tailing" effect is also emphasized. Finished in Falmouth gray Duco, with streamline moulding and French gray striping it discloses an interesting advance over the preceding model.

The new one-piece full crown fenders and bullet head-lamps give the touring car an appearance of newness. Like the roadster it is finished in Falmouth gray Duco.

Coincident with introduction of its new line of cars, the Chevrolet Motor Co. today announces price reductions effective immediately.

On the closed car line the reductions range from $20 to $50. The new open car price is $525, with balloon tires and disc wheels as standard equipment, whereas the former open car price was $510 without balloon tires and disc wheels.

The reductions are as follows: Coach, $645 to $595; coupe, $645 to $625; sedan, $735 to $695; landau, $765 to $745.

OLDSMOBILE PLANS LARGEST OUTPUT IN ITS HISTORY IN 1927

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 1.—Oldsmobile will start on the greatest production program of its history tomorrow morning. The increased schedule for 1927 follows two succeeding years in which the manufacture and sale of Oldsmobiles have broken all former records.

With the start of the new year, new and additional machinery and equipment enables greater production in the axle, motor, sheet metal and several other departments of Olds Motor Works. A new heat treating plant has been erected to double production by that department. Similar additions have been made to the chassis and final assembly lines and to body building facilities.

The Oldsmobile plant has more than 2,000,000 square feet of floor space on a 74-acre tract.

Queen Marie of Rumania before returning home on the Berengaria attended an informal reception in the Hotel Astor, New York, arranged by Willys-Overland, Inc., and the American Armor Corporation, to present her with a Willys-Knight Great Six town car of bullet-proof construction.

With a machine gun, Charles B. Toole, president of the Tmerican Armor Corporation, fired at the right-hand door. he metal was dented, but the bullets were flattened and dropped to the floor.

In addition to being the first armored town car ever built, it is the first invisibly armored passenger car in the world. It is completely lined with Bovite metal which added little more than 200 pounds to the weight of the car. Over the metal and hiding it, is upholstery in two shades of green. All vanity cases, door handles, lights and other fittings are in green baked enamel to match the upholstering and carpets. A fleece-lined robe with the seal of Rumania embroidered, was made for the car.

PIERCE-ARROW TAXICAB INTRODUCED IN ST. LOUIS

A Pierce-Arrow series 80 limousine taxi is being introduced in St. Louis and territory by the Western Automobile Co., of which Sam Breadon, owner of the Cardinals, is president.

It has an aluminum body, laminated joints, weather resisting lacquer finish, removable door and rear quarter panel upholstery and dual windshield cleaner. Doors are so fitted as to eliminate the usual treadplate. So passengers can step directly from the running board onto the velvet carpet. Disc wheels are standard. A neat glass partition separates passengers and driver. The heater is adjustable. Auxiliary seats nest into the back of the partition.

The car is equipped to the smallest detail especially for taxi work. But it has the appearance of a luxurious private car.

HUP PLANS FOR LARGE PRODUCTION INCREASE

General Sales and Advertising Managers Attend Dealers' Meeting in St. Louis.

R. S. Cole, general sales manager, and F. W. Dickinson, advertising manager, of the Hupp Motor Car Corp., were the speakers at a luncheon Wednesday of Hupmobile dealers at Hotel Jefferson. George Weber, president of the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., distributer in the St. Louis territory, was host at the luncheon, which was attended by dealers and salesmen from the chief points in Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri.

The visiting factory officials outlined the Hup eight and six selling campaign for 1927. Dickinson said that plans were based on an expected 50 per cent increase in production this year. Hup, he said, has the factory facilities to put the production increase into effect and to maintain it.

Realizing that the best and greatest of all sales weapons is advertising, Dickinson said, the Hup factory will launch soon its largest advertising campaign. He declared that the Hup straight eight had made a tremendous conquest of the eight-cylinder field and was the largest selling straight eight in the world, and also had set a new trend in car buying, while the Hup six had won a position of great strength in the six-cylinder field. The Hup advertising campaign, he said, will be materially strengthened by the fact that "Hup already has the believing ear of the public."

Cole pictured "Hup," the magnificent institution," instancing its adherence to high manufacturing and designing ideals, and the spirit of co-operation in the organization as chief factors in Hup success.

There is no motor authority or big bank president who does not predict a good automobile year in 1927, he said. If there should be a recession from 1926 records, he declared, no one estimated the falling off at more than 5 per cent. But even if the 5 per cent falling off should come, he asserted, Hup sales surely would show a large increase over those in 1926."

SURPRISES ON DESIGN LIKELY AT AUTO SHOW

About 300 Models to Be Exhibited — Shop Equipment and Light Commercial Cars Also to Be Displayed.

"Surprise cars" and "mystery models" are promised for the national automobile show in Grand Central Palace, New York, Jan. 8—15. Some of the older makers are said to be putting out models nearly "100 per cent new" in design and construction. Radically different features from those seen in former years will be offered by certain exhibitors, while many others will show merely refinements of the 1926 line. Aside from power plant and chassis, a number of revolutionary developments in body types will be introduced—modern without being freakish, and said to be decidedly practical.

Shop equipment and light commercial vehicles will constitute two new divisions of the exhibition, apart from the developments in the passenger car field.

Mechanical innovations, it is predicted, will be found on every make of car exhibited and it is assured that the bodies with which the 1927 cars are equipped will contribute to greater comfort.

Body design is more susceptible than any other part of the modern car to change, and the makers each year come nearer to making the closed body resemble a miniature drawing room. There also will be in evidence considerable changes in the driver's section of the car.

Approximately 300 models will be exhibited by the following makers: Auburn Automobile Co., Buick Motor Co., Cadillac Motor Car Co., Chandler-Cleveland Motors Corp., Chevrolet Motor Co., Chrysler Sales Corp., Davis Motors Car Co., Dodge Brothers, Inc.; du Pont Motors, Inc.; Durant Motors, Inc.; Elcar Motor Co., Essex Motors, Flint Motor Co., Ford Motor Co. (Lincoln), Franklin Mfg. Co., Gardner Motor Co., Hudson Motor Car Co., Hupp Motor Car Corp., Jordan Motor Car Co., Kissel Motor Car Co., Locomobile Co. of America, McFarlan Motor Corp., Marmon Motor Car Co., Moon Motor Car Co., Nash Motors Co., Oakland Motor Car Co., Olds Motor Works, Packard Motor Car Co., Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co., Peerless Motor Car Corp., Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Co., Reo Motor Car Co., Rickenbacker Motor Co., Roamer Motor Car Co., Stearns Co., F. B., Studebaker Corp. of America, Stutz Motor Car Co. of America, Velie Motors Corp., Wills-Sainte Claire, Inc.; Willys-Overland, Inc.

NEW 3-PASSENGER COUPE IS BROUGHT OUT BY VELIE

A new three-passenger coupe added to the Velie standard six line has been announced by the Velie Motors Corp. of Moline, Ill.

Like the standard six sedan, the new coupe has Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brakes, heat indicator on dash, 182¾ inches of spring equipment and radiator capacity of 4¾ gallons. On a 112-inch wheelbase, the car has a Velie built 3⅛x4¼ inch valve in head engine. The new coupe is low-hung. The windshield is of one-piece ventilating type. Automatic windshield wiper, rear vision mirror and balloon cord tires are standard equipment.

Upholstery is of dark blue, pebble grain, genuine leather on the seat and back, with door panels and headlining to match. The body is finished in two-tone, high luster lacquer, musketeer gray above and below the belt, Sheraton gray on belt panel and cowl, with black moldings and a stripe of vermilion on the belt between the moldings.

The engine has forced pressure lubrication to the valve mechanism, and four-ring pistons. The engine carries off and utilizes crank case fumes, preventing dilution of oil and assisting lubrication in the cylinders.

General Motors President Expects 1927 Production of 4,125,000 or More Cars and Trucks in U. S.

The outlook for the automotive industry this year is excellent, according to Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president of General Motors Corp.; John Willys, president of Willys-Overland, Inc., and Walter P. Chrysler, head of the Chrysler Corporation.

"At this time there is nothing on the horizon that should prevent 1927 from being another good year for the motor car industry—perhaps not as good as 1926, but nevertheless a satisfactory year," Sloan says.

"In last year over 4,500,000 passenger cars, trucks and busses were produced in the United States and Canada, or some 6 or 7 per cent more than in the previous record year of 1925.

"The past four years have been a period of very satisfactory automobile volume, the total output of the industry in the United States and Canada in these four years having been about 16,500,000 vehicles, or an average of approximately 4,125,000 a year. It now seems reasonable to expect that the 1927 production will equal, if it does not exceed, this four-year average."

"The well organized business, shaping its plans for 1927 on a high value per dollar for the customer, can look forward to a continuance of the prosperity which has marked the last three years," Willys declares.

"Buyers are concentrating their interest on products which have achieved national recognition through intrinsic merit and through a cordial spirit of service rendered to the customer.

"Every indication points to the fact that our output for 1927 will be greater than any previously attained."

"The automotive industry is an industry, for example, which has experienced a record-breaking year and yet has been most careful to keep production and sales closely allied and to keep finance and commitments well in hand," says Chrysler. "It is typical of the larger industries which have enjoyed their prosperity sanely.

"The only danger I can see is the possibility that men in some industries may feel inclined to resort to "pressure" methods to stimulate sales and justify production in excess of last year All industries cannot expect increases year after year."

"I view 1927 with real confidence."

Car and Truck Registrations Last Year Show 2,254,000 Gain Over 1925—1,675,000 Out of Service.

Motor vehicles in use in the United States now number approximately 22,342,457. Registrations of passenger and commercial cars last year showed a gain of 2,254,000 or 11.2 per cent over 1925. Passenger cars registered number 19,465,676, an increase of 1,831,793 or 10.3 per cent over the previous year. Commercial vehicle registrations total 2,876,781, a gain of 421,688 over 1925, says Motor.

With domestic sales of passenger cars for the year approximating 3,525,000 and with a registration gain of only about 1,850,000 it is obvious that something like 1,675,000 cars were taken out of service. It should not be assumed, however, that all of them were scrapped, for the number of used cars which have accumulated in the hands of dealers since last January must be deducted from the total. It is probable these dealer stocks will account for 600,000 or 700,000.

AMERICAN INFLUENCE SEEN AT LONDON SHOW

The notes of American body designers on the reecnt London and Paris automobile shows are of unusual interest this year. There is evidently a wide difference in trends and tastes in the English, French and American automobile markets.

Teh notes of Kingston Forbes, Buick body engineer, who has returned from Europe, where he attended the English and continental shows, indicate that in London the American influence is much in evidence. The British cars, Forbes said, were similar to those of American make in details of body construction, the combination wood and metal type being almost universal. Closed bodies were the center of interest, with new six-cylinder cars coming in for a large share of attention. The crowds were more interested in British cars.

Weymann Body Big Feature.

While the small car retains its leadership in numbers shown, there seems to be a growing desire for more power and less gear shifting. It was the opinion of many in authority that a reduction in the tax would swing popular favor definitely to the side of the larger car.

The Paris show was a surprise, both in the number of exhibits and in the great interest manifested by the crowds that thronged the large hall and gallery. The outstanding feature of this show was the Weymann fabric body, which was used on nearly 75 per cent of the exhibits. The designs shown in most of the bodies indicated that much care and thought had been put on them in the last few years, although the lines are spoiled by not using the belt lines and double moldings.

The French cars appear lower than those of American make, this result accomplished by cutting down the head room rather than lowering the chassis. They average 36 inches from the cushion and 46 inches from floor to roof, as against 37 and 48 inches, respectively, in the average American car. Running-board heights vary considerably, but average about the same as in American cars.

Colors Follow American Trend.

The exterior appearance of the French car compares favorably with the American, as it is finished with side aprons covering the frame, and well proportioned fenders and pans. In interior finish, the French surpass in detail and design, and in the refinement of the fittings. Seats are more comfortable, resulting from liberal use of hair over lighter springs.

Colors follow the American trend toward the bright side. Light grays, browns and tans, as well as greens and reds, are much in evidence.

The latest developments in body design, Forbes says, seem to be toward closed cars with detachable top coverings, the idea being to open the roof of the car for ventilation and permit seeing the country when touring. This is a development which has not been featured in America, except occasionally in custom body work.

$1,500,000 Sales at New York Salon

With new records for attendance at the automobile salon in New York orders taken at retail for both chassis and custom bodies approximated $1,500,000.

NEW JORDAN SERVICE AND SALES QUARTERS

Archer-Mann Motor Co. Occupies Building Erected for It on Lindell Boulevard.

A new Jordan showroom and service station has been opened on Lindell boulevard, at Sarah street, by the Archer-Mann Motor Co., which has succeeded the MacCarthy-Archer Motor Co. as distributer of Jordan eights in this territory. Jordan service is to be given, beginning tomorrow, in the new building, to which the firm is moving from 439 North Euclid.

The structure fronts 50 feet on Lindell boulevard and is in the form of an "L," with a frontage of 65 feet on Sarah street and 180 feet on the alley opening from Sarah.

The entire Lindell boulevard front, which is set back 40 feet from the line, is devoted to a showroom 85 feet deep. This showroom has a tiled floor and its walls are done in cream with white trimming, while the ceiling is in white. It is brilliantly lighted from the wide windows and from a large skylight. In rear of the display space are the firm's offices.

A passageway, large enough to drive cars through, runs from the showroom back to the service department, which is 75 by 115 feet. Truss roof construction makes it possible to have no posts in the service department, which is being equipped and machined for all kinds of service operations on Jordan cars.

Altogether, the new Jordan headquarters is one of the best lighted and most attractive motor car establishments in St. Louis.

A good cold weather starter now more dependable than ever

Probably no single feature of Dodge Brothers Motor Car has been more widely talked about and commended than the power and promptness of the starter.

The new two-unit starting and lighting system now advances Dodge Brothers leadership in this important respect still further.

There are now no moving starter parts when the car is in motion—no starter chain—no noise—no wear. The new starter is even more DEPENDABLE than the old, and far simpler and more compact in construction.

Many other major improvements have been added during the past twelve months, all vitally affecting performance and increasing value far beyond the apparent measure of current Dodge Brothers prices.

To Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to make. Saves about $2

Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is, pine has a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. This makes a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for three times the money. It is pure, and tastes good.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and hoarseness.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

CHANGES IN CIRCUIT COURT ASSIGNMENTS

Only Democrat Retires Tomorrow and All 16 Judges Will Be Republican.

Changes in the St. Louis Circuit Court bench become effective tomorrow.

Judge Franklin Miller, the only Democrat, retires to be succeeded by a Republican, making the full bench of 16 Judges Republican.

Judge Charles W. Rutledge, who was elected in November, begins his duties in the Court of Domestic Relations, where he has been assigned for two years. Judge William H. Killoren starts on his second term and will remain in his present division, Room No. 5 at the Courthouse. Judge Harry A. Rosskopf, who served by appointment after the resignation of Judge Grimm in March, 1925, but who was succeeded by Judge William J. Blesse, who was elected for a short term, again returns to the bench. He was elected in November for a term of six years and has been assigned to Civil Division No. 6, Judge Blesse retiring.

Other Court Changes.

Other changes are: Judge Taylor from a jury civil division to the Juvenile Court, Judge Ittner from an equity to a jury division, Judge Calhoun from equity to a jury room, Judge Hil from the assignment court to an equity division, and Judge Harmann from the Juvenile Court to an equity room. Judge Landwehr also changes from a criminal division to the assignment court, and Judge Pearcy from the Court of Domestic Relations to the court vacated by Judge Landwehr.

Judge Franklin Miller will again enter the practice of law, having rented offices in the Boatmen's Bank Building. He was elected to the Circuit bench in November, 1920, but was not a candidate for renomination. During his term he spent six months as assignment Judge, one year in an equity court, a year in the criminal branch and the rest in civil jury divisions.

Leaves Clean Docket.

When he adjourned his court last Friday he had disposed of all matters pending before him, leaving his docket clean. During his term he frequently held court at night, both in the civil and criminal divisions, by this method disposing of a great amount of work.

When he took charge in the criminal division to which he had been assigned in 1922, he found 187 cases pending. He not only cleaned up the old cases, but also expeditiously tried the new business presented to him, so that on his retirement from that branch of the service only eight cases were untried.

Judge Miller was educated at the University of Missouri and at Washington University Law School and was admitted to practice in 1903. He is 4 years old.

Before leaving the bench he was the guest of honor at a farewell reception tendered by Judge Calhoun at the latter's home, 3523 Longfellow boulevard, at which all the Judges were present.

New Office Force Sworn in by Circuit Clerk.

Forty-four deputies appointed by Circuit Clerk John Schmoll to serve during his new term which began yesterday were sworn in Friday by him. They previously had been confirmed by the Circuit Judges. Schmoll reappointed nearly all of his old staff, including 18 clerks and stenographers whose appointment it was not necessary for the Judges to approve. His total staff consists of 62 employes.

Three new deputies are Edward H. Loffhagen, Frank O'Laughlin, and Albert M. Vogel. Loffhagen and O'Laughlin formerly were employed in the Office of the Clerk of the Court of Criminal Correction. Julius Hammerstein and E. H. Maune were promoted to be courtroom clerks, succeeding Louis (Tub) Becker, who has been appointed chief deputy under Gus Baur as Clerk of the Court of Criminal Correction, and August F. Weeke, who was not reappointed. Schmoll thought Weeke was not loyal to him, reports having been made he had endeavored to get Henry Fahrenkog, a member of the Board of Education, to run in the primary for the nomination of Circuit Clerk, when Schmoll was a candidate for renomination. Weeke declared the reports were not true and said he supported Schmoll. He will engage in the insurance business. He has been a deputy clerk 16 years.

John C. Sheman was re-appointed chief deputy, with Arthur G. Meyne as his assistant; William F. Hein chief of the filing and docketing division, and John F. Kern, secretary to Schmoll. Fifteen women are among the appointees. Courtroom clerks who were re-appointed are: Henry Schewe, Louis Hocker, Adolph Zimmer, Richard Smart, George Meisinger Jr., George J. Hug, Miss Alice Pitcher, James T. Smith, Edward H. Rupert, Val. L. Liebig, Anton P. Klein and Harry Baer.

Before administering the oath in a body to his deputies Schmoll made a speech in which he cautioned them to give efficient and courteous service to the public. Previously the oath for his new term was administered to him by Judge Landwehr.

KILLS HIS WIFE AND WOUNDS TWO OTHER WOMEN

Baltimore Man Angered When Attempt at Reconciliation Fails—Submits to Arrest.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 1.—Roman R. Hayward, 28 years old, today shot and killed his wife, Lottie, and injured two other women. Police said Hayward had failed in an attempt to effect a reconciliation with his wife after a separation of three months. He was arrested and charged with murder.

The shooting occurred on the sidewalk in front of the home of Mrs. Mary Insley, mother of Mrs. Hayward, where the young woman had been staying. Hayward, standing erect a few paces away, sent four more shots into his wife's body after the first had felled her. Stray bullets entered a nearby apartment, wounding Mrs. Rita Davis, 28, and her aunt, Mrs. Maggie Borish. Mrs. Davis was shot in the leg and a bullet lodged in Mrs. Borish's ankle.

Hayward made no attempt to evade arrest.

Consumption in 1926 Made It Record Prosperity Year

INDUSTRY PRODUCED MORE AND MORE WAS ABSORBED; PROSPECT BRIGHT FOR 1927

Better Than 25 Per Cent Increase Shown in Total Net Income of 167 Industrial Leaders, Writer Shows.

By PAUL WILLARD GARRETT,
Financial Editor of New York Evening Post.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—More goods fere produced in this country last year than ever before, and more were consumed, but what made 1926 the most prosperous year in history was the steadiness and fullness of the flow into consumption. Large profits do not spring from spurts in the production of something not wanted, but are ground out through efforts to satisfy the demand for a product or service that is sustained. For a year the country's absorptive power has held on a high level, without so much as a downturn in summer. While 1926 was not as spectacular a year as was 1925, producing neither the latter's setbacks nor forward adjustments, it brought a prosperity far wider and more abundant. This new stabilized position in business is what gives real hope for 1927.

Steadily and safely, as such things go, the wide swings in industry from high to low are disappearing. Progress in that respect has been pronounced since the restoration of peace has permitted the Federal Reserve system to perform its normal functions as a central bank.

A greater degree of stability in business was achieved in 1926 than in any previous 12-months' period of which record is available. In no peace time year has the maximum fluctuation from the best to the poorest months in the steel industry, for example, been so small. Even in the general business curve a variation of five points for 1926 covers the extremes in fluctuations. In 1925 it was 12 points and in 1924 22 points.

Corporate Profits Greater.

Moderate gains in production have been turned into corporate profits greater by far than those for 1925 or for any other peace time year. The 1926 total net income of 167 leading industrial concerns will exceed a billion dollars, as against $790,000,000 for the same institutions in the year before. That indicates better than a 25 per cent increase. In similar fashion, the railroads of the country will earn 9 per cent more and the public utilities, as judged by the important ones, 12 per cent more than in the year previous.

These profits were not paper profits such as made 1917 so remarkable in some respects. They were genuine profits. They could not have been accumulated in any ordinary year. It took the steady flow of goods into consumption, the big volume of business and the freedom from disconcerting price movements to produce them.

Falling commodity prices have encouraged dealers everywhere to keep inventories down, but the gentleness of the decline has inspired new faith in the price structure. For the first time it has been demonstrated that falling prices and prosperity are not necessarily paradoxical, especially when the recession is not so sharp as to offset the advantages gained through a moderation of the swings. Except as it staves off speculation and thus prevents inflation, the shrinkage in commodity values is a handicap to business, but this has been overcome by the introduction of more efficient methods in production and distribution.

Waste Now at Minimum.

Waste in industry to a minimum, labor has been more productive through the aid of machinery and costs have been cut. These rules of business procedure are not the inspiration of a moment. They have been worked out gradually and will be applied even more diligently in 1927 than in 1926.

Widespread adoption of a hand-to-mouth policy has released funds formerly tied up and for the manifold benefits derived from their use the country has its railroads largely to thank. If their record of performance has helped to bring on prosperity, however, through the rapid turn-over in trade made possible by a perfection in carrier service, the time is near when the roads themselves may confidently take their reward. Through funds returned faithfully into property since the return to private control, the railroads have reached a physical condition more nearly perfect than ever hiterto attained. Public confidence in them has returned and in 1927 the railroads may realize their dream of many years to raise a larger proportion of new funds through common stock flotations.

It is not always easy to point a finger to the phases of industrial expansion that underlie prosperity, but in the present era, growth in the building and the automobile industries gave the principal impetus to expansion.

Expansion in the steel industry was important, but in a sense its rise came as a result of widenings in the building and motor, or their

NOTHING DONE BY G. O. P. REGIME TO HARASS BUSINESS

Protected Industries Content, Railroad Rates Untouched, Trusts Unmolested During Year.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—The existence of a surplus in the Treasury does not tell the story of the relationship between Government and business in the year just coming to a close. It tells only of a repression of extravagance and a general productivity of income-tax rates. The basic influences which have emanated from the Government and given to business as a whole the stimulus so necessary in an era of expansion are somewhat unrelated to fiscal policy. They concern the field of legislative interference and administrative investigation through commissions and bureaus charged with regulatory functions.

Take, for example, the railroads of the United States. They can be changed over night from paying propositions to heavy losers if the sources of their incomes are suddenly changed. The roads today are in better condition than they have been at any time since the war. Their opportunity to earn what they consider a fair return has not been impeded, notwithstanding the general cry from the West for a reduction in freight rates. This has been a vital factor in American prosperity, because the holders of railroad securities are scattered far and wide. Not only are the owners of railroads to be found among numerous individuals who have put their savings in railroad securities, but institutions which have funds to invest have invested heavily in railroad stocks and bonds.

Reproduction Valuation.

Now it may be that this wide distribution of securities has had an influence or it may be that in the general confusion of the farm problem the matter of lower freight rates has not received the emphasis of other years, but the fact remains that a year has gone by and the railroads have been in a large sense let alone. And they want to be let alone, arguing that under recent decisions of the Supreme Court, the valuation of their properties must take into consideration "spot reproduction values" or the cost of replacement in present day terms.

Take the next field—the manufacturing industries of the country. The Government has provided certain advantages which have stimulated export trade, as, for example, the combinations made possible under the Webb law. Prices can be fixed for export and agreements made in the foreign field which would not be allowed in domestic trade. America is just beginning to reap some of these advantages. In fact some big business men are beginning to ask that something be done to permit them to pool data on costs of production and the fixing of prices in domestic trade. Some of them suggest that on some products a regulatory body could be set up to protect the public against exorbitant prices. The wastefulness of competition in large industry is really at the bottom of this the-

U. S. to Increase Exports if Domestic Trade Falls In 1927, U. S. Commerce Bureau Director Says

American Business Realizes Importance of Foreign Markets as Stabilizer of Commercial Uncertainties at Home.

By JULIUS KLEIN,
Director, United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

THERE have been some current opinion in trade circles during the closing weeks of 1926 to the effect that the coming year may bring moderate recession in domestic business—nothing as drastic as that of 1921, but a slowing down of the extraordinary activity which characterized the greater part of the past year. If this moderation of domestic trade occurs its repercussions will be materially counterbalanced by a more intensive effort in export. During the past five years there has been a truly extraordinary spread of more intelligent appreciation throughout our business community of the stabilizing possibilities of foreign trade as a corrective of any domestic uncertainties.

Marketing Perspective Change.

The inquiries directed to the Department of Commerce, which have increased nearly seven times since 1921, afford ample evidence of this change in the marketing perspective of our merchants and manufacturers. A groundwork of carefully thought-out planning for diversification of market outlets is evident in practically every industry in the country. One evidence of this was the spurt in export effort in connection with the slight lag in business during 1924.

This foresight is also evident in many industries of a seasonal character which had hitherto been passively resigning themselves to more or less annual sags in their business cycles. They have been discovering the distinct possibilities of correctives of this situation through the exploitation of markets below the equator during the domestic off season and we may therefore look for more stability and assurance in the operations of such industries than was the case, for instance, in the more drastic slump of 1921.

We may face the new year, therefore, with definite assurance as to the availability of this more widely appreciated asset of foreign trade as a stabilizer of our general commercial position.

Recovery in Europe.

So far as the overseas market situation is concerned, an outstanding feature is the slow but sure progress in the recovery of Europe, whose purchases during 1926 from us probably exceeded $2,250,000,000, or 47 per cent of our total exports, according to the preliminary figures available at this writing. Although these purchases were made up largely of basic raw material staples, they comprise also a formidable total of wholly or partly fabricated wares. It is not generally realized that during the calendar year 1925 our exports to Europe of the latter groups exceeded $880,000,000 and constituted no less than 34 per cent of our total sales in that year to Europe. Any evidences, therefore, of the recovery of purchasing power in the Old World will contribute directly to the business of our manufacturers, as well as of our farmers and miners.

There is also the important fact that the rehabilitation of the Old World means more business for the wool, cereal and meat trades of the Argentine and Australia; for the tea, fiber and vegetable oil producers of Asia; for the mines of South Africa, and the fabrics, fruits and tobacco of the Near East. We may, therefore, expect consequent reactions upon the openings for our manufacturers in these remote overseas territories.

There can be no doubt that Europe has made moderate but definite progress during 1926—not so much in lines capable of statistical expression (trade, employment, etc.), as in the less precisely definable factors, such as trade reorganization, good will, commercial understandings, etc. This progress was, in fact, materially accelerated during the closing months of the year and this momentum will undoubtedly carry well into 1927. Conspicuous among these episodes is the settlement of the British coal strike, which in view of the pre-eminence of that industry will make a vital contribution to the development of British business in the coming months.

Many Serious Problems.

In this connection, however, there seem to be current in some trade circles somewhat too optimistic expectations as to the immediate reactions from this gratifying event. After all, there are many serious problems still facing the industries of the Island Kingdom, and even though many of them are contingent upon the clarifying of the coal situation, we must not expect too prompt and extreme a recovery. Such a development, even though it were possible, would be more dramatic and picturesque than really helpful.

Britain is still our best customer, having taken no less than 20 per cent of our total exports in the fiscal year 1926. Hence the very direct interest and concern which we have in the assurance of substantial lasting recovery. The final figures of her exports for 1926 will probably show a decrease of more than 16 per cent below 1925, largely because of the coal tie-up. It will be safe, therefore, to assume that 1927 will bring a decided recovery from this situation.

Among the other obstacles in her way as she faces the new year is the collapse of China, which has hurt her more severely perhaps than any other of the major exporting countries. She will be likely to feel more and more keenly the competition of the new German shipping. The world-wide sag in textile trades hits her more than any other nation. Nevertheless, in the case of each of these difficulties there are already signs of modification and our British market should therefore continue to command the close attention which it has deserved in past years.

Encouraging Signs.

On the Continent there are encouraging signs of moderate but steady progress. The darkest spot in the last few years has been in Central Europe, but here there has been a distinct recovery in 1926, with prospects of continued improvement in the coming year. The German exports for 1926 were probably 13 per cent above those for 1925. She has already reached pre-war volume in her trade with several individual markets in the Far East and Latin America, and although her total is still below 1913 in quantity, the present rate of her gains seems to assure that the greater part of the remaining lost ground will be recovered before the end of 1927.

Throughout the rest of the Continent there are reassuring signs of an improvement in many vital respects. Whereas in 1921 Switzerland was about the only European country with a stabilized currency at practically pre-war figures, in terms of dollar exchange, at the present time we find France and Italy the only major commercial Powers still troubled with exchange difficulties.

The war may have destroyed incalculable quantities of industrial capital and trained personnel, but we may say that it left at least one advantage in its wake—namely, the clearing away of many old-time accumulations of antiquated processes, equipment and ideas in industrial circles. In their place we now find a greater spread of hydroelectric power, the application of new technique, notably in chemistry, and the adoption of certain lines of American practice in elimination of waste and standardization of output, the results of which are, of course, cumulative and will become increasingly manifest as time goes on.

International Combines.

Another phase of this recovery is the spread of the international cartel or combine, of which a dozen or more are now active. Although some anxiety has been expressed in American quarters as to the competitive significance of these alignments, and although in certain instances they are making inroads on our markets in Latin America and the Far East, it might be pointed out that an analysis of the potential output of such groups shows almost invariably a formidable advantage in behalf of American industry because of its immensely greater domestic market.

These combinations are a vivid illustration of the progress being made toward international accord in the Old World. They evidence a distinct departure from the old jingoistic nationalism, which has been such a deterrent of sound business in recent years.

In the New World our market possibilities are by no means discouraging. It is true that such episodes as the political uncertainties in Mexico, the depression in Cuba and other sugar producing areas, and the uncertainties of exchange in Brazil have for the time being modified our trade prospects in those sections. Nevertheless there are correctives now at work which make the outlook far from depressing.

Canadian Market Grows.

First of all it should be borne in mind that our leading market in the New World—namely, Canada—is moving steadily forward in terms of general buying power. Her own exports show a healthy increase of 4 per cent over 1925 in value and an even greater advance in quantity, owing to price modifications. The Canadian market is being more widely appreciated than ever before by American exporters, particularly on the part of small firms throughout the industrial sections of the Middle West. Inquiries handled by the offices of the Department of Commerce in Canada indicate a decidedly increased activity on the part of small American manufacturers in this trade. It is, in fact, a sort

STRESSES IMPOSSIBILITY OF ACCURATE FORECAST

By MELVIN A. TRAYLOR,
President American Bankers' Association.

THE trend of business during this last year has shown the impossibility of forecasting with accuracy the future.

Most observers a year ago expected that by the end of the year we should be in a time of marked depression. Fortunately, these predictions did not come true, but it shows how easily even the most expert economist may be misled.

Again we are hearing that for one reason or another, largely owing to the situation in the automobile and the building industries, we shall be face to face with a recession next year.

This may be so, but as long as credit remains as plentiful as at present and stocks as low as they are now, there is no reason to anticipate anything resembling a crisis in our afafirs—given fair crops and no untoward happenings in the world outside of our own boundaries.

AEROPLANE MANUFACTURE NOW MAJOR INDUSTRY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—For the first time in American history, manufacture of airplanes obtained a status as a major industry. The majority of factories were operated at capacity throughout the greater part of the year. Even so, they were unable to keep pace with demand at certain periods. This was due in large part to the multiple air mail routes established, the introduction of night flying on these routes, and the success of freight and passenger transportation services in various sections.

Some Lines Brisk in Turkey.

The wool, mohair, tobacco and opium business in Turkey continue brisk. Wheat and flour prices are more stable. The carpet, gum tragacanth and filbert markets show somewhat decreased activity. The cotton market reflected the general depression resulting from lowered world cotton prices.

Festus Wade Sees 1927 as Year Of Consolidations and Mergers In Interest of Lower Prices

Mercantile Trust Head Expects Business to Carry on as in More Recent Past Without Violent Expansion or Depression.

By FESTUS J. WADE,
President, Mercantile Trust Co.

Business will carry on in 1927 just as it has in the more recent past, without violent expansion or depression, and will continue to do so as long as the major economic forces, such as transportation, finance under the Federal Reserve System, etc., are allowed to function undisturbed. It is said that business is never more than 20 per cent off, and there is no reason now apparent why it should be off at all in 1927. The fear of restrictive and adverse legislation, always a mental hazard to business, should not be a source of worry this year.

Installment buying has come to stay, and becomes a condition to deal with instead of quarrel with. Education of the buyers, carrying a warning not to mortgage income over a certain safe percentage, seems necessary. Danger lies in the abuse of this method, rather than the use of it.

Economy has become a business watchword as well as a Government watchword, and I look for 1927 to be a year of consolidations and mergers, in the interest of lower price to the consumer through greater volume of production. Competition has squeezed the inefficient and the inefficiency out of business, and made smaller profit per unit the way to greater profit per year. Consolidation, with its many economies, is the logical solution.

When summing up the business situation one year ago I made the following statement: "The great facility with which mortgage loans on speculative building can be sold to the investing public seems to have already reached the limit of safety. Speculative building and the public demand for these grades of securities continue." That that statement was true has been proved by the events of 1926, and though these events were hard on quite a number of investors, the general effect is good because of the lesson taught. Building on speculation is like speculation of any other kind, and should not be confused with investing or coupled with safe investments. It continues as long as the public demand for the resulting securities continues. A first mortgage bond, issued under the necessary safeguards and sold by a reputable institution, is one of the safest of investments. But like anything else, mortgage investments can be mishandled.

Only Tendency Toward Inflation.

The foregoing appears to have been about the only tendency toward inflation during the past year, and that has been lessened to the extent that little or no effects should be felt from it in 1927. There should be no shortage of funds for legitimate building during the coming year, just as there was no shortage during the past year. Many investors became accustomed to the high interest returns offered following the war, but they are beginning to realize that those high yields were the product of a condition which was not normal, and that the present lower interest rate returns are normal, and the result of a healthy condition, namely, plenty of funds for business purposes.

ST. LOUIS RETAIL SALES INCREASE IN 1926 HEALTHY

By THOMAS W. GARLAND,
President, The Associated Retailers of St. Louis.

The volume of retail sales, as indicated by reports from members of the Associated Retailers shows that 1926 made a healthy increase over 1925. It is the consensus of opinion among the merchants in this group that 1927 will show at least as great, if not greater gains over 1926, as '26 has shown over '25.

The improvement in live stock prices, together with the fair, if not quite satisfactory price for wheat and corn has increased the buying power of the territory contiguous to us. The action of the United States Government, through its land bank, in assisting the co-operative cotton growers and factors in the South, with the handling of about four millions of bales of surplus cotton crop in such a way that the growers will receive not less than 12 cents, and probably 13 to 15 cents per pound, will partially relieve the stringency of the situation in the South.

Many manufacturing and industrial enterprises in this district are showing substantial gains, with orders ahead for months to come.

Railroads are more prosperous than for many years. The $27,000,000 Bond Issue money will go into circulation in 1927.

These hopeful signs all pointing one way lead the merchant who is usually an optimist, to believe that while 1927 may be no "boom" year, it will be one in which it is reasonable to expect increased and continued prosperity.

Philippine Trade Is Active.

Seasonal activity continues in certain retail lines in the Philippines. Wholesale markets, however, are quiet, probably pending actual inventories. All oil mills are operating.

ST. LOUIS CLOSES YEAR OF WEALTH AND HAPPINESS AND IS READY FOR 1927

Everything From $70,000,000 in Civic Improvements to Capturing World Pennant Achieved, Banker Points Out.

By WALTER B. WEISENBERGER,
Vice President, National Bank of Commerce.

When the firm of St. Louis & Co. closed its books last night for the year, there were many strange, some fantastic, a few regrettable, but mostly pleasing entries in the ledger of a great city's progress. Old 1926 was a mixture of moods, chiefly happy. The "moving finger" wrote of "cabbages and Queens, and many other things;" there is a faded record reading "Wall"—let's see, what was that about: There's Marie's name, Trudy, Suzanne and Bonzano, visitors these; a pennant won, a Hornsby lost; a new Senator; nearby, a forgotten charge-off marked "recall." What a jumbled but satisfying lot of things; $70,000,000 in new civic improvements; the "aqua"-Centennial in Forest Park; the annexation that failed; here's a strange entry: the word "Wabash" with a crossing marked through it, or is it over it? Another reads: Bridge game improving, approach shots still wobbly. Some last-minute hurried entries show a Federal building maybe, and a riverfront to be. A widened Olive street, a new court house, the Bell skyscraper, reaching heavenward as if to carry forward the hopes of a greater St. Louis, but, best of all, a preponderance of business records that seem to total the greatest prosperity in many a year.

As '26 becomes tomorrow, it leaves memories rich in the rewards of commercial enterprise that are as bright as any in the city's annals. The volume, if not always the profit, of factory effort, ran into record figures. The value of the manufactured products in St. Louis proper exceeded the billion figure, giving employment to more than 125,000 wage earners. Those figures sound prosaic, but they make happier New Years than even greeting cards.

Heralded in its municipal advertising as "the city that combines mass distribution with mass production" it is not strange to find that Washington avenue — the wholesale group—scored decided advances in their competitive effort with other large markets to hold the patronage of that vast hinterland—the Great Southwest.

The so-called, hand-to-mouth buying policy that has characterized the retailers' marketing for two years has in less fortunate locations been demoralizing. St. Louis, with its central location for easy and quick dispatch of merchandising, has turned the short-order business into an asset rather than a liability.

Background of Plenty.

There is nothing of the parvenu or the upstart about St. Louis' getting along; no skipjacks in her make-up. There is even lacking the dynamic pace and punch of the breezy West, but her place in the sun is secure because she has that much to be desired "southern exposure."

No circumstance of the city's secure future is quite so fortunate. Other markets have other trade territories but none where available area, diversification and energy are so happily combined. Comparison shows that this prosperous trade empire of the Southwest is growing twice as fast as the Northwest in population and one-half faster than the whole United States. As the nearest industrial center with good will relations born of years of friendly contact, even the aggressiveness of the Chicago market and the water competition of the Atlantic Seaboard are not a serious outlook. It seems the farmers in this charmed area don't appear to recline so much on top of the rail fence and holler "help." Auxiliary production, developing of vegetable and fruit service, of dairying combined with rapid freight service is coming along rapidly as another ancher to the windward.

Faults That Fail.

When cotton falters as a top crop—oil spurts up as a subteranean crop—such are the blessings of diversification. Cotton hasn't worked out so disastrously either, except to affect the price of all-wool suits and pure olive oil. With the South turned more industrial than agricultural in the last few years, the cheaper raw material is quickening the textile output. The Southwest like its pet city of the Saint is a bit cautious about putting all her eggs in one basket—one industry or one crop.

Rails Are Happy, Too!

Naturally the railroads serving this promised land should reflect some of its opulence, and quite logically we find the Southwest railroads we conceitedly call "St. Louis Lines" featuring general transportation betterment in the nation. Net earnings of the nation's carriers will undoubtedly break all records. New tonnage records were hung up by the Southwest roads for 1926 and the new 12 months is faced with highest expectations. According to President Kurn, the Frisco main-

ST. LOUIS SHARED IN YEAR'S PROSPERITY

Clearing House Head Says Organization Set New Standards for Business Volume.

By GEORGE W. WILSON,
President St. Louis Clearing House.

The business year of 1926 has been one of unusual activity and the total volume of goods produced will doubtless exceed that of any other past year. St. Louis with its highly diversified industrial life has liberally shared in this prosperity. Corporation and other business profits will, on the whole, be good. One of the most important factors in producing sound industrial conditions in the past and one which has contributed very largely to the prosperity of the past several years is the better adjustment that has come about between the supply of and the demand for goods. This expresses itself in smaller inventories, the rapid turnover of goods, less capital needs and more efficient use of plant, capital and labor since it keeps all of the factors of production continuously at work.

Our greatly improved transportation methods, especially those of the railroads and improved highways has made this improvement in production and distribution of products possible. Keeping current production in harmony with current consumption, together with our efficient industrial organization, our mass production, low cost and efficient labor gives us a great advantage, both in the national and international markets and serves as a protection, if not a guarantee, against the severity of industrial reactions.

Bank credit has been and continues ample at moderate rates. All in all, the past year exceeded the most sanguine expectation and there is nothing in the underlying conditions which need cause uneasiness for the new year. The records of the Clearing House, in harmony with the great activity in business, sets new standards for volume of business. With the individual members of the Clearing House banks there has been nothing unusual during the year. While the demand on banks from business have not been large, yet the funds have been kept employed and the return secured to the members of the Clearing House banks have been satisfactory.

Locally and nationally we enter the year 1927 in good condition.

HEAVY RAILROAD OUTLAYS

$875,000,000 in Capital Expenditures Reported for Year Just Closed

Capital expenditures of class 1 railroads in the United States in 1926 totaled $875,000,000, according to estimates of the Bureau of Railway Economics. This would indicate that in the last four years the outlay for additions and betterments to railway plant and equipment has averaged $890,000,000 per annum.

In 1920 capital expenditures totaled $653,267,000; in 1921, $557,035,000; in 1922, $429,273,000; in 1923, $1,059,149,000; in 1924, $874,743,000; in 1925, $748,191,000. The seven-year total was $5,186,853,000.

1926 INVESTMENT APPROXIMATELY $7,000,000,000

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—American dollars continued to pour into foreign and domestic investments at a record-breaking rate in 1926. Capital flotations in the form of bond and stock issues for Governments, municipalities and corporate enterprises during the year approximated $7,000,000,000, and final compilations may show that even this unprecedented total has been eclipsed.

For the third year in succession foreign borrowings in the United States exceeded a billion dollars, although the total was slightly below last year's high record. More than half of this money went into productive enterprises, whose demands for the first time were greater than those of foreign Governments.

Illustrative of the broadening character of the investment market was a remarkable rise in the price of bonds to the highest level in more than a decade despite the enormous volume of new financing. Foreign obligations soared to heights which surpassed the most optimistic expectations of the underwriting bankers; some of the United States Treasury issues commanded premiums as high as 10 per cent for the first time in many years and countless corporation bonds sold at the best prices in their history.

Smaller Volume of Dealings.

The appreciation in the market value of bonds was the more significant because it took place in the face of a smaller volume of dealings. The turnover for the year was approximately $3,000,000,000, compared with $3,500,000,000 in 1925 and $4,000,000,000 in 1924.

Progressive improvement marked the course of price movements throughout the year. Changes in the Federal Reserve rediscount rates caused temporary interruptions to the trend, but in the main fluctuations paralleled those of the preceding two years, when prices worked up from their January lows to new high levels in December.

Rate Advance in January.

A strong buying movement which was in progress at the beginning of the year was little disturbed by the January advance in the New York Federal Reserve rate from 3½ to 4 per cent. As this demand began to taper off in the spring, fresh impetus was provided by a reduction in the bank rate to 3½ per cent. When the rediscount charge was returned to 4 per cent in August, the market hesitated for a time until it was assured that there would be no further upward revision. Prices then started to swing toward higher levels again, with several surprisingly vigorous rallies developing from time to time as the year drew to a close.

In view of the steady rise in bond values over the past several years, the conviction has grown that variations in rediscount and money rates have been only transitory influences in shaping the trend of prices. Among the more fundamental factors contributing to the competitive bidding for securities of this type have been the great expansion in the country's reservoir of investment funds; the growth in the number of bond buyers, including the small investors and corporations with large surpluses; the greater stability of money conditions and the reduction of some $6,000,000,000 in the Federal debt since the end of the World War.

St. Paul Reorganization.

For the first time in several years there were no large receiverships to play havoc with the bonds of financially distressed companies. On the contrary, considerable progress was made in reorganizing the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. and the American Writing Paper Co.

One of the most important financial operations of the year, although not the largest, was the flotation of a $50,000,000 bond issue for Belgium, representing half of an international stabilization loan. The proceeds enabled the Belgian Government to strengthen its finances and stabilize its currency on a new gold basis. Additional credits also were extended by the Federal Reserve Banks in association with the central banks of other countries to supplement a stabilization fund which had previously been in existence.

German Developments Financed.

Two German developments financed in the United States were of world-wide interest. The formation of a great steel combine known as the United Steel Works Corporation required about $60,000,000, half of which was raised for the Rheinelbe Union and other companies preliminary to the merger and the remainder upon completion of the consolidation. The great Stinnes industries, which encountered difficulties after the death of Hugo Stinnes, also turned to this country for financial aid. Two American companies were formed to acquire the properties and $25,000,000 was raised by the sale of bonds.

A curtailment in German borrowing is expected to result next year from the decision of the Government to reimpose a 10 per cent tax on external bond issues from which borrowing companies have been exempted for the past several years. This action followed the report of the Reparations Agent in which he pointed out that while Germany had transferred to creditor countries about $670,000,000 under the Dawes Plan it had borrowed from them about $875,000,000 in the same period. Borrowings in the United States alone were approximately the same as the reparation payments.

Largest Individual Offering.

The largest individual offering of the year was a $120,000,000 issue of 5 per cent debentures for the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, the proceeds of which were to be applied to the retirement of the company's $200,000,000 7 per cent preferred stock. The entire issue was absorbed by preferred stockholders, who were given preferential rights to subscribe. In the same week a $50,000,000 bond issue was sold for the Standard Oil Company of New York. Several other corporations took advantage of favorable bond market conditions to reduce their charges, the Chile Copper Company replacing $35,000,000 of 6 per cent bonds with an issue of 5 per cent debentures.

South American countries and provinces were well represented among the foreign borrowers. Large loans were arranged for the governments of Chile, Uruguay, Brazil and Argentina, as well as for the Province of Buenos Aires. A $20,000,000 loan for the City of Yokohama marked the third step in the Japanese reconstruction program.

Railroad Stock Financing.

Several railroads, including the Atlantic Coast Line and the Southern Railway, resumed stock financing and the great improvement in the price of the carrier shares is expected to pave the way for further operations of this sort next year. Other large stock offerings in 1926 included $86,000,000 for the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, $55,000,000 for the National Cash Register Company and $46,000,000 for the Tide Water Associated Oil Company.

GENERAL STOCK PRICE LEVEL IS ABOVE YEAR AGO

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Despite one of the severest reactions in stock exchange history last March, and indications of a slowing down in some major lines of business in 1927, the general level of stock prices at the close of the year is well above that at the end of 1925. Bond prices have risen to the highest levels since 1913. In both the bond and stock markets, the total volume of business in 1926 was slightly below that of 1925.

The major trend of stock prices has been upward since the early summer of 1924 although the big "bull" movement did not get under way until after the Presidential election that year. At the beginning of 1926 prices were rising and continued that way, with a few minor interruptions, until late in February when a heavy liquidating movement started, culminating in the disastrous March break which reduced quoted values of listed securities several billion dollars in the aggregate.

Alternate periods of weakness and strength characterized the late spring markets, with a rather definite upward tendency apparent again by early summer. This continued until the early fall when another sharp reaction took place. In the closing months of the year prices started to climb again, the industrial average touching the highest level ever recorded in the last month of the year.

Money Rate Factor.

While it is generally conceded that the trend of business and money rates undoubtedly will determine the movement of security prices in 1927, predictions of bankers and other competent observers of market conditions are more qualified than usual at this season of the year, indicating uncertainty. Those committed to the cycle theory of business and market trends naturally look for downward readjustment of values while others see nothing in fundamental conditions that would warrant a general recession, although admitting that irregularities may develop in certain lines.

Three principal sources of uneasiness are: 1, the huge volume of bank funds invested in securities; 2, the rapid growth of instalment buying, and 3, the low price of commodities, particularly cotton. Inability of business and commercial channels to absorb the huge imports of gold within the last few years, necessitating the employment of funds derived from its sale in the securities markets, is believed to be responsible for the gigantic investment of banks in stocks and bonds. While methods of financing instalment purchases undoubtedly have been improved and strengthened in the last year or two, the extensive use of this method particularly in the purchase of motor cars, radios and some others, is regarded as a source of danger in some quarters, and it is generally conceded that the real test of the system will not come until the country enters a period of general depression. The decline in commodity prices is feared largely because of its adverse effect on purchasing power, particularly in the agricultural regions.

Favorable Factors Named.

Favorable factors in the situation as the year draws to a close are an abundance of credit at relatively low rates; comparatively low inventories, resulting largely from so-called "hand to mouth" buying and quick and efficient transportation, increasing industrial efficiency, especially through the more general use of labor and time-saving devices; absence of any serious labor disputes and a generally high rate of employment, and gradual economic rehabilitation abroad.

On the other side of the ledger are: A slowing down in steel production and building construction; the low price of cotton; increasing foreign competition; the relatively low margin of profit in many industries, and the large volume of brokers' loans.

Steel Stock Dividend.

Steel shares, as a group, failed to make much progress. United States Steel common, however, soared to the highest price ever recorded in the closing weeks of the year in reflecting of unusually heavy peace-time earnings and the declaration of the long-waited 40 per cent stock dividend, a $200,000,000 "melon." Earlier in the year the stock had definitely been placed on a $7 annual basis. It is expected in Wall street that the same dividend will be maintained on the additional stock. Dividends on the common stock of the Republic Iron and Steel Co. were restored, after a lapse of five years, and the Crucible Steel dividend was increased from $4 to $5 and thence to $6. Bethlehem Steel common is expected to go on a dividend basis next year.

Oil companies enjoyed unusual prosperity, but this was not generally reflected in the petroleum stocks. Several false rallies in this group during the past few years, coupled with fears that record-breaking production this year, would unsettle the price structure led to some liquidation by tired and disappointed holders on all rallies. Retirement of the preferred stock of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and the transfer of the common stock of the Standard Oil Co. of New York from the curb market to the "big board" attracted widespread attention.

Rail Stocks Improve.

Establishment of new high traffic and earnings records by Class 1 railroads was mirrored in the general advance in stock prices and in increased dividends, the raising of the rate of Pennsylvania Railroad common being a noteworthy feature. Rejection of the original "Nickel Plate" merger plan by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the difficulties encountered in the preparation of a revised plan, together with a general wage increase to Eastern trainmen towards the end of the year, tended to keep speculative enthusiasm for the rails in check.

Railroad equipment stocks soared to record high levels, due to the heavy purchase of new equipment by the principal carriers and the more general use of new automatic train control and signal devices. Textile and packing shares lost ground in reflection of poor trade conditions, but they showed signs of marked improvement as the year drew to a close. Record-breaking chain store and mail order sales brought higher prices for stocks of those companies.

Not All Motors Rise.

Although the production and sale of automobiles broke all records, not all automobile stocks shared in this prosperity. The General Motors Corporation's earnings were enormous, exceeding those of the United States Steel Corporation for the first nine months of the year, and they were liberally shared with stockholders, who received generous cash dividends, in addition to a 50 per cent stock dividend. Stocks of accessory companies also presented several points of weakness.

U. S. Financial Structure Strong; Credit Still Ample

By ANDREW W. MELLON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

THE financial structure of the Federal Government is in excellent shape. The national debt is below $19,500,000,000, as compared with a peak of $26,500,000,000 just after the war; Government bonds are all above par and taxes are yielding ample revenue. Government expenditures have been kept down, and the work of the Federal Government is, I think, more efficiently handled.

Credit throughout the country seems to be ample. An indication of this is the ease with which $16,000,000 has recently been raised through private subscription for marketing corporations to handle the situation arising out of the large cotton crop. Money for investment is plentiful, and it is most encouraging to note the extent of security investments represented by the small investor. On the whole, it seems to me our domestic situation is in good shape and we can look forward to another satisfactory year.

The increase in installment-plan buying has caused much discussion. Within limits there is nothing inherently unsound in this practice. It has been customary to buy household furniture and pianos on the installment plan, and its extension to automobiles, washing machines and similar things represents only a natural enlargement of the articles purchased for personal use. One of the results of the extension of installment purchase has been to increase the immediate consumptive power of the public and thus permit large production and full employment to continue.

The increase in savings deposits, in building and loan associations, in life insurance and in investments shows that installment buying has not yet progressed to a point where it interferes with the intelligent saving of the American people.

PRICES FOR PELTS AT 1926 AUCTIONS ABOVE YEAR AGO

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Fashion stood solidly behind the fur market during the year, and in consequence, trappers, dealers, furriers and retailers had a most prosperous season. The prices for pelts at the leading auctions of the year ran higher than for the corresponding periods of 1925, and supplies were adequate under the stimulus of steady satisfactory quotations.

The skin of domestic animals came in for more than their usual share of profit, there being a special demand for baby lamb and baby calf. The short-haired pelts were in the forefront, with good sales of such furs as broadtail, caracul, kolinsky, mole, squirrel, rabbit and muskrat.

RECORD VOLUME OF BUSINESS ON CURB

Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—On the New York Curb Exchange the year 1926 set a new high record for total of transactions.

The bull campaign of October-November, 1925, which had its inception in the excited speculation in the motor shares both here and on the Stock Exchange, and subsequently communicated itself to the entire list, went a long way toward swelling the 1925 transactions to the maximum of 113,000,000 shares. While this volume has been exceeded in the year just ended, it was not the result of an unwarranted speculation for the rise, such as that of the late months of 1925 which had its culmination in the drastic break in prices some three months later.

It is conservatively estimated that total sales of stocks for 1926 will approximate 125,000,000 shares, while bond sales will disclose a gain of some $25,000,000 to a total of $300,000,000. The significant feature concerning this increased volume of business was that it was accompanied by a more orderly price movement, and accountable for by the fact that new issues representing more than 600 companies were listed.

LOCAL INDUSTRIAL STABILITY IN 1926 WELL MAINTAINED

Employment Generally Normal With "Above the Average" Totals in Many Plants.

By ALBERT J. DAVIS,
President, Manufacturers and Merchants Association of St. Louis.

IN REVIEWING the manufacturing situation in St. Louis, it is important to consider the broad general field of American business, since the industries of St. Louis are so highly diversified that business conditions in this city never reflect the State of any one industry as Detroit reflects the automotive industry, or Pittsburg iron and steel.

Employment generally in our industries the past year was well up to normal, and in many plants "above the average" employment totals reflected increased volume of production. Industrial stability, a noted characteristic of our community, was again well maintained during the year.

The general condition of St. Louis industries is healthy. The national shoe industry continues to manifest a decided swing away from New England to the Middle West.

The automotive industry of the United States faces certain problems of readjustment, but St. Louis will be less affected by this factor than the great industrial centers of the Great Lakes and the Ohio River Valley.

The enormous national building program has during the past twelve months reflected itself in the prosperity of local industries furnishing builders' supplies.

Our local iron and steel industry is very closely bound up with railway supply. The increasing activity in locomotive manufacture which the last three months have brought forth is necessarily beneficial to St. Louis. A period of slack demand for railway cars brought about by greater efficiency of the railroads in their use, seems to be coming to an end through the inevitable wearing out of equipment now on hand, a situation of importance to the great car building industry of the St. Louis industrial district. The recent increase of our pig-iron producing capacity by the blowing in of a new 700-ton furnace is an industrial event of the first magnitude.

Certain lines of industry have had their troubles during the past year; but in each case St. Louis conditions have merely reflected national problems, due mostly to over equipment in certain lines.

In the present era of frequent and small orders, the facto St. Louis are profiting incre by our central location. Th dustrial position on the seems solid and appears to ho good prospects for the year.

St. Louis Investment Banking Institutions Now Finance Entire Mississippi Vall

Past Year One of Gradually Rising Prices Investment Securities, Particularly Corporation Bonds.

By HARRY F. STIX.
Chairman Mississippi Valley Group Investment Bankers' Association of America.

The year just closed will go down in the history of investment bankers as one of gradually rising prices for investment securities, and corporation bonds in particular, with the demand always one step ahead of the supply. The increase in the prices of corporation bonds has permitted an easy and almost imperceptible adjustment in the yields of income tax free municipal bonds to the latest and proposed reductions of Federal income taxes.

Merely by advancing in price at a much slower pace than corporation bonds, the yield of municipal bonds adjusted itself to this change. It was aided, furthermore, by the fact that the total amount of municipal bonds issued in 1926 was smaller than in the two years preceding, while the corporate financing for this period shows a steady and consistent increase. In addition, the largest part of the road building program and drainage ditch construction that was needed in this territory has been completed.

That practically all of the financing of industries located in and contiguous to the Mississippi ley is being effected by inve banking institutions in St. L instead of going for this servi heretofore, to New York or C cago, is a matter of great int In this connection, it might b interest to note that 20 years there were not over six invest houses in St. Louis engaged in distribution of investment se ties; now there are 75.

Outlook Promising.

One should not speak of th vestment market in St. Louis w out alluding to the important the Better Business Bureau, w ing in conjunction with the C missioner of Finance at Jeff City, takes in safeguarding th Louis investor. Illegitimate moters of all kinds are finding city too dangerous to operate owing to the untiring work vigilance of the bureau.

The outlook for the invest market in the coming quart most promising. Our treme gold reserve, assuring ample facilities; indications that business will be at least ave no inflation of merchandis ventories; large dividend dis tions; savings deposits on th crease, all point to increasing mand for good investment se ties.

ST. LOUIS AND ITS TRADE-TERRITORY ACHIEVEMENTS OF PAST YEAR

St. Louis Ideal Situation and Diversification of Industry Is Reflected in Resume of Year's Business.

maintenance has reached a high point of perfection; the Katy will spend about $7,000,000 in new year improvements; the Missouri Pacific as much or more.

Such activity shows immediately in the local steel industry, so railroad equipment concerns begin the year with heavy orders. Some idea of the enormous business transacted by the 28 railroad lines entering this gateway is gained by freight car loadings compiled by the St. Louis Terminal Railroad Association. The total car loadings for the year 1926 will be 2,-[illegible]2,228 as compared with 2,571,-[illegible]3 for 1925. The figure for 1924 was 2,435,252. All sorts of raw and manufactured products pass through St. Louis or are shipped out from here, thus giving a good barometer of business conditions.

Then St. Louis is one of the country's largest inland seaports. We are close to sea water through the ports of New Orleans, Houston, Galveston and the new outlet at Corpus Christi via the Federal Barge Line. Making a conservative estimate for December, the total tonnage of the barge line is estimated at 1,053,028 as compared with 910,764 tons for 1925. The tonnage for 1924 was 849,494.

The Government's present plans in Congress, based on this increased use of the river, are for the largest improvement appropriation in history. So even the Father of Waters has gone back to work.

Much of the recent business volume can be traced to the unusual activity of the automobile manufacturers. Local leaders still regard their prospects as substantial. Although November and December showed slow-ups, probably seasonal, the year's volume in automobiles and accessories is estimated as a 12 per cent increase, a total of $181,776,000, compared to $162,-[illegible]000 in 1925. St. Louis and St. Louis County have 20,500 more passenger cars and 1800 more trucks than in 1925, and yet the "Quick and the Dead" statistics failed to increase by the expected leaps and bounds"—the total being 115 under last year. The used-car situation is still a real problem, but there were no failures during 1926.

City With a "Sole."

With a production of $225,000,000 worth of shoes in 1926, compared with $210,000,000 the year before, St. Louis definitely establishes its claim to being the world's shoe center. Although the year was not altogether a favorable shoe year, St. Louis did not reflect this condition as pronounced as other shoe markets. There are no large stocks on hand, presaging good employment with spring demands. As a shoe style center, the city's reputation has been solidly established with the November display of shoe modes.

Any building of hope for the future must include the building situation. So many bad guesses based on old style deduction have been made and failed that it is not easy to measure the future. Some thought 1926 was to see the end of the building boom, but it dies down in one form of construction and breaks out somewhere else. It is well in judging the future to remember the people and firms, as well as schools and industry, want to be housed better as the standard of our civilization increases. Then if the farmer ever gets a few dollars ahead he is away behind on building.

There was some decline in building figures in the past year. If this was largely confined to speculative building, so much the better. Building in 1926 generally was confined to homes, residences and apartment houses, rather than to office buildings and skyscrapers, such as were erected in 1925. The grand total of construction in St. Louis for which permits were issued is placed at $39,409,080, as compared with $54,886,613 for 1925. The total of building permits for 1926 was 12,436, as compared with 13,-[illegible]9 for 1925, only a slight falling off. The number of families accommodated by new buildings in 1926 was placed at 7743. March of 1926 showed the largest activity, permits for that month calling for construction aggregating $6,002,-[illegible]20. The largest month for 1925 was April, with $9,088,785.

Building men anticipate considerable activity for 1927, although it is not expected the total will reach any records. Due to the fact, however, that St. Louis has an enormous civic improvement program under way, steady employment for building tradesmen and laborers is expected. Many street-widening projects are now under way and the erection of the courthouse, the first unit of the Memorial Plaza group, has been started.

In this connection the generally happy relations between capital and labor the past year was a factor of no small importance in the resulting prosperity.

Merchandise Lines.

In wholesale dry goods, the volume in some cases reached or was under 1925, but through efficient handling the earnings show well. Low inventories prevented any drastic lack of buying power in their territory from being detrimentally effective. A feeling of optimism on fall business seems to prevail, particularly if cotton acreage is reduced.

Wool stocks in St. Louis, which, next to Boston, is the largest center in the country, are heavy, the holders anticipating a good volume of trade even at more moderate prices.

The fur market fluctuates more with styles than with supply and demand, so that ordinary future reckoning would not strictly apply to this endeavor.

Retailers Viewpoint.

St. Louis merchants in general report a good trade, the volume for the year being slightly in excess of that for 1925. Most stores also reported a slight increase in Christmas shopping, according to the Associated Retailers. One of the outstanding facts pointed out by K. F. Niemoeller, secretary of the Associated Retailers is that in recent months there has been some curtailment of installment buying. It has become the practice to insist on a more careful scrutiny of the buyer's ability to pay and his credit rating is more thoroughly investigated than formerly. The outlook for 1927 remains good.

Electrical Center.

St. Louis as a center of electrical production grows space. It was enhanced in the past year through the enlargement of the numerous factories that are now here and through the announced coming of several others. Chiefly among the new concerns announcing entry into this field was the General Electric Co., which purchased property for establishment of a huge plant in Northwest St. Louis, and the Brown Boveri Co. Virtually all the larger plants already here built additions in the past year or increased their capital stock. The manufacture of radio instruments now constitutes a considerable portion of the electrical business.

The coming of large distributing power units to this territory such as the one at Parsons, Kan., and at Temple, Tex., forecast an ever greater electrical age for the Southwest. When it is learned that 65 per cent of a farmer's production cost is labor and only three per cent of them in America are hooked up with power, it is at least an industry with a future.

Changing Modes.

Almost the entire methods of business have been revamped since the war. No place is it so apparent as in the lumber business. Market habits changed there have persisted. Business has been of satisfying volume to them but it is different. The wood substitute game has brought new practices to the retailer and the reconsignment of lumber through the St. Louis market is not so prosperous. The South as a producer is dwindling. Maybe this is the reason Arkansas used more lumber than she produced last year.

These may not be the halcyon days of old we sigh for but they're the best we've ever had. Whether all of these blessings came from voting the right ticket or not, they are here and willing to stay if "folks" will unlearn the business philosophy of the past—unchain themselves from the gods of expected depressions and let rational and logical confidence possess them. There is certainly too much coddling of the goblin of feast and famine, the great extremes from the "peak to the valley of depression" because the charts of yesterday look that way.

Our more recent prosperity has been largely domestic. Well, we have the same people with the same needs. Only when faith fails does the demand weaken. There may be adjustments particularly in some prices. There were this year in cotton, rubber, sugar, etc., but this depth of despair act, with the great Soup Line rescue is as obsolete as that other melodrama, "East Lynne."

We may still be, as Stewart Edward White says, "80 rods the hellward side of perfection," but things don't look so bad as 1927 peeps over the horizon; the financial situation is strong—good credit plentiful; no job famine portends; St. Louis' territory is the best on the business map, even the "Flesh Pots of Little Egypt" again glow with the embers of a revived coal industry; the good road program is making St. Louis a nearer market; the civic improvement schedule is making it a better one; the boys will have their bonus certificates; we will have a tax refund. No figures can be publicly arrived at on one our largest businesses, but that's just another hidden asset. All in all the common sense deduction is that out here, half way between Florida and California, where it neither shakes nor blows, is a pretty good place to meet the future.

Stabilization Bureau for Brazil.

Brazil plans to create a stabilization bureau the Minister of Finance and gold reserve will be deposited there and in its London and New York branches for use in making conversion only. Conversion will become effective six months after the date of the passage of the law.

INCREASED RECEIPTS OF LIVESTOCK EXPECTED WITH RAILROAD CONSOLIDATIONS

By E. F. BISBEE,
Vice President, St. Louis National Stock Yards Co.

LIVESTOCK marketing at St. Louis National Stock Yards for the year 1926 shows a healthy condition and growth. Receipts of cattle and calves were the largest of any year in the history of the market while receipts of hogs were slightly greater than for 1925, placing this market again as second in the list of hog markets in the United States and this means in the world. A further increase is expected in the future as the result of possible consolidation of railroads which would extend the source of supply considerably.

Sheep receipts increased 12 per cent compared with 1925.

Horses and mules, while received in a volume greater than any other market, do not show the increase made by other kinds of livestock.

ST. LOUIS 1926 SHOE OUTPUT $250,000,000

By JOHN A. BUSH,
President, Brown Shoe Co.

THE first six months of the year were quiet. Beginning about July 1, the demand for shoes increased and all factories have been running fairly full since that time. The total of all shoes manufactured and distributed by the St. Louis zone will be very close to $250,000,000 for the year.

Among the companies that have already issued their annual statements is the Brown Shoe Co., which showed an increase of almost $1,000,000 in shipments although shoes were sold at closer prices than the year previous and profits were somewhat less. The International Shoe Co.'s increase in shipments was about $2,000,000. This increase was largely made in their Eastern branches. Pedigo-Weber Shoe Co. increased their business somewhat during the year. Johansen Bros. Shoe Co. showed an increase in business.

A number of small specialty concerns which started in business during the past few years report progress. Among them is Capital Shoemakers, Inc., a subsidiary of Brown Shoe Co., making about 3000 pairs per day of women's fine novelty shoes, and selling them over the United States.

St. Louis made a name for herself in the recent Pageant of Footwear Fashions held the first week of December. The attendance was even better than had been anticipated. The object of holding this pageant 30 or 40 days in advance of the usual showing of spring styles was to extend the spring season and, instead of crowding it into only 45 days, supply spring shoes far enough in advance so that merchants may have the new styles in time for Easter selling. The Pageant of Footwear Fashions has made St. Louis the leader in footwear styles.

Several new factories were built during the year, also additions made to the plants of some of the large manufacturers. Brown Shoe Co. built and equipped a new factory at Vincennes, Ind., now manufacturing 3600 pairs per day of children's stitchdown shoes. They also purchased two tanneries formerly owned by S. Moensch Sons Co., at Gowanda, N. Y., and are now operating these tanneries, one for the manufacture of upper leather, the other for the manufacture of sole leather. International Shoe Co. acquired the tannery of Cover & Co. of Philadelphia.

Employes number more than 40,000 shoeworkers.

RECORD TRAFFIC MOVES THROUGH ST. LOUIS GATES

Terminal Association Business 3 Per Cent Larger Than That of 1925, Previous Banner Year.

By HENRY MILLER,
President Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis.

TRAFFIC for 1926 will exceed by 30 per cent that of 1920, indicating a healthy growth in business.

There was an increase of approximately 3 per cent in 1926 over 1925, establishing new record. Loaded cars interchanged between connections during 1926 (last two days of December estimated) amounted to 2,646,518 cars compared with 2,571,179 cars in 1925, a gain of 75,340 cars.

The railroads authorized for 1926 Terminal improvements costing several millions of dollars, designed to remove the impediments to traffic that developed during the record-breaking year, 1925, all of which were completed for the peak business this fall.

Having brought the property well up to its requirements, it is the intention of the railroads to continue making such improvements and developments of terminal facilities, the belt lines, and other essentials to transportation, to the end that the St. Louis gateway will have the most economical and expeditious service of any large railroad center in the United States; thus insuring progressive industrial development and continued growth and expansion of this commonwealth.

Improvements made during 1926 included among others: Additions to mail, baggage, express and parcel post facilities at Union Station. Twenty additional passenger main and side tracks at Jefferson avenue. Extension of 10 tracks at Union Station. A fourth main track through the Union avenue industrial district. A new team yard at Tenth street. Additions to the Compton avenue, Union avenue, Easton avenue, Ladue road team yards and to Harlem, Madison and Wiggins classification yards. Addition of six heavy transfer engines. Flood lighting Eads and Wiggins yards to increase efficiency at night.

By DANIEL UPTHEGROVE,
President, St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co.

The St. Louis Southwestern Railway Lines report total railway revenues for the year 1926 will amount to approximately $26,000,000, and the net railway operating income will be about $4,600,000. The Cotton Belt Route earned and paid its regular dividend of 5 per cent on $20,000,000 outstanding preferred stock. The laying of seventy-five miles of new 85-pound steel rail, and the ballasting of 90 miles of track with material from the Cotton Belt gravel plant on the Ouachita River in Arkansas, are two of the larger items included in the $2,000,000 provided by the 1926 budget for improvements. There was an average of 8013 employes in service and the property as a whole was well maintained. Company shops at Pine Bluff, Arkansas, and Tyler, Texas, were operated at normal capacity.

By J. E. TAUSSIG,
President Wabash Railway Co.

In many ways the results from operation of the Wabash Railway during 1926 have been more gratifying than in 1925. The number of cars of revenue freight loaded locally and received from connections was 882,039 in 1926, as compared with 840,302 in 1925. A record business was handled during several months of the year; this was accomplished without a resultant shortage of equipment or congestion on any part of the line. In other phases operations during the past year showed improvements as compared with 1925. During 1926 the Wabash placed in service 25 heavy switch locomotives, 20 baggage cars, 2000 automobile box cars and two gas-electric motors.

Extensive improvements were made to fixed structures and roadway facilities during the year; 9.22 miles of second main track was installed, heavier rail and additional ballast was laid, new shops were constructed, several large bridges were renewed and general improvements were made in equipment and roadbed.

By BENJAMIN McKEEN,
Resident Vice President, Pennsylvania Railroad.

A favorable combination of essential factors enabled the Pennsylvania Railroad to achieve in 1926 one of the most successful years in its history. Business and financial conditions were generally satisfactory, and the railroad's traffic, measured by the number of loaded revenue freight cars dispatched and ton-miles of service rendered, reached a new high record.

The estimated number of loaded cars dispatched by the Pennsylvania in 1926 is 10,418,200, based on actual figures up to Dec. 4 and an approximation for the remainder of the month. The previous high record for any year, established in 1923, was 8,543,018 loaded cars dispatched.

Gross earnings of $601,843,623 by the Pennsylvania in the first 10 months of 1926 show an increase of $30,458,515 over the corresponding period in 1925 and, due to an effective campaign for greater operating efficiency, a larger proportion of gross was carried to net earnings. In the first 10 months of 1926, net earnings were $13,284,780 more than in the same period last year. A comparison of the operating ratios for the same period shows a reduction of 1.1 per cent in favor of 1926.

By J. M. KURN,
President, St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Co.

For the eleven months ending with Nov. 30th, 1926, there was loaded on line and received from connections a total of 991,770 cars—a decrease of 1782 cars as compared with corresponding period of year 1925. Very severe weather during the month of November is responsible for the decrease.

Gross revenue for the ten months ended Oct. 31, 1926, $78,435,422—an increase compared with same period last year of $612,743. Net railway operating income for the ten months of the present calendar year, $19,367,301—an increase of $1,096,776 compared with same period last year. We fully expect the earnings for the last two months in the calendar year to equal the earnings for the same months last year.

By L. W. CHILDRESS,
President, Columbia Terminals Co.

During 1926 the less car load tonnage through this gateway did not show the same proportionate increase that was shown by the car load movement. The decrease in the movement of less car load freight in the preholiday season was greater than in former years. The so-called hand-to-mouth buying has resulted in a tremendous increase in the use of parcel post, notwithstanding the fact that freight service today is beyond criticism. Parcel post rates are higher than freight rates and its use for shipments that formerly moved by freight means that the merchant is either losing sight of the higher cost or that he is willing to pay a premium for 24 or 48 hours quicker service.

ST. LOUIS STOCK MARKET OF 1926 SATISFACTORY

By WILLIAM H. BIXBY,
President, St. Louis Stock Exchange

About 900,000 shares of stock was listed for trading on the St. Louis Stock Exchange during the year. While the trading was not as active and average prices somewhat lower than in the previous year, I feel that we have had a very satisfactory market. We must not forget that in the last two years over 2,500,000 shares of new stock have been listed on our exchange, to say nothing of the millions of outside securities that have been sold in this market. We all expected too much for the year 1926, but I personally feel that the large amount of new securities have been now digested and I look for a better market on our exchange for the coming year.

I think that the public is more interested in what we are planning to do in the future than what has transpired. We intend revising the by-laws of our exchange, and one of the main benefits we hope to accomplish is to broaden the interest and scope of effort by being able to draft for our Board of Governors and Committee personnel, not only from our membership, but also from the list of partners of our members.

All the investment houses and banks of St. Louis are aware of the fact that our city should have a larger and broader local security market and I feel confident that I can assure the St. Louis public that our investment houses and banks will co-operate and strive to give St. Louis a Stock Exchange in keeping with its size and importance.

BOND SALES ARE LARGER, STOCKS SHOW DECREASE

While there was a marked decrease in stock transactions on the St. Louis Stock Exchange during 1926, compared with the previous year, sales of bonds showed increase. Stock transactions were compiled unofficially at 397,465 shares, as against 621,862 unofficially in 1925. Bond sales were $2,438,000, compared with $2,383,000 in 1925.

Listings on the exchange included $1,250,000 Franklin Bank stock and $2,500,000 Curlee Clothing preferred stock. Half of the latter is to be retired.

The past year was not marked by the recapitalizations that characterized 1925.

Intermediate Bank Loans Co-Operative Marketing Associations $4,592,606

St. Louis Federal Institution Provides $3,167,640 Aid on Cotton in Arkansas—Land Bank Business 244 Per Cent Larger.

By H. PAUL BESTOR,
President Federal Land and Intermediate Credit Banks of St. Louis.

BUSINESS during the year 1926 has been the best in the history of the Federal Land Bank. The percentage of increase in new business net over 1925 is 244 per cent. Net earnings for 1926, $600,000.

Collections have been the best of any year except 1925, in spite of depression in agriculture. During the last six months of 1926, 63 per cent of the installment payments were received in advance of the due date. During the year the bank reduced its interest rate from 5½ to 5 per cent.

During 1926 the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis made loans to co-operative marketing associations on staple agricultural commodities in warehouses in total amount of $4,592,606. Of this sum, $3,167,640 was loaned on cotton in the State of Arkansas, and $1,424,966 on rice grown and warehoused in the same State. This bank also made loans on individual farmers' notes in total amount of $1,968,432. Of this sum, $409,605 was used for cattle feeding purposes, and the balance for crop production, in the states of Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas. The interest rate on commodity loans is 4½ per cent and on rediscounts to farmers, 6½ per cent.

ST. LOUIS RESERVE DISTRICT GENERAL BUSINESS AT HIGH LEVEL THROUGHOUT YEAR

Loans of Reporting Member Banks of Reserve System in 1926 Reached Higher Basis Than in Previous Year.

Average borrowings from the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis by its member banks were somewhat higher in 1926 than in 1925, fluctuations in both years following the same general lines under influences of seasonal considerations. The maximum of bills discounted in 1926, $54,052,000, was reached Sept. 21, and compared with $44,564,000 the high point for 1925, reached on Sept. 18. In 1924 the high point was $58,118,000, recorded on Jan. 2. The low point in 1926, $13,529,000, was on Feb. 13, and in 1925, $7,000,000, in the week ending March 11.

Loans of the reporting member banks in 1926 reached a higher level than in 1925 and were highest in recent years. They reflected the large volume of business, activity in stock exchange securities and heavy agricultural credit requirements. The peak for the year was $535,000,000, which compares with $519,000,000, the high point in 1925. Deposits of the reporting member banks also averaged higher than a year earlier, while their investments in stocks, bonds and other securities showed only moderate variation from those in 1925. It was reported that in other departments of the Federal Reserve Bank the year was marked by increased activity, the volume of transactions in some instances establishing new high record.

Business at High Level.

With general business activities in the Eighth Federal Reserve District continuing at high levels throughout last year demands for credit to finance commercial, industrial and agricultural operations were correspondingly large. The year's business was of an orderly, normal character and money plentiful, so that demands upon the Federal Reserve Bank were much less urgent than in certain past years, when expansion, broad commodity price changes and other unusual factors created conditions which entailed need for emergency aid from the central reserve institutions. During the past 12 months, the commercial banks and business interests were able to carry on to a large extent with their own resources.

Besides the plentiful supplies of money in hands of the commercial banks and business interests, the changed methods of merchandising and manufacture, which have been gradually making headway during the past few years, also tended to curtail borrowing from the Federal Reserve Bank. Purchasing of commodities was conducted to a greater extent than ever before on an immediate requirement basis. The practice of futur buying, which obtained in the past, has been reduced to relatively small proportions. The result of this has been to lower inventories and reduce the duration and volume of banking commitments.

High Collection Efficiency.

Another influence in the situation was the generally high collection efficiency, and the turnover of both money and merchandise was notably quickened by the efficent performance of the railroads and other common carriers.

Agricultural and live stock paper handled in the eleven months of 1926, Jan. 1 to Nov. 30, totaled $18,504,571. Of this amount, $5,185,672 was rediscounted at the parent bank at St. Louis, $391,671 at the Louisville branch, $7,144,507 at the Memphis Branch and $5,782,721 at the Little Rock Branch. On Dec. 1 the head office and branches held under rediscount for member banks $33,602,976 of paper, of which $14,055,636 was secured by Government securities. A very substantial portion of the latter amount was for agricultural purposes. Included in the activities of the discount division of the bank during the last quarter of the year was the handling of a large volume of bill-of-lading drafts, drawn chiefly to cover shipments of cotton, tobacco, rice and other agricultural products.

No Change in Discount Rate.

No change in the discount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis took place, it remaining as in 1925, at 4 per cent for all classes and maturities of paper. The bank's reserve position in 1926 followed the seasonal trend and was subject to the usual fluctuations resulting from changes in the demand for credit, volume of earning assets, note circulation, deposit liability and open market transactions. The ratio of total reserves to deposit and Federal Reserve note liabilities combined fluctuated between 62.1 per cent and 40.0 per cent, the former figure being reached on Oct. 14, and the latter on May 29.

ST. LOUIS STEEL INDUSTRY YEAR WAS A GOOD ONE

Outlook for Immediate Future Seems Bright, Says Mill Head —Railroad Buying Expected.

By CLARENCE H. HOWARD,
President Commonwealth Steel Co.

I BELIEVE the present year, generally speaking, has been a better one for the local steel industry than the preceding one. The volume of business in the first half of the year started encouragingly, and while there was an appreciable slackening in orders for the second half, I believe we can nevertheless say that 1926 has been a good year. The outlook for the immediate future seems bright in view of the prosperity which the railroads have been enjoying, and which should be reflected in a need for new equipment. This should result to the benefit of our local steel industry, inasmuch as a great portion of it is devoted to the requirements of the railroads.

I have great confidence that in view of the generally sound conditions prevailing now that the railroads will start to place some good orders in the near future. The fair prices, both for raw materials and semifinished and finished products of the steel inndustry, together with conservative inventories and the general well being of our fellow workmen should all prove fundamental reasons for a continuance of prosperity for all concerned.

We are grateful for what business we have received in 1926 and are looking forward to a successful 1927.

ZINC AND LEAD ORE SHIPMENTS RECORD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JOPLIN, Jan. 1.—New shipment records for both lead and zinc were established in the Tri-State district in the statistical year just closed, the combined value of which amounted to $54,922,446. Zinc shipments for the 52 weeks of 1926 amounted to 838,752 tons, as against 813,203 tons in 1925, the previous best year. Lead shipments jumped to 130,264 tons as compared with 129,329 tons in 1925, which was also the best previous record.

Despite the heavier shipments, the value of the year's output of both lead and zinc fell below the record values of last year. The 838,752 tons of zinc shipped in 1926 brought $41,138,663, while the smaller production of last year sold for $44,284,299. The 130,264 tons of lead produced during the year sold for $13,794,783 while the 129,329 tons produced in the previous year brought $15,131,286.

The combined value of the year's output of lead and zinc fell almost $4,500,000 below the record value established last year, but is more than $13,500,000 greater than was ever produced in any other year except 1925.

The average price received for zinc during the year was $48.61, as compared with $53.69 in the previous year, and the average price received for lead was $104.69 as compared with $113.56 in 1925. The averages for 1925 were the highest ever attained in the district.

Zinc ore price was at its highest at the beginning of the year, selling for $56 in January. The price began dropping late in January and continued on the downward path until May, when zinc reached the lowest point of the year, $45 a ton. In June the price began to strengthen and by July had reached $50 a ton, where it remained for almost two months, after which a decline set in that did not plumb bottom until December, when ore hit $46 a ton.

The lead price started the year at $115 a ton, but soon went to $122.50 a ton, the high price of the year. The price continued to drop after January until it went to $90 a ton in May. The price then climbed back to $112.50 in the last week of July, a figure it held to for eight weeks. The price gradually declined from August and hit $97.50 two weeks ago.

Early Year Activity.

With the prices comparatively high at the beginning of the year, 173 mills were placed in operation. By the middle of February there were 183 mills operating. With the decline in price came a decline in mill operations. The number dropped to 147 in July. The number of plants in operation increased after July until there were 177 operating in September. After September the price began to slip and the number of mills in operation dropped to 163, the number in operation the last week of the year.

INSTABILITY IN AGRICULTURE CONTINUES, SAYS SECRETARY JARDIN

AGRICULTURAL IMPROVEMENT SHOWN IN 1926

By W. M. JARDINE.
Secretary of Agriculture.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1. — In 1926 there were definite although not uniform improvement in agricultural conditions. Good returns were earned by livestock raisers, dairymen and winter wheat growers. A better balance was reached between hog production and corn production. On the other hand, returns from such important cash crops as cotton, fruit and spring wheat were low. The decline in the price of cotton, if recovery does not come quickly, may reduce the income of the cotton growers $500,000,000 below that of last year, when they received approximately $1,500,000,000. There was distress in parts of the spring wheat states, where yields were reduced by drought. Spring wheat, and in fact all crops, suffered seriously in much of South Dakota and Central North Dakota.

Some branches of agriculture, particularly the livestock industries, made satisfactory progress. The range cattle industry, after four years of depression, moved into a stronger position with all data indicating a heavy curtailment in supplies of beef cattle. Swine producers obtained considerably higher average prices than in 1925. The sheep industry continued to prosper. The dairymen were encouraged by a favorable spread between milk and feed prices. Butter prices showed less strength than whole milk prices but the dairy industry as a whole remained a bright spot in the farming situation.

Progress in Agriculture.

Since the depression of 1920-21 every important branch of agriculture has made progress. This progress has not been uniform nor uninterrupted; but it has been substantial. It is therefore impossible to appraise the condition of agriculture in a given region by considering only the present price of the chief crop grown there.

In the case of the cotton belt, for example, we have to set off against the present low price of cotton the fact that cotton until the last few months had sold at high prices since 1922. Because of this fact, it is unquestionably better able to meet the present emergency than it otherwise would have been. Similar remarks apply to the spring wheat states.

Nevertheless, there is continued instability in agriculture. Production and consumption have not yet been brought into a favorable peace-time adjustment. Our total production of all crops in 1926 was apparently about 3 per cent greater than in 1925, and about 2.4 per cent above the average production per capita of the population in the last five years.

Decline in Purchasing Power.

Doubtless this had something to do with the decline of farm commodity purchasing power in the second half of the year. It was a warning that farm production, to be profitable, must not only be done at a low cost, but must also be in right relation to market needs.

Our farmers are increasing their individual efficiency. Census figures show that American agriculture produced more in 1924 than in 1919, on fewer acres and with less labor. What is needed is a commensurate gain in group efficiency through organization, so that production and marketing can be brought under some degree of control. Otherwise, the effect of increasing efficiency on the farm will be to depress prices whenever costs of production are reduced.

SEASON'S COTTON CROP BREAKS ALL RECORDS: PREWAR PRICE LEVELS

Production of 18,618,000 Bales Amounts to 2,500,000 in Excess of Crop of Previous Year—Small Abandonment.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—This season's cotton crop has broken all records and forced prices to prewar levels. Based on the Agricultural Bureau's annual estimated yield of 18,618,000 bales, the crop is 2,500,000 bales larger than last year's bumper yield of 16,120,000 and 2,400,000 over the previous record-breaking crop of 16,200,000 bales in 1914.

The crop is nearly 5,000,000 bales larger than 1924, nearly 8,500,000 more than 1923 and twice as much as was produced in the two crop-failure years of 1922 and 1921. The crop in 1923 was 10,140,000 bales, 9,763,000 in 1922 and 7,960,000 in 1921, against 13,440,000 in 1920.

The average size of the crops for 1921 to 1925, inclusive, was 11,520,000 bales, and about 12,000,000 bales was the average yield for the previous five years from 1915 to 1920.

The largest acreage planted in history, 49,000,000 acres, together with better than average weather conditions and much less damage from insects, contributed to development of the record crop.

Small Abandonment.

Such favorable conditions caused the Government's Crop Reporting Board to estimate there would be the smallest percentage of abandoned area from the original amount planted. It figures it at only 2.9 per cent, against 4.5 per cent last year and the average of 3.5 per cent.

This would leave 47,653,000 acres harvested, against 46,000,000 last year and 37,600,000, the average area picked in the five crop seasons of 1921 to 1925, inclusive. The yield of lint cotton per acre this season is placed as high as 187 pounds, against 167 last year, 144 the average for the five-year period and 153.7 pounds the ten-year average.

Over 40 per cent of this season's great crop was produced by Texas and Oklahoma, with both contributing 7,850,000 bales of the 18,618,000 total production.

Gain Over Last Year.

The Texas crop this year is placed as high as 5,900,000 bales and Oklahoma's 1,950,000, against 4,165,000 and 1,690,000 last year.

When the time comes for forcing a cut in acreage to shorten next season's crop it will be these two States that will be called upon to reduce their acreage more than any others.

This year's large crop, more than world's spinners can absorb, has forced prices to below the average cost of production.

When it was seen at this time last year the crop had turned out 16,120,000 bales, or 2,000,000 more than had been expected in July and August, it was realized there would be a large surplus to "carry over" into this year's crop.

To prevent just what has happened meetings were held last winter, at which planters were called to cut acreage 20 to 25 per cent.

Acreage Increased.

Instead acreage was increased to a new high record. Many authorities believe the Government's annual revision will increase the area to more than 50,000,000 acres.

There is, in fact, no other way to account for such a huge crop this year. The amount of linters in this year's crop may be at least 1,200,000 bales—a total crop of 19,800,000.

"Linters" is cotton that does not come cleanly in the ginning process. It cannot be spun for manufacture of ordinary cotton goods, but is used for cotton batting, mattresses, certain carpets and other coarse goods, besides automobile cushions, etc. It is used also in making certain ammunition.

There is also a large amount of low grade cotton unsuitable for spinning that is used for such purposes. So there will be such little value to linters this spring it will be a drug on the market.

Cost of Crop.

Last year's crop has been estimated to have cost about 18 cents a pound to produce. No estimate has yet been fixed even tentatively on the cost of this year's crop, but it probably was about 15 cents.

In Texas and Oklahoma production costs are relatively smaller than in the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Tennessee, as they all require the use of a large amount of fertilizer. What makes this year's crop burdensome is the fact that 5,400,000 bales was carried over from last season's bumper crop. It included stocks held by European and American manufacturers and that left in planters' and factors' hands.

That surplus with this year's crop makes a total of 24,000,000 bales to meet requirements of world's spinners until next year's crop is ready.

The average amount of world's spinners' takings in recent years has been around 15,000,000. This year the total is expected to reach 18,000,000 as a result of the stimulating influence of the low price. This would include 10,000,000 bales of exports and 8,000,000 taken by American spinners.

Last Year's Exports.

Last season's actual exports were 8,154,000 bales, with the American mill consumption totaling 6,450,000 bales. In the season of 1911-1912, when prices averaged a little under 11 cents a pound, the exports reached 10,690,000 bales and American mill consumption was 5,367,000.

So far this season exports for four and one-half months, from Aug. 1 to Dec. 15, totaled 4,754,000 bales, while the American mills actually consumed 2,225,000 bales in the four months' period from Aug. 1 to Dec. 1.

If world's spinners' takings for the year ending July 31, reach 18,000,000 it would break all records. This is easily within the range of possibilities. Takings for four and one-half months to Dec. 15, totaled 7,000,000. What would be the actual consumption for the year is a matter of much conjecture—it cannot be safely estimated.

Only Practical Remedy.

The only practical remedy lies in a drastic curtailment of acreage. It should be cut at least 30 per cent to insure a sufficiently short crop to enable the world's spinners to absorb the heavy surplus.

The Egyptian Government recently adopted such a policy by passing a law to cut cotton acreage one-third for three years from now. It was necessary to do this to overcome the effects of last season's large crop.

With such an abundance of cotton and present prices the lowest since the readjustment period of 1920-1921, the textile industry has the best prospects since the outbreak of the war.

OIL INDUSTRY 1926 BUSINESS $3,500,000,000

One of Most Successful and Prosperous Years in History of Oil in United States—Search for New Pools.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The oil industry of the United States is now completing one of the most successful and prosperous years in its history. The outstanding feature of the year has been the lack of a "boom" in the sense of a "runaway market" for oil products and oil securities.

The effect of psychology in the oil business is well understood by oil men. The year 1926 may best be characterized in this connection as a year of prosperity without the industry engaging in a "prosperity complex" in the form of excessive enthusiasm. The prosperity may have well been due in no small measure to this lack of enthusiasm.

The gross business of the oil industry in 1926, based on the sale of 865,000,000 barrels of petroleum, is estimated at the record total of $3,500,000,000, this figure representing sales by refiners and not the retail business of the industry.

Prices Suit Producers.

The price of crude oil during 1926 was generally satisfactory to producers. Mid-Continent crude oil averaged about $2.25 a barrel, or 50 cents a barrel over that of 1925, and about double the level of prices which existed in 1923, which was one of the industry's worst years since 1920.

The writer will not attempt to pass upon the question of whether oil prices during 1926 have been satisfactory to the public.

It can be said, however, that the price of gasoline ranged about 10 cents a gallon under the level of 1920, which witnessed peak prices for petroleum products, and that the present price level has apparently raised no cry for political action.

The supply and demand situation in the petroleum industry in 1926 has been about as follows:

	Barrels.
Domestic production	765,000,000
Imports	70,000,000
Domestic consumption	765,000,000
Exports	100,000,000
Withdrawal from stocks	30,000,000

These figures are arrived at by using available statistics up to the end of September, and estimating the last three months. Allowance has been made for the record production of crude oil during November and December.

Year of Concentration.

This year has been one of concentration of resources, and of physical readjustment to new conditions, mergers involving the Standard Oil Co. of New York and Magnolia Petroleum Co. and General Petroleum; Tide Water Oil Co. and Associated Oil Co.; Barnsdall Corporation and Waite-Phillips Co., Standard of Indiana and the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Co., and Standard Oil Co. of California with Pacific Oil, were all brought to a successful consummation.

The leading oil companies undertook and had under way by the end of the year one of the biggest programs of concentration of transportation facilities, production and acreage ever attempted, not only through these mergers but as a result of individual effort here and abroad.

At the end of 1926 wildcat operations of the first dozen oil companies of the United States were on a scale which could not indicate a smug indifference to the future of the oil supply. One company can be mentioned which was drilling pure wildcats in at least 20 counties of Texas, three counties in Oklahoma, four counties of Louisiana, three of Arkansas and a few wildcat wells each in the states of Kansas, Colorado, Montana, New Mexico and Utah. Stop to figure the expense of such a campaign.

The Carter Oil Co. changed its policy in 1926 by posting prices for crude oil in the Mid-Continent field, adding itself thereby to the list of companies buying oil direct from the producers by means of pipe-line connections. Ten years ago the Prairie Oil and Gas Co. was practically the only company buying oil on a large scale from individual producers in the Mid-Continent. Now to this company can be added the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Co., the Texas company, the Gulf Oil Corporation, the Magnolia Petroleum Co., Standard Oil of Louisiana, Ohio Oil Co., Humble Oil and Refining Co., Empire Gas and Fuel Co. and the Carter Oil Co. This simply means direct from producer to refiner, instead of the former method of the refiner buying oil from purchasing companies.

South American Development.

The development of oil in Venezuela and Colombia was another outstanding feature of 1926. These countries for the first time became important exporters of oil to the United States.

The Dutch-Shell combine, Gulf Oil Corporation and Lago Oil and Transport took the lead in Venezuela and paved the way for operations by numerous other concerns now actively operating on their respective concessions.

In Columbia International Petroleum, Ltd., was the only company developing a production of importance, and it also commenced to export oil in July. The Gulf Oil Corporation is now negotiating with a view to carrying on extensive work in Columbia and other large concerns are expected to start active work in 1927.

The outstanding development in Europe in 1926 was the active selling of petroleum products by the Russian Oil. This agency inaugurated an aggressive policy with regard to European sales, making agreements with various marketing organizations in different countries.

The Outlook for 1927.

The only serious work of the oil industry for 1927 is with regard to consumption, and it is generally agreed that consumption will increase unless there is a country-wide or international decline in general industrial and financial conditions. If it does increase, the problem will be to supply the demand.

NEW ELECTRICAL USES BOON TO THE INDUSTRY

By GERARD SWOPE,
President General Electric Co.

IN THE electrical industry we are looking forward to the year 1927 with confidence that the high rate of business that has been done this year will be continued in the next.

The electrical industry is fortunate in that new uses and new applications of electricity are constantly being made in the homes and in the workshops.

GENERALLY LOWER PRICES CHARACTERIZE WHEAT AND CORN MARKETS OF THE YEAR

Speculative Trade Slower Than for Many Years—Estimates of Leading Crops—Foreign Situation.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—Generally lower prices characterized the wheat and corn markets during the past year. Oats prices were a trifle higher on the average, but still at a low level. This situation has not necessarily caused farmers as a whole to earn less than in 1925, because of the much larger winter wheat crop which produced larger returns in the aggregate, and because of the profits to be had through feeding cheap corn to livestock. In fact the Department of agriculture in summarizing the position of agriculture during the year, says that there has been marked but not uniform improvement as compared with 1925. Despite low grain prices, the Secretary of Agriculture regards the position of the farmer as better than in any year since 1920. He estimates the net income of the industry as a unit, at $2,757,000,000, or 4 per cent more than in the crop year 1924-25.

"Since the depression period of 1921, every agricultural section of the country and every important branch of agriculture has made progress," says Secretary Jardine. "Recovery has not be uninterrupted, nor as I have indicated, have all groups of producers shared in it equally. Nevertheless the gain has been substantial."

So far as the speculative grain markets are concerned, the trend decidedly has been down. In wheat prices are off about 40 cents a bushel compared with a year ago. Corn has made new low records for the past three years but net changes as compared with a year ago were not so great, since May corn is only about 4 cents a bushel lower than in January. Oats showed little fluctuation during the entire year but prices were slightly above the cheap values of 1925. Provisions trade was quiet with prices lower.

The speculative market has been slower than for many years. There has been so much condemnation of speculation in grain that outside of the professional traders very little interest was taken in the grain dealings.

During December, 1925, much bullish feeling had been aroused by figures of some statisticians and others tending to show that there was not enough wheat in the world to satisfy all requirements before the new crop was raised.

However, after the turn of the year these figures failed of realization. The world not only had enough wheat but had a carryover of close to 100,000,000 bushels. When the trade realized that its theory of a shortage was erroneous then there occurred a gradual dumping of holdings. The effect of this liquidation was most severe during the first months. To emphasize the situation at that time, the Government on March 1, reported 99,000,000 bushels on farms and 75,000,000 bushels in mills and country elevators.

The new crop year was distinctly the reverse of the old crop season. The United States in 1926 raised a big crop of winter wheat and a slightly below average crop of spring wheat, making a total yield of 84,000,000 bushels of all wheat, compared with 666,000,000 bushels grown in 1925, and 802,000,000 bushels the five year average. This was one of the seasons for the price decline, which is so marked now compared with a year ago.

World Situation Bearish.

Canada raised a big crop of nearly 400,000,000 bushels. Argentina last year failed to dump her wheat as expected, and as a result is carrying over this season grain variously estimated at from 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 bushels. This wheat, though, is mostly of poor quality. It is estimated that Argentina and Australia will have a surplus 60,000,000 in excess of last year. Argentina is expected to have 150,000,000 bushels for export and Australia nearly 100,000,000 bushels. Russia is an unknown quantity, but it is evident that exports from that country will equal if not surpass the 22,000,000 bushels exported to European consumers last season. France and Italy, because of their financial conditions, are making efforts to hold down imports by mixing wheat with cheaper grains.

Corn Farmers Complain.

Corn farmers, who have been getting around 70 cents a bushel for their product, are continuing to complain over the poor price. This complaint is warranted to some extent, but some growers managed to make good profits this year by marketing their corn on the hoof. How extensive this feeding to livestock has been is illustrated by the fact that the average weight of hogs received in Chicago during January, was 21 pounds heavier than the previous January. The season also has been marked by the large number of heavy cattle marketed.

At present there is a tendency toward a better balance between corn and hog production, and therefore between corn and hog prices. No undue surplus of corn exists this year such as year. The crop is set at 000 bushels against bushels produced in 1925. ry-over, however, was bushels, or one of the record. This resulted in the general movement to farmer hold his corn prices.

Keen Argentine

Early this year, Argentine competed strongly with for the Canadian trade the close of the year this tion again is keen. This that the domestic grower to have to depend on the market for his grain on the foreign trade.

Oats prices have not very much and continue levels, around 40 cents.

The crop this season 1,282,000,000 bushels, with 1,511,000,000 a year crop is of poor quality in this yield may not be Canadian oats crop was this may improve the mand.

related industries. All three of these key industries did better in 1926 than ever before. They enjoyed a larger volume of business and made more money. What they will do in 1927 is not entirely clear, but, without discrediting the optimistic predictions of executives in a position to judge, it must be admitted conditions at the moment are not set for another year of record production of record profits.

At $6,800,000,000 the construction volume for 1926 topped the previous high of 1925, but that was about all. Except for the enormous gains of the initial months of the year, it would not have done that. In the statistical records, 1926 will go down as a new peak period, but building actually has been on the decline for months, even if ever so moderately.

The industry can scarcely expect stimulus in the new year from a favorable trend in rents or from an underbuilt condition in the country. Rents are slowly falling and the shortage in building space has been generally filled.

So long as people are prosperous and can afford them, however, they will move into the buildings of most modern design. Funds for the enormous expansion in building have come partly through the sale of mortgage bonds to the public. It is the rapid growth in the demand for that type of investment as much as anything else that promises to hold the 1927 rebuilding program on a level not far under, if not equal to, that for the year just closed.

No better guarantee of sustained good business even if at a pace somewhat slower than the 1926 rate could be found, indeed, than in the freedom from credit strain. It would be difficult to comprehend how any serious recession might be invoked without the depressing influences of tight money, of which at the time no indication whatsoever may be seen.

Recovery in Europe has opened up new problems in foreign trade, but it is unlikely that increased competition from abroad, the extension of loans or the stabilization of currencies, will draw off any considerable portion of our gold soon. Greatly increased life insurance sales, unprecedented savings deposits, the growing appetite for seasoned securities and the refusal of the public to reenter the stock market blindly since its March lesson, all show that more than ever the country's wealth is going into permanent investment channels.

A general strike of union workers in the bituminous coal fields that may give trouble is scheduled for March, and a decline in agricultural prices that may reduce the farmers' purchasing power somewhat has occurred, but at no time after two years of general prosperity have favorable conditions been so well set to perpetuate themselves as now.

The new year is not to start off so prosperously as did 1926, but it may end up better. So long as a stabilized position in industry is maintained, business will continue prosperous, and it matters little whether the final statistical averages show that the super-normal levels of 1926 have or have not been crossed. With none of the clouds that usually give warning when prosperity is about to turn into depression yet visible, the new year may be embraced as one destined to bring its full share of reward to those who expect to sow wisely in order to reap plentifully.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Highl competitive conditions obtained i the cement industry throughout th year, due largely to the tremend increase in plant capacity whi has taken place since the hu building demand has been progress. There is little doubt th when the figures for the year ar totaled a production of some 16 650,000 barrels will be shown. Thi compares with 161,160,000 barre in 1925.

Sales of some companies hav been 20 per cent in excess of th of last year, but net profits hav shown only minor increases. Stock on hand showed no tremendous in crease, however, and the future o 1927 is regarded as bright. Price were uniformly below those o 1925, the difference being about 1 cents a barrel at the plants.

exists this year such as existed la year. The crop is set at 2,694,00 000 bushels against 2,905,000,00 bushels produced in 1925. The ca ry-over, however, was 180,000,00 bushels, or one of the largest o record. This resulted in part fro the general movement to have th farmer hold his corn for bette prices.

Keen Argentine Competition.

Early this year, Argentine cor competed strongly with America for the Canadian trade and nea the close of the year this compe tion again is keen. This mea that the domestic grower is goin to have to depend on the America market for his grain rather tha on the foreign trade.

Oats prices have not fluctuat very much and continue at lo levels, around 40 cents.

The crop this season was set a 1,282,000,000 bushels, compare with 1,511,000,000 a year ago. Th crop is of poor quality in parts a this yield may not be reali Canadian oats crop was small a this may improve the export d mand.

Provisions Generally Lower.

Provisions prices generally wer lower than a year ago. Lard wa off about 2 cents a pound, ribs a bellies showing a similar reductio Increased production of hogs a also the cheaper and more plen ful supply of lard substitutes d down prices. The large cotton cro with the increased production cottonseed oil likewise increas the competition from this subst tute.

STEEL INDUSTRY'S ADVANCE IN 1926 CALLED UNUSUAL

By B. E. V. LUTY.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 1. — The year in steel stands better as an achievement than as a promise for the new year. It was a good year throughout, but it did not have a particularly auspicious ending.

It is important to distinguish between "steel," the rolled material which produces the various finished products—rails, structural material, wire, pipe, sheets, tin plate, etc., and "iron and steel" in general, the latter including iron castings, steel castings and rolled wrought iron. These last named have been decadent or have not increased as has rolled steel.

Accordingly, "steel" may make a new record, while "iron and steel" may not. That is what occurred in 1925, the tonnage of steel ingots, from which all rolled steel is made, exceeding the previous high years —1917 and 1923—by about 1 per cent, while rolled iron, steel castings and iron castings made relatively poor showings.

Gain Over 1925.

In nearly all directions 1926 passed 1925. Steel ingot tonnage increased by 6 to 7 per cent, pig iron production by about 8 per cent and Lake Superior iron ore shipments by 8 per cent.

Since the wild time of 1920, with soaring steel prices, except for the memorable fixed price policy of the Steel Corporation, and the recession extending through 1921, steel buying and production have tended to grow steadier and steadier, and 1926 recorded further progress in that direction. At no time during the year was there anything like a wave of buying, and at no time was the market really dull in point of turnover.

Increasing steadiness in steel production is illustrated by designating average production in each year by 100 and relating the high and low months of the year to that standard, whereby 1922 shows 65 and 1923 shows 82 and 114, 1924 shows 61 and 137, 1925 shows 84 and 114 and 1926 has now shown 0 as the high and approximately as the low, that being based on estimate for December, which, just remarked, indicated a somewhat inauspicious ending of the year.

Production Trend Upward.

In recent years the usual trend production has been upward in the late months through November, with a slight recession in December. In 1926 November brought drop from October of about 9 per cent, furnishing a plain suggestion that underlying the natural year-end decline in activity there was a longer range downward trend. This will probably be covered by an increase in steel production from December to January, but at present no one expects the early months of 1927 to show the heavy mill operations that were seen in the early months of 1926, when January showed an 89 per cent operating rate and March a little above 92 per cent. The average in 1926 was close to 85 per cent.

The history of 1926 includes two important things of far-reaching importance. One was the greater ability and courage the sellers of steel exhibited in their adherence to steady prices, the other was reduction in costs of production.

That there could be such a steel market as existed in 1926 was unbelievable by the sellers of steel before the war. Then the sole dependence was "buying movements." Buyers would become concerned as to the future of their supplies and by buying ahead they filled the mills, whereby prices could be advanced. Eventually a reaction occurred and then sellers simply waited for the next movement. To hold prices when mills were not filled with business was considered impossible.

Prices Hold Steady.

In the past year, by contrast, the only case of importance of mills being really completely filled with business was that of the pipe mills, and then only in oil country goods. For months such deliveries were in arrears by from four to six weeks. Yet prices held practically all along the line, except for various fluctuations in sheets.

Iron and steel making costs have not decreased much in the aggregate, but all the changes have been in that direction, and in some of the finely finished products the decreases have probably been important, cold rolled strips and tin plate being instances. Wage rates have been fully maintained.

In the distribution of steel to various lines of consumption much of interest has occurred, but this cannot be considered in detail. There has been a general swing, as compared with conditions before the war, of a smaller proportion of steel being used for strictly new construction and a greater proportion going into what may be called upkeep or maintenance.

STOCKS HOLD ON A HIGH LEVEL AS THE YEAR CLOSES

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange says:

"Confidence in the general future of business has if anything been strengthened rather than weakened during the final week of the year. More executives, economists and statisticians have volunteered expressions on industry this year than ever before, and for the most part these reflect firm faith in the future. From an attitude of extreme caution expressed a month ago, leaders have turned to an attitude of moderate optimism. They do not ignore the very plain evidences of recent recession, but they accept these as a natural downturn from the supranormal levels of 1926.

Prices on High Level.

"Usually in the final week of the year the stock market turns buoyant and its rise contributes to the general feeling of confidence. Efforts to rally the market this week have not met with unqualified success, but prices nevertheless have been held on a high level. No important change in the character of the stock market has occurred for weeks. It is essentially a professional affair at the present time and has been so most of the Autumn. While public participation has been increased, the major activity still represents the moves of large speculators. It is in the bond market that evidence may be found of a real investment demand. Strength there has been stimulated in part by the approach of January when a large volume of reinvestment funds will be available, in part by the general downward tendency of commodity prices which makes securities of fixed interest bearing description more valuable, and in part by the widespread feeling that business from present levels is more likely to recede slightly than to expand slightly.

Money Eases at Year End.

"One of the most radical declines the stock market has suffered for some time occurred on last day of year, but the disturbance caused little anxiety. It was generally understood to be due to the usual year end mopping up.

To offset anything of a bearish character came a swift decline in money rates which created cheerfulness over the credit situation. Call money renewed at 6 per cent, then declined to 5½ per cent and later fell to 5 per cent. This was an early return to easy money conditions after the year end adjustment. Last year money did not loosen up until about the end of the first week in January.

"The New York Clearing House statement giving actual condition at the close of business Dec. 31 shows excess reserve down to $21,097,130 compared with $41,193,430 a week previous. Loans, discounts, etc., increased $119,850,000 during the week reflecting heavy year end demand for funds and net demand deposits rose $96,631,000.

Need Not Exceed 1926 Volume.

"Authorities are coming to see fortunately that to remain on a satisfactory basis, business in 1927 will not need to exceed the volume for 1926. Production and consumption last year were maintained on a basis of between 5 and 10 per cent above a theoretical normal.

CONSUMPTION OF COPPER IN UNITED STATES SHOWS MARKED EXPANSIO

SOLID RAILROAD PROGRESS MADE IN PAST YEAR

Better Earnings and Credit With Little Agitation Enabled Railroads to Effect Further Improvement.

By ROBERT S. BINKERD,
Vice Chairman Committee on Public Relations of the Eastern Railroads.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The year 1926 was one of solid railroad progress. With better earnings and credit on the one hand and with little agitation on the other hand, the railroads were enabled to devote their whole energy and resources to effecting further improvement.

Notwithstanding the record-breaking volume of business handled, the railroads ended the year in probably the best physical condition in their history.

But even more important were the extent and character of the capital improvements prosecuted. No words can possibly convey an adequate sense of the betterment being made in the physical plant of our railroads. Main-line tracks are being built of heavier rail, the bulk of it weighing 100 pounds or more to the yard. The best crushed rock ballast is going into the right of way in unprecedented quantity. Grades are being reduced; curves are being flattened; short cuts and passing tracks are being constructed all over the country. As a result, the railroads are securing a stronger, safer and more commodious right of way over which to pour with increasing efficiency the growing traffic of the country. The United States is well on its way toward a railroad plant far better than it ever had before and beyond even the imagination of any other country.

Action on Rates.

The outstanding occurrence in the rate situation was the denial by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the application of the Western roads for a general 5 per cent increase. This decision delays, but apparently does not preclude relief for the Western railroads from an inadequate rate structure.

Finances Show Improvement.

The net operating income for the year is estimated at about $1,240,000,000, as against $1,136,000,000 in 1925. This will mean a return of about 5¼ per cent on the property investment account. It is the second installment—1925 having been the first—of a partial reward for the improvements effected in railroad operation since 1920.

Of this increase in net operating income, some $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 went to stockholders, and a larger proportion of the net operating income of 1927 will unquestionably go to stockholders. This will be part of a program of increasing the proportion of railroad capital furnished by partners who share all the hazards of the business. Since 1916 and even since 1910 railroad financing has had to be done in the main through the sale of bonds and other securities carrying a fixed rate of interest. As a result, the percentage of capital represented by funded debt has steadily increased, while that represented by stock has decreased. The present proportions are about 57 per cent for funded debt, and 43 per cent for partners' capital. It is generally believed that the healthy ratio should be approximately 50-50.

Railroad taxes during 1926 took a new turn upward, and have been running more than 10 per cent higher than in 1925. A portion of this increase is due to the raising of the Federal income tax rate on corporate income, but a still larger part of it comes from the further increase in the taxes of State and local governments. Railroad taxes for 1926 will apparently amount to from $395,000,000 to $400,000,000, an increase of from $40,000,000 to $45,000,000 over the preceding year. Thus, notwithstanding improvement in operating income and modestly increased dividend disbursements to stockholders, 1926 will be the fifth year out of the past six in which the amount paid in taxes will substantially exceed the amount paid in dividends.

Public and Labor Relations.

Relations between the public and railroads tended toward a further improvement during the year. An additional shippers' regional advisory board was formed in the Allegheny district, centering in Pittsburg and comprising Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and Northern West Virginia. The entire United States is now covered by 13 of these boards, which continue to be the medium of the best co-operation ever undertaken between shippers and railroads.

Relations between the railroad employes and their managements also continued to improve. Nevertheless, the year was marked by a considerable number of requests for wage increases, some of which will carry over into 1927. A number of railroads conceded increases of 1, 2 and 3 cents an hour to their shop employes. This is a highly competitive labor situation, the same classes of men also finding employment in the building trades, in the automotive industry and in machine shops and foundries.

Present Production Readily Absorbed and Demand May Slightly Exceed Demands—Revival of European Buying Awaited.

By LUDWIG VOGELSTEIN,
Chairman of the American Metal Co., Limited.

(Copyright, 1927.)

The year 1926 will go down in economic history as a banner year of prosperity in the United States. This flourishing condition was fully reflected in the metal industry of this country as far as production and consumption are concerned, but not in prices for the various metals.

Present production is being readily absorbed; in fact, this year's demand may slightly exceed the supply. Stocks are small, but the fear of an increase in production or of a slight falling off in consumption suffices to bring prices below the prewar level. The cost of 90 per cent of the world's production is lower than present prices and 80 per cent will show a fair profit, this not taking into consideration the possible exhaustion of the mines.

Copper is one of the few commodities the price level of which is below prewar days. The world's production of copper in 1926 is estimated at 1,630,000 tons, against 1,586,683 in 1925. North and South American production is estimated at 1,290,000 tons in 1926, against 1,249,063 in 1925. United States production is estimated at 889,000 tons, against 854,000 in 1925.

Virtually the entire increase originated on the American continent, and is small, being barely 3 per cent of the world's production.

Expansion in Consumption.

Consumption in the United States in 1926 showed the enormous expansion of 10 per cent, being 831,171 tons in 1925 and 916,000 tons in 1926, while exports contracted from 584,553 tons in 1925 to 516,000 tons in 1926.

The world's stock of refined copper decreased during the year about 5000 tons. Fortunately for the market, the European demand expanded when the home demand showed indications of falling off. The exports of copper, according to quarters, were: First, 117,000; second, 130,000; third, 128,000; fourth (est.) 141,000.

There is no material increase in production in sight. The last month of 1926 started with the lowest price of the year, 13⅝c, refinery basis; the highest price was reached in August, being 14.27½c. The narrow fluctuations during the year followed closely the trend of general business in this country.

Lead Production.

Production of lead increased 30 per cent and all mines are pushing their production to the utmost. A level of prices is being maintained which was not thought of in prewar days.

No doubt there will be a gradual increase in production, but an increase of over 300,000 tons, or nearly 25 per cent, during the last three years has been readily absorbed by the market without affecting prices materially.

Prices in 1926 did not reach the extremely high level of the two preceding years, nor was the scarcity of the metal at any time so pronounced as to force a heavy premium for spot lead. It is also true that at least in Europe lead prices have fallen below zinc prices.

October showed the highest monthly production on record in America, as well as in the whole world, but even the October production is not alarming. Moreover, the severe decline in the price of silver is expected to react unfavorably on lead production. There is no immediate prospect of a materially larger production, although South America and Mexico are going to add somewhat to the present rate of production.

The growth of consumption is steady, and if Europe's plans of putting its telephone system into first-class shape materializes, and if automobiles, radio and power stations in Europe are going to keep pace only in a moderate way with America. There is bound to be a largely increased demand for lead.

Highest prices were registered early in January when London quoted £35.15.0 (7¾c.) and New York 9.27½c.; the lowest price was reached early in May in England with 27.7.6 (5.93c.) and early in June in New York with 7.65c. After a sharp recovery, culminating around the beginning of August, prices sagged again toward the end of the year and are at this writing close to the low point of the year with £29.2.6 (6.31c.) in London and 7.90c. in New York.

World	1,640,000	1,715,000
North America	995,000	1,109,000
U. S. A. ...	662,500	690,000

Zinc Similar to Lead

As to zinc, the slow growth in the production of spelter has created a situation not unlike that of lead. The world's production of spelter since 1913 has increased about 250,000 tons or less than 25 per cent. The increase comes entirely from our country, whose production has grown from 350,000 tons to 635,000 tons, or an increase of 285,000 tons; in other words, the world's production outside of the United States has actually decreased. Actual (1926 estimated) figures in tons are:

	1925	1926
World	1,264,828	1,361,000
United States	590,928	636,000

In 1926 the world's production shows an increase of nearly 100,000 tons over 1925, but one-half of this quantity of increased production resulted in the United States.

It is evident that the statistical equilibrium of zinc during the last few years was principally maintained by the great shrinkage in the European demand. Any improvement in Europe should express itself largely in consumption of spelter. The figures are as follows:

Deliveries to consumers in the United States in 1925 were 525,500 tons, against 590,000 in 1926.

The stocks of spelter in the world at the end of the year 1926 are about as small as they were at the beginning, amounting to about one week's production, or 30,000 tons.

Spelter prices are high compared with prewar days, but the slow growth of production and the limited supplies explain this high level.

The situation at this writing would seem to justify increased operations on the part of the European smelters on a profitable basis for the next few years.

Tin Statistics.

Tin statistics are not as accurate as statistics of other metals because tin smelters do not publish returns of their production, and the only gauge is the shipments from one country to another. However, it can be stated emphatically that while statistics of production of refined tin may not enable calculation of the exact tonnage consumed, all the tin produced has been consumed; in fact, if more had been available a larger quantity would have been delivered into manufacturers' hands, especially in this country and particularly during the summer months, when it looked as though a famine of this commodity was faced.

At times, in 1926, the premiums paid for spot delivery were exorbitant, but these high premiums are partly and largely the consequence of hedging sales on the London Metal Exchange, which in turn have to be covered.

The probabilities at the end of the year point to a slightly increased production of refined tin in 1927. As the statistics below indicate, even an increased supply cannot readily upset the strength of the tin position until a new source of production can be found.

The cost of producing the bulk of the tin coming on the market is so low that the inducement to push production could not be greater than it is today, when a profit of $400 a ton and upward is realized for over 90 per cent of the production.

The constant growth of the canning business assures a permanently increasing demand for this metal, and only at times of extreme depression will there be an opportunity to accumulate stocks of metal.

Tin prices during the first half of the year followed the general trend of business. The market opened with London standard spot at £289 and futures £280 10s, and with Straits in New York spot 63½c, futures 62¾c.

The low prices was reached on June 7 with £261 5s for spot standard and 58½c in New York for spot Straits. From this low point the market recovered with small fluctuations and stands at this writing very close to the high point, with spot standard at £310 15c, futures £300, spot Straits in New York at 69¼c, and futures at 68c.

*Unofficial

Livestock receipts at the St. Louis National Stock Yards during 1926 aggregated 5,753,000 head, a run exceeded by only three other years in the history of the market. All classes of stock showed an increase over 1925 except horses and mules, the supply of which was the smallest since 1895. The total valuation of all stock received during the year is estimated at $200,000,000.

The run of cattle and calves at 1,527,000 head established a new record for the market, exceeding slightly the previous high mark made during the war year of 1918. How receipts of more than 3,500,000 head were the fifth largest in the history of the market, covering a period of over half a century and were larger than those of any other market in the United States except Chicago. Sheep and lamb arrivals at 636,000 head were 12 per cent above the previous year and the largest since 1919. Horses and mules were received in a volume greater than any other market.

St. Louis was the only large terminal live stock market in the United States last year to show a gain in all three major departments of the trade — cattle, hogs and sheep—over 1925.

The hog and sheep industry as a whole prospered during 1926, although net returns from cattle did not average as high as the previous year due to the decline in the heavier grades of steers. Average prices for mules were slightly under the year before, while horses were on a general firm basis.

The outstanding features of the cattle trade were: a decline in beef steers, especially those carrying weight; a higher market for virtually all other classes of cattle including cows, heifers, bulls calves and yearlings and stocker and feeder offerings; the heavy receipts, especially of steers, here and at other markets throughout the country; the enormous consumption of beef in the United States during the period; the further manifestation of the trend of market demand toward the younger and lighter weight cattle at the expense of the weighty beeves; the ready outlet for the cheaper grades of stock including steers, cows, heifers and bulls; and the reduced spread between the prices for stocker and feeder steers and fat kinds.

While all steers were not money makers during the year, they rendered valuable aid to the Corn Belt in providing outlet for the large crop of corn in 1925. It was this plentitude and cheapness of corn that accounted for the unusually large number of fat, good-weight steers marketed here and elsewhere during the past year.

Native Beef Steers Lower.

Native beef steers, compared with 1925, averaged 50c to $1 lower, with most of the loss in the fat, heavy kinds. The bulk of steer sales was $8.25 to $9.75 per cwt. The high sale for the open market for full loads or better was $15 paid for fancy Christmas beeves and individual head scored as high as $75 per 100 lbs. Common beeves during the year sold around $7 and under. The bulk of the light butcher steers and heifers sold on a 50c to $1 higher market. A spread of $7 to $9.75 covered a considerable part of the run, inferior grades bringing $4 or under and tops reaching $12.75. Beef cows advanced about 50c, bulk $5 to $6, and canners and cutters gained 75c to $1, cutters moving largely at $4 to $4.75 and canners at $3.25 to $4. Bulls were from 75c to $1.25 higher, beef grades bulking at $5.75 to $6.50, bolognas at $5.25 to $5.75 and canners and cutters at $4 to $5. Feeder steers, or those in good weight, sold for return to the country at steady to 75c higher prices than a year ago, average sales being $6.50 to $7.50, and stockers, or lighter steers appreciating 50c to $1, most bringing $6 to $7.50. Veal calves figured $1.75 to $2.75 higher and southern canner yearlings $1 better. Choice veals went largely at $13 to $14, and the top was $16.50. Southern canner yearlings earned $4 to $5 for the most part. In addition to Corn Belt marketing, the range sections of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas contributed approximately 200,000 head of cattle to this market, an increase of 25 per cent over the previous year. Fat steers averaged about $1 lower for the period, while the lighter grades, which often had stocker and feeder competition, held about steady, and cows and heifers advanced $1. Grass steers ranged from $4.75 per cwt. for an inferior kind to $8.85 and $8.90 for top grades. The bulk of sales was $6 to $8

LONDON SHOWS USUAL OPTIMISM AS YEAR CLOSES

By ARTHUR W. KIDDY,
Editor of Bankers' Magazine and Financial Editor of the London Morning Post.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The year ending with the usual optimism but of a more sober and carefully reasoned character.

The last year has been good for the stock exchange and fairly good for the banks, while industrial results were highly mixed, as key industries, like iron, coal, steel and railways, have suffered disastrously. Cotton was also bad. New industries, combines and the retail trade generally enjoyed excellent business. The last named, however, was due largely to the huge Government social outlays, including doles.

New year optimism is based chiefly on the expectation of a reaction in the key industries after the prolonged depression, while it is believed that temporary strikes are unlikely because of the impoverished trade union treasuries and the funds of individual workers.

It is believed for the same reason that even the output will improve for a time. It is considered, however, that the betterment will be both gradual and moderate. Hence there is no disposition to anticipate any immediate rise in money rates. On the contrary, it is believed that a slight fall in rates is likely on both sides of the Atlantic early in the year.

Minimum Rate of 4 Per Cent.

No real slump is anticipated, though, partly because the authorities would check it, fearing overstimulation of speculative activities and partly because natural causes like the world's demands for capital and better trade, would have a restraining effect.

Therefore, the general belief is that a 4 per cent rate will be the minimum for the Bank of England during the year, if as low as that. On the same line of reasoning, it is believed that securities will be fairly active and cheerful in the early part of the year and that investments will probably be steady, with activity centering on industrials, speculative and semispeculative stocks.

It is likely, however, that later in the year these tendencies may be checked by financial indigestion arising from excessive capital creations and by increasing trade activities.

The April budget period may also be critical because, unless the Government gives indication of a definite large economies the consequences, both political and financial, may be important.

Chief Clouds on Horizon.

The chief clouds on the political horizon are in China, Russia and Brazil, with a slightly uncomfortable feeling about internal politics in Italy. The French situation, also, must cause some uneasiness until stabilization and external debt funding operations are completed. There is some dissatisfaction in Brazil occasioned by the recent proposals to fund the Milreis at six pence, when the country could afford a higher rate.

While these and other considerations may prevent the 1926 sun setting in a cloudless sky, and while the barometer may not be actually set for fair weather, indications for 1927 suggest variable winds, with moderate temperature rather than stormy.

BOND TRANSACTIONS ON EXCHANGE IN 1926 SHORT OF PREVIOUS YEAR

Total of $1,300,000 Sold; Ownership Among Customers Drops From $300,000,000 to $200,000,000.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—A new high record in volume of financing was established by electric public utilities in 1926. Including the sale of stock to customers, aggregating $191,000,000 for the first nine months, approximately $1,300,000,000 was raised for all purposes. The funds were secured on favorable terms. Mortgage bonds, for example, were marketed on an average yield basis of 5.40 per cent and preferred stock 6.84 per cent. Of significance was the swing from junior to senior securities. Out of the total money raised in 1926 almost 60 per cent was in bonds, compared to 39 per cent in 1925; preferred stock dropped from $280,000,000 to less than $100,000,000 and common dropped from $34,000,000 to $12,000,000. Debentures and notes stood at approximately the same figure, but customer ownership shrank from almost $300,000,000 to $200,000,000.

The reason for the reversion to bonds is doubtless due to the fact that bond money dropped more rapidly than stock and that up to September more than $270,000,000 was raised by the utilities for refunding purposes. Noteworthy also was the recovery of utility security prices from the spring crash. Most utility stocks began to recover in April, and since then some have risen to levels that existed prior to March. The trend also has been steady and stable.

Development of Markets.

During 1926, the attention of public utility operators and executives was directed toward the greater development of existing and prospective markets for electricity, and during 1927 intensive commercial campaigns will be undertaken, particularly among domestic consumers. In many localities the electric refrigerator, the electric range, the electric water heater and other applianes have ben sold actively with gratifying results. The goal is to increase the use of electricity in the household from 365 kilowatt-hours a year to at least 1000, and experience shows that this can be done. Market studies also indicate great commercial opportunities for industrial heating, rural electric service, lighting and radio.

Technically, improvements in apparatus and equipment are constantly being made. Greater and great transmission systems are being evolved through interconnection, necessitating standardization of voltage and 220,000 volt transmission in the East as well as on the Pacific Coast. It is also expected that 132,000-volt cable will be in operation shortly.

of training ground for first ventures in export.

Quantity of Exports Higher.

In general, therefore, we may say that the outlook for our exports, particularly of wholly or partly fabricated wares, offers no ground for serious concern. It is true that our total sales in 1926, which probably totaled $4,800,000,000, were approximately 2 per cent less than in 1925. This slight decline in value was due primarily to price depressions in cotton and a few other major raw materials. Measured in terms of quantity, our total sales were at least 5 per cent above those of 1925. In almost every case our wholly and partly manufactured exports showed and continue to show a gratifying increase.

Some alarm has been expressed over the fact that our favorable trade balance—excess of exports over imports—for the year will probably be less than $350,000,000, as contrasted with an average for 1921-25 of nearly $917,000,000. As a matter of fact, this discrepancy is due primarily to increases in import values in such major commodities as rubber, to an increase in our purchase of exotic fruits and semi-luxuries because of our high measure of prosperity during the year, and also to the fact that export values were depressed through modifications of prices, as was pointed out above. The enormous volume of our private investments abroad, which now exceed $11,000,000,000—nearly five times as much as in 1910—also augments our imports, since the service charges on these investments must be paid in incoming goods or services. Taking the far view, however, it is obvious that as these investments stimulate productive and purchasing power of foreign countries, we may expect greater demand for American merchandise, so that the net result will be a general expansion of our foreign trade in both directions.

ory—for it is as yet a theory though it shows which way the wind is blowing. It is blowing toward combination, efficiency and economy of production.

Protected Industries Content.

Next in importance is the operation of the tariff law. Here, too, while there may be differences of opinion on the wisdom of certain tariff schedules, and domestic prices may be higher in some instances than they would be if foreign competition were allowed, the dependence which American industry has put on the tariff wall cannot be overestimated and whenever a year goes by and the tariff is not tinktred with, these captains of industry breathe a prayer of thanks.

There is nevertheless much more agitation about the tariff than the protective tariff school would like and the outlook with reference to tariff revision cannot be said to be as clear as it might otherwise be in a period of Republican rule. For the requests for a change in tariff are coming from elements in the Republican party. Some are interested in the economics of war-debt payments and some are concerned with the vast amount of money being lent to European countries whose need for an outlet for their products is held up as a reason for tariff changes.

Trusts Not Molested.

The attitude of the Washington administration toward mergers and trusts is one of the influences little noticed, but nevertheless important in any retrospect of what has happened or forecast of what is going to happen. These are days of mergers. The Government recognizes more fully perhaps than ever before that it is most disturbing to an industry suddenly to haul it before the courts in an anti-trust suit. It was considered good political strategy in the old days, especially when large corporations were owned by a relatively small group of men. Today as securities are sold in a big merger, the people ultimately buy these shares, and in fact own more than a majority of the stock; indeed, in some instances as much as 90 per cent of the stock. To prevent embarrassment all around, the Department of Justice endeavors now to ascertain the facts about a proposed merger and prevent its consummation if it appears likely to be so organized as to violate the Sherman anti-trust law. What the Government is doing in this respect corresponds to what the doctor does in the field of preventive medicine.

The work of the Federal Trade Commission has during the year come in for criticism and debate on the part of those who think unnecessary interference with business has been practiced. The commission is still doing business and the demand for its abolition has died down. For the commission has been recognized as an instrumentality which can protect the small business man as well as the big business man against unfair competition.

Shipping Policy Unsettled.

In the matter of shipping, the Government's policy is unsettled and will continue to be for some time to come. The relationship of this problem to national defense and the desirability of keeping an American merchant marine even though private capital is not yet ready to enter the field without a subsidy of some kind, makes the whole thing difficult to settle.

Broadly speaking, the attitude of Government towards business has been one of tolerance. Radicalism which in years gone by meant endless investigation and constant meddling has been reduced, not to the point which the business interests would like to see, but they concede it is not as perplexing as it used to be.

This is not saying that the school of thought which believes in keeping a regulatory eye on business has lost its momentum. The inquiry fever can be aroused overnight but the truth is, that customer ownership has bred a peculiar conservatism if not caution in governmental circles.

Conservation Among Democrats.

Politically the year has been hardly a surprise. The autumn elections brought the expected increases in the Democratic membership of the Senate and House. But the Democrats are by no means radicals. They have among them conservatives and liberal conservatives. Thus on the major economic issues, there is a comfortable working majority of Republicans and Democrats who together give a certain confidence to business that nothing fanciful or experimental will be tried which interferes with the processes of business.

The spectacle of the Democrats clamoring for a reduction in corporation taxes when they are a minority party is unusual to say the least. The steady reduction in surtaxes indicates the conservatism typical of the reconstruction era as a whole. The readiness to accept foreign debt agreements which amount to cancellation of a large part of combined principal and debt is a sign of the growth of the economic rather than the political idea at the seat of government. But the significant thing is that it is growing. And in such circumstances the assurance may be derived from all that has happened this year that nothing radical or revolutionary may be expected from the Government in its relation to business.

FOREIGN CURRENCIES MAKE FURTHER PROGRESS ALONG LINES OF STABILIZATION

Japan and Norway May Adopt Gold Basis This Year—Denmark to Return to Prewar Parity According to Announcement.

By BERNARD A. DUIS,
Vice President National City Bank.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—During the year 1926 further progress has been made in foreign currencies along the lines of stabilization and return to the prewar level of values. The pound sterling, the Swedish kroner, the Dutch guilder and the Swiss franc had all regained their pre-war gold parity in 1925, and the level of these exchanges has been maintained at or around this level in 1926, and, to all appearances, the recovery may be looked upon as permanent.

Denmark announced its intention to return to the prewar parity on Jan. 1, 1927. Belgium, after a previous failure in an endeavor to stabilize the Belgian franc at a level around 4 1-2 cents, subsequently succeeded in reorganizing its currency on a new gold basis and introduced a new currency called the "belga," on the basis of five old Belgian francs, at a value of 2.78 cents a franc, for one belga, thus making the new gold parity for the belga 13.90 cents. There is every likelihood of theis reorganization being entirely successful and of a lasting nature, as evidenced by the recent announcement on the part of the Belgian Government removing all restrictions heretofore in force covering exchange operations and exportations of capital.

With the exception of Poland, which introduced a new currency called the "zloty," after the old Polish mark had gone the way of the old German mark, Belgium is the only country which has deemed it desirable to reorganize its currency system on an entirely new gold basis, changing the name.

Japan to Act Next.

The next country which is expected to announce its intention of lifting the gold embargo and returning to the old prewar level is Japan. The Japanese yen has, during the year, recovered from the low level of about 41½c to 49⅛c a yen, and is therefore now selling at about 1 per cent below the old gold parity. This improvement has been accomplished without the use of any socalled "stabilization credit," and, unless anything unforseen should occur, it is expected that we will witness a full recovery of the Japanese yen within the early months of the new year.

Of the Scandinavian exchanges, the only currency which is still selling below its prewar level is the Norwegian crown. This currency has had, however, a substantial rise since last January. The improvement at times has caused a great deal of anxiety to the Norwegian business interests and to the Norwegian Government, but it seems that the kroner, now selling at about 25¼c, about 5 per cent below gold value, is more likely to improve than to react.

The Norwegian Government has the situation well in hand; it is apparently in no particular hurry to follow the example of Sweden and Denmark in returning to the prewar level at an early date and is willing to let the situation take care of itself until the speculation, which has been pronounced in recent years, has been eliminated. The Government is making every possible effort to curb speculation. I look for a return of the Norwegian crown to the old level of 26¾c the latter part of 1927.

Wide Range on Peseta.

The Spanish currency, the peseta, fluctuated widely during the year, due to political conditions in Spain, combined with the fact that the country was engaged in war against Morocco. With the settlement of this campaign and an improvement in the political situation the peseta has shown steadiness in the last few months, and, if political conditions progress favorably a further improvement may be looked for with a gradual return to its prewar value.

The two currencies which have experienced wide fluctuations and still remain in a state of great uncertainty are the French franc and the Italian lira. The franc experienced a decline from a level of about 3.75c on January 1, 1926, to 1.93c on July 20 and a subsequent recovery to 4c. The decline was due primarily to the failure of the Caillaux mission to settle the French debt with the United States and to the subsequent loss of confidence of the French people in their own currency, combined with the general belief that the debt agreement arranged between the United States and France through their Ambassador, M. Berenger, would not be confirmed by the French Parliament.

The return to power of M. Poincare at a time when conditions were at their worst was instrumental in saving the situation by reestablishing confidence.

The franc began to improve, there came a desire on the part of those who had previously exported their capital to repatriate these funds and the process of this repatriation naturally became more pronounced as time went on and confidence increased, with the result that the franc shows an improvement of more than 100 per cent from the low level of July.

Await Stabilization Plans.

France has made no definite plans for stabilizing her currency, but it would seem this imperative step is not being lost sight of and will be taken in hand when the time appears appropriate. I question whether stabilization can be unduly delayed without running the risk of another crisis such as occurred in July. I accordingly look for an earlier currency reorganization than is generally expected.

The lira, after a sudden, severe decline in May, 1926, has recovered all its loss and has advanced to a level of about 4½c, about ½c above the level at which the Italian Government, in the earlier months of 1926, endeavored to keep its currency. Part of this improvement—in fact, I think, a good deal of it—has been due to technical market conditions and an organized endeavor to punish those instrumental for the previous decline.

I cannot express an opinion as to the future tendency of the lira, as the restrictions which are in force and have been in force in Italy for some time past, covering exchange operations, make it possible for those in control to manipulate the market at will.

Other countries, such as Finland, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Greece, have continued their policy of stabilization successfully at the level prevailing in 1925, and if the stabilization of these currencies should, in time, time the form of introducing a new currency, it is likely that such reorganization will take place on the basis of rates now prevailing.

South American Currencies.

The Argentine peso, which during the early part of 1926 reached a level within about 2½ per cent of its pre-war value and is expected to return to par, had a material setback on account of the crop failures, but has now regained most of this loss. If conditions should continue favorable, as it appears they will, it is likely a further improvement will take place in the export season between now and March, and I see no obstacles to prevent this country from re-establishing the old value for the peso of 103.65 Argentine gold.

The Brazilian milreis has had its ups and downs. Under the administration of the previous Government, it reached a high level of 16 cents, but with the change in the administration in the latter part of the year, the price dropped from 16 cents to slightly below 12 cents. I understand a bill has been introduced into the Legislature to create a new currency called the "cruzeiro," and the basis on which reorganization is proposed would mean the equivalent of 11⅞ cents per milreis.

The so-called "silver exchanges" are following the trend of the silver market, which had a considerable decline in the last few months, with somewhat of a recovery more recently. Well-informed quarters look for lower prices for silver, and therefore the Chinese exchanges are also likely to seek gradually a lower level.

PAST YEAR'S APPLE CROP LARGEST IN TWELVE YEARS

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—America produced the largest total apple crop in 12 years, says Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation in its survey of apple growing in 1926. The records of the survey show that the total commercial and noncommercial crop amounted to 246,000,000 bushels. This record was 75 million bushels larger than the 1925 crop. The commercial crop for this year amounted to 40,000,000 barrels, as compared with 33,000,000 barrels in 1925. On December 1, 1926, there were in cold storage 4,548,000 barrels, 15,123,000 boxes and 2,718,000 baskets of apples as compared with 4,244,000 barrels, 13,041,000 boxes and 2,419,000 baskets in 1925. High prices prevailed in the first and third quarters of the year, reaching $4.75 a barrel in January, February and June. Low prices were recorded in April and May and in the latter part of the year.

ST. LOUIS GRAIN MARKET HOLDS ITS OWN DESPITE SITUATION IN THE SOUTH

By CHARLES RIPPIN,
Secretary - Traffic Commissioner Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis.

The local receipts of grain at the St. Louis market for the first 11 months of this year were about equal to same period last year, as follows:

1926—Wheat, 24,877,525; corn, 22,183,189; oats, 15,340,000; all other grains, 1,401,000; total, 63,801,714.

1925—Wheat, 22,749,289; corn, 18,413,508; oats, 21,558,000; all other grains, 1,529,700; total, 64,250,497.

The month of December showed a very heavy decline in receipts of corn, owing to the lack of demand in the southern territory, which is ordinarily supplied by St. Louis, and to the fact that the farmers were prevented from shipping to market on account of the impossibility of working in the wet fields due to the rainy weather in November.

The states of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana had an increase in corn production this year over last amounting to 130,000,000 bushels, and over the five-year average an increase of 13,000,000 bushels. The states south of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi Rivers had a larger crop than last year by 66,000,000 bushels of corn, and larger than the five-year average by 14,000,000 bushels; thus the consuming territory, where St. Louis ordinarily ships its corn, was better supplied with local production than was the case last year, and the same situation prevailed as to oats in both the Southwestern and Southeastern regions.

The increase in the oat production in the four southwestern States was 82 million bushels over last year, and 56 million over the five-year average. In the Southeast the oat production increased 13 million this year over last, and 8 million over the five-year average.

Market Holds Own.

The corn and oat producing states that ordinarily supply the markets of Chicago, St. Louis and Missouri River, viz., Iowa, Illinois, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri, had a decline of 277 million bushels in corn production, of which the shortage in the two states of Kansas and Nebraska alone was 136 million bushels this year compared with last year. In Nebraska and Kansas the shortage this year, compared with the five-year average, on corn, was 124 million bushels. This has resulted in a movement of corn from Illinois, Missouri and Iowa to and across the Missouri River against the ordinary trend of the corn movement, in order to take care of live stock feeding in the States of Kansas and Nebraska. On oats, the six producing states mentioned in the first part of this paragraph were 187 million bushels short this year, compared with last, and about 100 million bushels short this year compared with the five-year average.

These circumstances, coupled with the cotton situation, rendered it impossible for any market serving the southern territory to increase its business, and it is thought that the St. Louis market, for the first 11 months of this year, did remarkably well in practically breaking even with last year under these unusual and discouraging conditions. After the fields became accessible, there was an increase in corn receipts at St. Louis, beginning in the latter half in December, and it is evident that much of the corn which was not shipped in the latter part of November and the first half of December will move into the market during the new year.

According to the latest Government estimates, the wheat crop for this year was 832 million, compared with 676 million bushels last year; corn, 2645 million this year against 2917 million last year; oats, 1254 million this year against 1488 million last year.

There was an enormous cotton crop in the south this year, some estimates placing it as high as 18¼ million bales, or more than 2 million bales in excess of last year, last year's crop having been larger than usual. As a result of this enormous crop, the farm price in the south declined from an average of about 18c last year to 10c this year, resulting in a very discouraging situation and a curtailment of buying. This was responsible for reduction in the demand for grain, grain products and hay from the St. Louis market, and, coupled with the abundant southern crop of corn this year, put a stop to shipments of corn to that territory, when there should have been a movement, during the fall months. The situation was so abnormal that Georgia corn was sold for the same price in Atlanta, Georgia, as western corn was selling for in St. Louis; manifestly there was no chance to move corn from St. Louis to the southeast under such conditions.

The barge line on the Mississippi River moved about 8,000,000 bushels of grain from St. Louis to New Orleans in 1926. [illegible] the Department of Agriculture [illegible] Dec. 20, the price for wheat and corn paid to the farmer on Dec. 1 this year was considerably lower than last year. On corn it was 3c, winter wheat 26.7c, spring wheat 16.7c and all wheat 21.6c less this year than last year.

DEMAND FOR STERLING FEATURES EXCHANGE

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today, says:

"The most important feature of the market during the past week was the general closing up of accounts prior to the end of the year, including the arrangements for meeting many maturities before Jan. 1 which had been created either by overdrafts or future contracts. This business was of the most impressive character in sterling in which transactions toward the end of the week were in amounts of as much as equal to $1,000,000 at a time. Nearly all this buying of sterling was of a commercial character and it was a matter of general understanding that the commercial demand for sterling was so large as to absorb offerings from all sources, bankers finding a steady market in that demand for the supplies that came to hand. This buying carried sterling up from $4.85¼ to $4.85⅝ for cables, the highest level reached since last April. Nearly all this buying was completed in the first three days, the demand falling off to such an extent on Thursday that the business fell to only trifling amounts.

"French exchange was steadily held at close to 3.96 for checks, the understanding prevailing that the rate was pegged at that level by government agents. Italian yielded 3 points to 4.50 for checks and was also steadily held after that decline.

"A feature of the market was the strength in German exchange, which rose 5 points from its recent position to 23.84 but in the past few days was without nearby demand and on Thursday had a break of three points. Scandinavians showed strength around the middle of the week and then reacted. Japanese exchange was not disturbed by the announcement of the death of the Mikado, but instead found a market at a slight advance, yen cables moving up to 49 cents, and holding at that rate. Indian exchange was one of the strong features, advancing over ½ cent to 36.56 for rupee cables, but reacted after the year end requirements were supplied.

Canadian exchange held at and slightly above ¼ discount. There was little movement to South American exchanges during the week. Silver exchange held steady and without special change in trading positions."

Low Exchange Helps Brazil.

Brazil's export products are profiting greatly by lower exchange and imports increased slightly, due to depleted stocks, although the instability of exchange is still restricting purchases. Coffee prices have been 12 per cent above last month's. Brazil's domestic textile situation is rapidly improving and surplus stocks are much reduced.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 279 N. Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

WASHINGTON U. LAW SCHOOL ON PROBATION

Action Involves Interpretation of Scholarship Rules, Which Has Been Adjusted.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—Failing to meet scholarship standards as set by the Association of American Law Schools, Vanderbilt University of Nashville, Tenn., has been excluded from membership, coincident with the announcement that the University of Mississippi was dropped from membership, and the Washington University Law School at St. Louis was placed on probation for two years.

The University of Mississippi and Vanderbilt University, however, may apply for reinstatement under the rules of the Association after two years, provided they have complied with the requirements of the Assqociation.

Vanderbilt University officials made a stirring plea for toleration before the question of exclusion was put to a vote which resulted 36 for and 13 against. Action on the other institutions was taken Wednesday.

Order a Routine Action, Says Acting Dean at Washington U.

Acting Dean Tyrrell Williams of the Washington University School of Law, commenting upon the association's action, yesterday, said:

"The action taken had no reference to the work of legal education in our law school. That was not in any way in question. The issue with the association was as to what constituted the two years of college work necessary for admission to the law school.

"Prior to this year we construed this rule somewhat differently than had the executive committee of the association, but on Sept. 23, last, we had changed our rules so as to comply with the present interpretation of the rules of the association on this point. As this action removed any difference with the association, the order made as to probation is simply the usual order in such cases to insure a compliance with the rules adopted."

PART EIGHT ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JANUARY 2, 1927. PAGES 1C—8C.

BUSINESS LINES PLAN ACTIVE YEAR OF CONSTRUCTION

Several Large Buildings, Ranging From 15 to 37 Stories, Proposed for Downtown Area.

PROJECTS ON LARGE SCALE UPTOWN, ALSO

Optimistic Situation Characterized by Plenty of Capital for Work of Type Contemplated.

By Berry Moore.

An optimistic atmosphere characterizes real estate circles with the advent of 1927. This is ascribed to developments pending in the business and industrial centers of the city—anticipated as factors of renewed activity. From all indications, construction in the main in 1927 will be along business and industrial lines.

The new Bell Telephone Building, dominating the city at a height of 403 feet, has set the pace in the downtown district, with the new Missouri Pacific Railway Building under way with plans for a 27-story structure. Recently completed and exemplifying a spirit of new enterprise, the Paul Brown Building at Ninth, Olive and Pine streets, and the Ambassador Theater and office building at Seventh and Locust streets are also on an inspiring scale.

In Memorial Plaza District.

Twelfth boulevard, Olive, Pine, Chestnut and Market streets, in the vicinity of the proposed Memorial Plaza district, will be centers of activity, with plans for various new building projects taking definite form, both east and west of Twelfth boulevard. Both Olive and Market streets, which are to be widened, as provided for under the $87,000,000 bond issue, are expected to display notable buoyancy.

A 12-story addition to the American Hotel at Seventh and Market streets is to be erected at the northwest corner of Sixth and Market streets, with the widening of Market street, according to Charles [illegible], president of the hotel company.

The half block on the west side of Twelfth boulevard between Pine and Olive streets figures in plans for a 37-story hotel, while the northeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Locust street is under option carrying plans for a lofty office building with theater incorporated.

Plans are being perfected for a [illegible]-story office building at the northeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Clark avenue. This will be a narrow rectangular structure with a frontage on Twelfth of 136 feet, by a depth of 12 feet on Clark avenue. This lot now extending 52 feet on Clark avenue will be reduced 40 feet in depth with the widening of Twelfth boulevard.

22-Story Structure Proposed.

A 22-story loft building is to replace the seven-story Hadley-Dean Glass Building at the northwest corner of Eleventh street and Lucas avenue. Another building is to be built for the Hadley-Dean company at the northwest corner of Seventh and Morgan streets.

The situation is characterized by an abundant supply of capital, available at comparatively low rates of interest, especially for construction of the foregoing character. While a record number of buildings were completed in the downtown district in 1926, there was a $15,000,000 slump in construction. This was due to the fact that the permits for all the large structures were taken out in 1925.

Absorption of space in the new office buildings in the central business district is gratifying, Isaac T. Cook & Co., announce. Significant in this connection is the fact that all except four floors of the 33-story Bell Telephone Building has been reserved for occupancy by the Bell Company, whereas originally occupancy of only half the building was contemplated—noteworthy as reflecting the growth of the city.

Various sites have been suggested as available for the proposed new Customs House, including notably the southeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Market street and the half block on the east side of Twelfth boulevard from Pine to Chestnut.

On the other hand, enlargement of the present structure at Eighth and Olive streets with additional stories, is being urged. Paul Brown, president of Paul Brown & Co., and vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co., who has been regarded as the predestined purchaser of this block, believes that the present building is susceptible of enlargement and alterations necessary to the requirements.

Owners of adjacent property have had visions of a modern department store ultimately occupying this site, which is regarded as essentially one for a large retail emporium, forming as it does virtually the focal point of the downtown business district.

Ideas being advanced for the redemption of the district east of Third street has directed the attention of speculators as well as investors to that part of the city.

Outlook for Uptown Section.

Building operations also bid fair to be on an appreciable scale in uptown St. Louis. This refers especially to Grand and Lindell boulevards, where sites have been assembled for several ambitious projects. A theater, surmounted by a 17-story office building, is to be erected at Grand and Washington boulevards by the Fox Film Corporation at a cost of $5,000,000. A syndicate headed by Preston J. Bradshaw recently purchased the southwest corner of Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue, with plans for a 25-story combination apartment hotel structure.

Apartment construction presumably will be at a low stage for some time henceforth, with a resultant stabilizing effect. Construction along this line has been on a phenomenal scale for several years, fostered by an abundance of money, and there now is an ample supply of buildings of this type. The year has witnessed the completion of the Senate and Congress Hotel apartments, Convent Garden, Monticello, Hotel Saum, Kenrick Square, Roosevelt, Embassy, and a number of other buildings of this type on a notably impressive scale.

Industrial Construction.

Construction in the industrial areas, from all surface indications, will run well with that in the business centers, according to real estate men abreast of the situation. The northwestern industrial district will receive new impetus with construction launched for the proposed $5,000,000 plant of the General Electric Co. in that part of the city. Not less than 25,000 persons will be required to operate the mammoth new plant, it is estimated.

The Krey Packing Co. has purchased an extensive site in the 6700 and 6800 blocks of North Broadway for a plant to cost $1,500,000. This plant is also scheduled for construction this year. Plans are being made for numerous other large plants not yet disclosed, and construction of which is to start in the early future. A general switch to construction along industrial and business lines is the forecast.

MID-CONTINENT CORPORATION HAS GENERAL OFFICES HERE

The Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation of Kentucky, a subsidiary of the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation of Oklahoma, formerly Cosden & Co., has taken the entire thirteenth floor of the Landreth Building at Fourth and Locust streets and is occupying it as general offices. Isaac T. Cook & Co. negotiated the lease.

The offices of the Kentucky corporation were formerly in Louisville, Ky. When it was planned recently to greatly extend the company's activities in the filling station and tank station branch of the business, it became necessary to establish larger headquarters nearer to the center of activities. St. Louis was selected as the logical point from which to direct operations. The company operates 175 stations in Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa and Wisconsin. Divisions are being established at East St. Louis, Ill.; Dubuque, Ia.; Kansas City, Mo., and Louisville, Ky.

The parent company, the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation of Oklahoma, bought out Cosden & Co. two years ago. It has the largest independent refinery in the Mid-Continent field with a capacity of 40,000 barrels a day. The plant is at present producing 30,000 barrels a day.

LOAN CONCERN REPORTS LARGE VOLUME FOR 1926

Love, Van Riper & Bryan, Inc., mortgage loan correspondents for the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York, report an exceptionally large volume of loans handled during the year 1926. This figure runs into several millions and represents a number of loans to individual home owners.

Several different plans of financing home and investment properties have been devised by the Equitable Life Assurance Society, which makes it possible to meet the needs of a great many classes of property owners. The firm has a special arangement whereby 24-hour answers can be given on any loans offered, enabling the borrower to close any desired loan without delay or red tape.

EICHENSER REPORTS REALTY SALES EXCEEDING $100,000

William Eichenser reports the sale of the southwest corner of Pine and Fifteenth streets. The lot is 25x109, entire lot improved with a four-story hotel and store building for W. P. Linzee, et al, to a client of Chauncey P. Heath; Nos. 3326-28-30 Wash street, lot 60x130 improved with 11 flats of three and four rooms for Nettie Abrams to Chas. W. Jung of Red Bud, Ill.; Nos. 3204-6-8 Chouteau avenue, lot 54x130 improved with nine flats of three rooms each for a client to Bill-Ed Realty & Investment Co., and an oil station on the southwest corner of Compton avenue and Caroline street, lot 60x125 for W. F. Kayser to Sam Brown Oil Stations. The total sales aggregate more than $100,000.

EAST ST. LOUIS TO HAVE 12-STORY BUILDING

Construction on the Spivey Building, a 12-story office structure on the north side of Missouri avenue, between Fourth and Fifth streets, East St. Louis, will begin this week, according to announcement yesterday by A. T. Spivey, editor of the East St. Louis Daily Journal, who is financing the structure.

The location of the proposed structure, which will be the tallest building in East St. Louis, is in the main business section on an 80-foot frontage immediately east of the Daily Journal Building, 417 Missouri avenue.

Construction will be fireproof with finish in gray brick and terra cotta. The basement will be occupied by a restaurant, and the main floor will have store space and a lobby finished in marble. Upper floors will be given over to 130 offices, leases for one-third of which have been signed.

Main floor and basement construction will be planned to permit the transfer of the Daily Journal to the new building in the event such a move is desired. The building, which is expected to be ready for occupancy within seven months, will cost approximately $600,000. The site is valued at $300,000 by Spivey. A. B. Frankel of East St. Louis is the architect. The Wimmer Construction Co. of St. Louis has the general contract.

ENGLISH TYPE RESIDENCE IN MOORLANDS COMPLETED

The Edwin C. Muckerman residence on Boland drive, in the Moorlands, has been completed. It is of an English type, a combination of brick, timbering and stucco with a toned roof of purple and green slates.

The first floor contains a large living room with carved stone mantel, dining room which opens out upon a stone terrace which overlooks the properties to the east, breakfast room, kitchen and reception hall. There is a beautiful stairway with an iron rail and old English leaded glass window.

The second floor contains three main bedrooms, dressing room and maid's room and two baths. The first floor is finished in gum stained dark and the second floor painted.

The building was erected from plans prepared by Nolte & Nauman, architects, by the B. J. Charleville Construction Co.

LE GRAND JONES SALES IN YEAR WERE $2,750,000

Le Grand Jones, Inc., reports sales in 1926 aggregating $2,750,000. The most notable of these involves the east corner of Union and Delmar boulevards, $275,000; Lindell and Spring, $170,000; land at the Clayton and North and South roads, $258,000, and Kingshighway and Kensington avenue, $77,500.

Le Grand Jones, Inc., is offering on another page a colume of choice properties, and considers the coming year will be a banner one for real estate investments.

LESS BUILDING IN ST. LOUIS IN 1926 THAN IN 1925, REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE REPORTS

Figures on Transactions Made Public by Secretary Lang—Bill for Licensing Realty Dealers to Be Offered Again.

An increase in some classes of real estate transactions, but a decrease in new building operations, is indicated by the annual report of Clarence C. Lang, executive secretary of the Real Estate Exchange, issued on the last day of 1926. The comparisons made are with the record of the year 1925.

As the complete building record for 1926 is not available the report shows the number of permits issued for the first 11 months only. The number of permits for new buildings in those 11 months, from Jan. 1 to Nov. 30, inclusive, was 8763, and the estimated cost reached a total of $31,829,321. In the same period, alteration permits numbered 4811, and were for work costing $6,010,462.

Of the new buildings for which permits were obtained in 1926, 10 were office buildings, 76 factories and work shops, 39 theaters and other amusement places, 653 stables and garages, 2 club houses, 7 churches, 6 hotels, 3 banks, 19 schools, 40 warehouses, 6 mercantile establishments, 3 hospitals, 2 laundries, 7 brick dwellings costing between $20,000 and $50,000, 1163 brick dwellings costing less than $20,000, 1137 brick tenements, 22 stores costing more than $30,000, 279 stores, costing less than $30,000, 695 frame dwellings, 8 frame tenements and 4585 fourth-class structures.

Real Estate Transfers.

The showing for 1926 in other activities affecting the real estate market was:

Real estate transfers in St. Louis for 1926 total 21,897, as compared with 23,411 for the year 1925, or a decrease of 1514. April, with 2134, was the largest month. Real estate transfers in St. Louis County totaled 13,992 for the year 1926, July being the chief month, with 1306. The money involved in these transactions is not available, as many conveyances show only $1 or $100 as the consideration.

Deeds of trust (mortgages) executed on realty in St. Louis in 1926 totaled 26,771, a valuation of $173,418,226, compared with 25,906 of a valuation of $146,342,772 for 1925. CONSTRUCTION TOTAL FOR 1926 $6,800,000,000

AN INCREASE OF 3 PCT. IN VOLUME

(Copyright, New York Evening Post, Inc.)

The year 1926 closed with a total construction volume of approximately $6,800,000,000, as estimated by Thomas S. Holden, vice president of the F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was a gain of approximately $200,000,000 over 1925. The gain was all made in the first two or three months of the year, and it was practically made in the industrial and civil engineering classes of work. The volume of building (in the strict sense, "building" excludes structures without walls and roofs, which are included together with "building" in the more general term "construction") was actually a little under that of 1925, as is shown in the recorded totals of new floor space contracted for.

The construction volume gain of 3 per cent over 1925 is just a little less than the estimated 5 per cent increase in general business volume. Although construction activity, reviving in 1921, was one of the principal initiators of the current era of prosperity, having anticipated the revival of general business and industrial activity, it is now dependent on continued business prosperity for its own further growth.

Trend in Construction.

The trend of construction activity and the trend of general business run much more closely together than has been usual in the past. In earlier times increased business activity usually curtailed construction, by reason of the fact that commercial expansion attracted a larger and larger share of available money and credit, thus cutting off the financial supplies available for construction. With our present unlimited credit there have been at all times ample funds to keep commerce and industry active and expanding and at the same time to finance record volumes of construction. Construction activity now, as always, makes a vast contribution to general business through its enormous expenditures in wages and purchase of materials.

At the same time individual and corporate accumulations of new capital are seeking immediate investment in the creation of the tangible form of wealth represented by new construction. When there was a building shortage to be made up, construction inaugurated an era of business prosperity. When the shortage was taken care of and prosperity was an accomplished fact, construction became the in-

CONSTRUCTION TOTAL FOR 1926, $6,800,000,000

Availability of Capital.

It is perhaps significant that the total amount of mortgage loan investments of life insurance companies increased from 1919 to 1925 at exactly the same rate as the total dollar volume of building. This illustrates the fact that construction activity has been conditioned by the availability of capital funds seeking investment in what we call permanent forms of wealth.

Of course, life insurance companies do not place all their mortgage funds into new building projects, nor do they provide the funds for a major portion of new construction volume. But the assets of savings banks and building and loan associations have also greatly increased. Of more immediate and direct effect on construction has been the amazing growth of the first mortgage bond business, which financed $1,000,000,000 in new buildings, one-seventh of the year's total. By offering an easy and immediate flow of capital accumulations into construction projects, the first mortgage bond business has greatly helped the present condition.

So long as the country continues prosperous it will continue to build. In fact, it cannot be prosperous unless it does keep its construction industry employed at something near capacity. Will it do this in 1927?

Rapid Construction Growth

The very rapid construction growth of the years 1919 to 1925 was maintained through 1926. Should it continue another year, then 1927 would have approximately $7,250,000,000 worth of new construction. It cannot be proved that this will not happen, but there are reasons for believing it unlikely.

The impetus to the present industrial prosperity came from two important sources. The first was the accumulated building requirements of the country which started the building revival in 1921, resulting in the construction increases shown in the chart and also in a great expansion in the productive capacity of the construction industry.

The other big contribution to industrial expansion was the development of the automotive industry, whose productive output has increased just about as rapidly as construction volume has.

It is rather to be expected that the general prosperity of this country will increase hereafter at a somewhat slower pace than it has in recent years. Construction requirements will, of course, increase with the general development of the country's business and wealth, but it does not now seem at all likely to continue growth at the pace of the last eight years.

Construction Stabilized.

In fact, the 1926 construction record seems to indicate that for the present construction activity is fairly well stabilized at a rate somewhere near that of the last two years, and continuation into 1927 at something between $6,000,000,000 and $7,000,000,000 is the most likely prospect.

Interest rates are a little less favorable than they were a year ago, although they are still comparatively low. The present financial situation opens the possibility of a strong speculative building movement in 1927, unless conservative policies hold it in check as they did in 1926. It will be something of a problem to make construction investments wisely this year.

In the first paragraph of this article it was stated that the construction volume gain of 1926 was made in the first two months of the year. The spring peak of contract-letting was passed in March. Since that time the general tendency in monthly contract volume has been toward decline. The remarkable thing about the 1926 record has been the fact that the decline was held within such moderate bounds.

In the past the normal course of contract letting has called for a decrease of 12 per cent in the second half of the year from the first half. In 1926 the two half years had practically equal contract volumes. This unusual stability was the direct result of the prevalence throughout the year of a policy of watchfulness, of progressive conservatism. A number of large contracts that were let in the second half of 1926 were deliberately held up until the peak had passed, with the result of stabilizing construction volume.

Proportion to Actual Needs.

There has been a tendency to gauge construction rather carefully in proportion to actual needs, though the year has not been entirely without speculative developments. It should be noted in passing that speculative activity to a certain extent shifted from the Eastern seaboard to the Central West in the latter part of 1926.

As the new year opens construction demand has been slackening a little for six months. Rents have been falling and there is everywhere some danger of overbuilding. The situation seems to call for an even greater degree of prudent foresight than it did in 1926.

Business leaders have seen the policy of progressive conservatism, of careful adjustment of production programs to consumer demand highly successful in maint prosperity through a year w has withstood some quite business shocks—shocks that have badly upset a less subst prosperity than that which r ly has been enjoyed. This calls for continued watchfulne

Guard Against Overbuildi

Overbuilding is to be gu against in practically every s of the country. A speculative p gram of too large proporti would be very apt to bring a r tion.

However, a continued polic prudence is rather likely to p vail and a continuation of the m erate decline in contract le possibly through the first half the year. If this course is p sued, an upturn in the fall m would not be surprising. Alth no drastic reaction seems to b prospect, it is probably the p of wisdom to consider that mod ate decline may be in ord throughout 1927. If this sho happen, the year's construction v ume might be around $6,80 000,000, which at present looks li a minimum estimate.

Should there be a decline in c struction volume this year it w probably affect most such cl of structure as high-class ap ments, hotels, office buildings a housing developments. Industr and civil engineering projects, i cluding electrical developm would be the kinds of work m likely to proceed at something n the 1926 rate.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

MRS. S. P.—The 1832 half dollar does not command a premium.

C. A. M.—There is no premium on the 1858 half dime.

E. B.—You might inquire at the Moving Picture Operators' Union, 652 North Grand boulevard, regarding the work you desire to do.

J. F. D.—You can apply at the offices of the various bus companies that route their cars through the states in which you might want to work.

DAILY READER.—Write to Washington University or to the David Ranken Trade School for information regarding the engineering courses. Both schools have day and night classes.

M. A. M.—You might try removing the shellac with an emulsion made by mixing 2 parts of ammonia water and 1 part of spirits of turpentine. Place a thick, absorbent pad under the spots and sponge with the mixture.

M. C. H. N. Y.—The sentence you quote cannot be written correctly because the three words have different meanings and so cannot be grouped as you describe. You might write it as follows: "There are three words pronounced (tu) in the English language.

EDWARD T.—Ferns require very little sunshine. The plant should be watered every other day with just enough water to keep the soil moist but not wet. The air in a room containing a fern should be slightly moist. Leaf mold and sand should be used instead of ordinary earth for planting the fern.

HOLLY.—To remove the grease spots from the wall paper apply a medium thick paste made of pipe clay and water. Spread the paste flat and allow it to remain on the spots for at least 12 hours before removing with a soft cloth. The treatment may be repeated if necessary. If the paper is very delicately colored use a paste of magnesia and benzine.

L. B. & S.—Glue used for paper box making may serve your purpose. Mix 5 parts chloral hydrate, 8 parts white gelatin and 2 parts gum arabic in a porcelain container; pour 30 parts of boiling water over the mixture and let it stand for one day, giving it a vigorous stirring several times during the day. In cold weather the glue container should be placed in warm water for a few minutes to prevent hardening. This glue adheres to any surface. We do not know where you can buy the substance you mention.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

JANET.—Witnesses are not necessary for a marriage ceremony in Illinois. The presence of witnesses does not affect the legality of the marriage.

J. B. T.—We cannot send you a form for a will. You should consult a lawyer and have the will drawn up properly to avoid considerable trouble for your heirs.

IGNORANT.—The estate cannot be completely distributed until one year has elapsed. However, there may be a partial distribution before the end of the year.

THANKFUL.—You will not need a license to conduct your business if you do not carry any stock. You can display a sign such as you describe.

FLO S.—The city does not sue for sprinkling taxes, but the title to your property will be clouded until they are paid, as the title companies record such tax delinquencies.

LAW ABIDING CITIZEN.—We do not know the city ordinances of the town you mention. You might ask a local lawyer about the powers of the city council or secure a copy of the city charter.

G. H. J.—You should report the rooming house to the Health Department, Municipal Courts Building, Fourteenth and Market streets. The probation officers will be found in the same building.

ANXIOUS.—It is against the law to mail a postcard containing anything of libelous, defamatory or threatening character, or calculated and obviously intended to reflect injuriously upon the character or conduct of another person.

MRS. C. L. W.—If the river is nonnavigable at the place you describe then persons owning property fronting on the river and opposite each other each own half the river. You can clear out your half of the stream, provided you do not damage his property.

ROBERT G. B.—The gas company might not be able to collect for the "average bill" they sent to you but it might cost you more to defend the suit than the amount of the bill. Consult the Legal Aid Bureau, Municipal Courts Building, if your gas is cut off.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

DON K.—You might try applying a 10 per cent ointment of the yellow oxide of mercury to the scars you describe.

X. Y. Z.—You should undergo a thorough physical examination and a urine test to determine your trouble and what is causing it. We think that something is wrong but cannot give a diagnosis because your description of your trouble is inadequate.

MRS. D. R.—A person who has really been cured of syphilis may contract the disease again, but such cases are very unusual. You cannot be assured of a cure unless a series of tests extending over three or four years shows uninterrupted negative results.

SINCERE.—You should continue to take the treatments you mention for several years until a series of tests, preferably the Kahn test, continue negative, without fail, for two years at least. The blue streaks in the gums are due to the mercury which is usually given in the treatments you describe.

ANNA L.—Frequent urination is usual in persons of your age. You might get some relief by taking a 5-grain cystogen tablet in a half glass of water three or four times a day. You might try adding a big pinch of the herb, Triticum repens, to a cup of boiling water and drink it in place of tea or coffee. We know of no reason why you should not drink all the water you desire except that it may add to the frequency of the urinating. You should correct constipation.

"MY LIFE STORY"—As Told By Edward L. Doheny

The Man Who Was to Make Millions and Achieve International Power, Tells How He Worked at Cattle Tending, Waiting in a Restaurant and Other Odd Jobs.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

WASHINGTON.

THE authentic, first-hand story of Edward L. Doheny's rise from obscurity to great riches and international power as an oil operator has at last been told. Mr. Doheny himself is the author and the language is the crisp, matter of fact language of the court room. The story is now spread upon the records of the United States District Court as a part of Mr. Doheny's testimony while appearing in his own defense on a charge of conspiring to defraud the Government.

His testimony which is reproduced herewith verbatim, spans the whole distance from his birth up to the time of his now historic loan to Senator Albert L. Fall, his co-defendant in the trial at Washington—the trial which grew out of the Elk Hills and Teapot Dome oil lease investigations and which resulted in his acquittal.

was called as a witness in his own behalf, and having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

The Bailiff. Edward L. Doheny, Sr.

DIRECT EXAMINATION.

By Mr. Hogan:

Q. Where were you born? A. I was born in Fond du Lac, Wisconsin.

Q. How old are you? A. I am in my seventy-first year. I was seventy years old on the 10th day of last August.

Q. Where do you live? A. I live in Los Angeles, California.

Q. Prior to going to Los Angeles, California, and going back a little bit, when did you leave Fond du Lac, Wisconsin? A. I left Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, on the 2nd day of July, 1872.

Q. Went where? A. I went to Atchison, Kansas.

Q. Without going into details, Mr. Doheny, I wish you would state from July, 1872, when you left Fond du Lac and went to Kansas, what occupations you engaged in? A. Well, I engaged in the occupation of surveyor in the North Addition to the city of Atchison. Of book agent throughout the principal towns of Kansas, which were then largely in the eastern portion of Kansas. I went on an expedition—was sent on an expedition, a Government expedition, by Major-General Pope of the Department of the Southwest at Leavenworth to New Mexico to take shavetail mules out to Lieutenant Wheeler, who was then making the survey between Arizona and New Mexico of the boundary line. I stopped at Fort Marcy, New Mexico, for a while and took lessons in packing from a lot of packers that were there, and went on the surveying expedition with Lieutenant Wheeler, and later on took advantage of my return transportation to come back to Leavenworth, Kansas. I stayed at Leavenworth, Kansas, that winter, worked for Matt Ryan, the great pork packer in that town, and in the spring I took a train that was loaded with soldiers that was going out to Wichita, Kansas, to report to the Commander of that portion of the territory there for service against the Cheyennes and the Arapahoes, who had murdered a family called the Germain family.

Q. HOW long did you stay at Wichita? A. I stayed at Wichita about three months.

Q. And then what occupation did you take? What occupation did you have at Wichita? A. At Wichita I was waiter in a restaurant.

Q. And what occupation did you take in Wichita when you left there? A. I became acquainted at the hotel that I was waiting at with a man named Charles T. DuBois, who now lives in your city here. He at that time was a civilian contractor for surveying the Comanche Indian Reservation between the 98th and the 100th meridian and between the base line that was established in the Wichita Mountains and the Red River region. The 100th meridian is the boundary line between what is now Oklahoma State and the Panhandle of Texas.

Q. Did he give you a job? A. Yes, sir, he gave me a job.

Q. How old were you then? A. I was seventeen years old.

Q. What was your job? A. My job was that of extra man in camp.

Q. Yes. Where did you go with Mr. DuBois' surveying party? A. We went on foot from Wichita, Kansas, down to Fort Sill in the southern portion of the Indian Territory, and there we had headquarters established, with Mr. DuBois' draftsmen and compass men and his accountants, and that was our headquarters for surveying, which work lay west of Fort Sill.

Q. How long were you on that job? A. I was on that from September until May.

Q. Yes. And that brings us to what year? A. May, 1874.

Q. What did you undertake then, sir? A. I came back to Kansas with a bunch of horses that a man named George Shryck and I, a companion of mine, bought from the Comanche Indians. It was a bunch of horses that Lieutenant-Colonel McKenzie of the Fourth Cavalry had taken that method of breaking up continuous raiding on the inhabitants of northern Texas.

Q. Now did you sell those horses? A. Those horses we kept on the state line of Indian Territory and Kansas for several months breaking those that were unbroken, and we sold them out to the various farmers and preemptors who lived in that section of the country.

Q. What was the name of this man that you mentioned? A. Shryck, S-h-r-y-c-k.

Q. After that venture what did you do? What did you go into? A. After that venture we started to the Black Hills in Dakota with an outfit headed by Charles Cadora, a Mexican, who knew of gold up in that section of the country. It was just before the beginning of the Black Hills excitement.

Q. That was your first venture as a prospector? A. That was my first adventure as a real prospector.

Q. Yes. And where did you prospect, Mr. Doheny? I don't mean specifically. In what general country. A. Well, in Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, and various states in northern Old Mexico.

Q. Before you went to Los Angeles how long did you spend prospecting and mining in the West? A. Well, about eighteen years.

Q. About eighteen years. A. Maybe I can make a closer calculation if I——

Q. That is good enough, sir. Were you ever working at a place called Kingston, New Mexico? A. Yes, sir, Kingston, New Mexico, was a town established on some mines that Mr. Grady and myself discovered.

Q. Mr. Tom Grady that was on the stand here yesterday? A. Yes.

Q. When did you discover those? A. In 1880, on the 4th day of November, 1880, we located the first mine that was located in that portion of the Black Range.

Q. And its name was what? A. Miner's Dream.

Q. Miner's Dream. Mr. Doheny, how long did you stay at or in the vicinity of Kingston, New Mexico? A. About ten years.

Q. Was the town founded when you and Grady discovered this mine? A. No, sir.

Q. WAS the Kingston town founded while you were working there? A. Yes, sir, I helped to found the town. I was one of the founders of that town.

Q. Yes. And tell me again, how long did you stay at Kingston? A. About ten years.

Q. You of course know Mr. Albert B. Fall? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first meet him? A. I met him in 1886.

Q. Where? A. In Kingston.

Q. What were you doing then? A. I was the owner of some of the most prominent claims there, and was also the owner of the town site.

Q. What were you doing yourself? Were you mining? A. I was prospecting and mining all the while.

Q. What was Mr. Fall doing? A. Mr. Fall was working in the Gray Eagle mine.

Q. Gray Eagle mine, Mr. Doheny? A. On the South Branch.

Q. How large a place was Kingston at that time? A. Kingston had from five to seven thousand inhabitants.

Q. Was it a mining town at that time? A. Yes, sir, a typical mining town.

Q. And how long after Fall came there did you come to know him? A. Oh, probably three or four weeks.

Q. How long did you know him at Kingston? A. I knew him for about three years.

Q. What was he doing all the time he was there? A. He was at first working in the Gray Eagle mine. He worked there probably for a year and a half; and later on we had organized a new county out of that portion of the Territory of New Mexico, out of three different counties that adjoined close to that section, Grant County, Socorro County and Dona Ana, out of that we sliced a new county that we called Sierra County, that was organized, and Mr. Fall took an active part in it, and was one of the candidates for the Legislature.

Q. Was it State or Territorial Legislature? A. Territorial Legislature, from that county.

Q. You came to know him then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Fall teach school out there, do you know? A. I don't think he did in Kingston. I taught school in Kingston myself.

Q. You did? A. Yes.

Q. Was Grady with you at Kingston? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Doheny, did you take up the study of any profession while you were at Kingston? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell us about that, sir. A. I took up the study of law owing to the fact—not because I wanted to study law or expected ever to become a great counsel, but because I couldn't do anything else at the time. I fell down a shaft about 105 feet and broke both my legs, and while they were getting well I used my leisure time in reading Black's Commentaries and Kent's, and all the other—

Q. Blackstone's, I guess. A. Blackstone's, and all the other elementary books on the common law. New Mexico at that time was operating under the common law.

Q. Did you know Mr. Fall as a practitioner of law in New Mexico? A. Yes, sir, but not very well as a practitioner. He was a younger man than I was, and he had studied law before he came there, so I understood, and we didn't practice in the same—in the same section, we didn't study in the same section.

Q. You were both members of the Territorial bar? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you practice law for a little while in New Mexico? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. At Silver City, New Mexico, about fifty miles west of Kingston.

Q. WHERE did Mr. Fall practice? A. Well, at the same place, but his headquarters was at Las Cruces, in Dona Ana County.

Q. In those days did the counsel go from place to place in riding the circuit? A. The Territory was divided up into judicial districts at that time. I think there were four. I am not sure. But we were located, at any rate, in the Third Judicial District, which comprised Socorro County, Dona Ana County, Sierra County and Grant County. Possibly Lincoln County; I am not sure.

Q. I asked you, at that time did the lawyers ride the circuit from place to place? A. Yes, sir, the lawyers would. They went from place to place and held court.

Q. Yes. When you left Kingston, New Mexico, where did you go? A. When I left Kingston I went to Los Angeles, California.

Q. And at that time, before you left what were you engaged in, what business? A. I was engaged in mining.

Q. Had you been successful? A. Yes, oh, yes, sir.

Q. And when you went to Los Angeles were you a wealthy man? A. No, sir.

Q. Were you broke? A. I was practically broke, yes sir.

Q. You had discovered some mines and made some money, and other times didn't make money, is that it? A. Yes. Yes, my funds didn't come from the discovery of mines at that particular time. It came from the operation of lead mines, the values of which were destroyed by legislation here in Washington.

Q. I see. You arrived in Los Angeles about what time, Mr. Doheny? A. In 1890.

Q. And did you engage in any prospecting in Los Angeles? A. Not in Los Angeles, but outside of Los Angeles in San Bernardino County. Mr. Canfield, who had been in New Mexico, and who was the discoverer of the greatest bonanza that ever was struck in that Kingston district, had moved to Los Angeles before me. When I arrived there I met him, and he had some mines down on the desert. He called my attention to them, and I went in with him in the operation of those mines.

Q. He was another partner? A. Yes.

Q. You men called each other partners in those days? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went into prospecting then for hard minerals in the vicinity of San Bernardino? A. For gold.

Q. For gold. After making that venture did you come back to Los Angeles? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that a successful venture? A. The gold mining, yes.

Q. And you got back to Los Angeles about what time? A. I think—well, of course that was only a hundred and some odd miles out of Los Angeles. We used to go back and forth on the train quite frequently, but after we sold out of the mining business there we went back to Los Angeles and settled down there. He had a house and family living there, and I was stopping at a hotel, and that was in 1892.

Q. Now what did you do in Los Angeles? A. Well, in the fall of 1892, owing to the discovery of proper—of what seemed like indications, Mr. Canfield and I undertook the opening up of an oil field there.

Q. Where? A. Right near Westlake Park.

Q. In the city of Los Angeles? A. In the city of Los Angeles, yes, sir.

Q. What did you discover there? A. We discovered oil in commercial quantities, which resulted in the development of a strip of land from 600 to 700 feet in width and about 2 1-2 miles long in which were drilled 2700 wells and out of which was produced nearly 100,000,000 barrels of oil in three or four years.

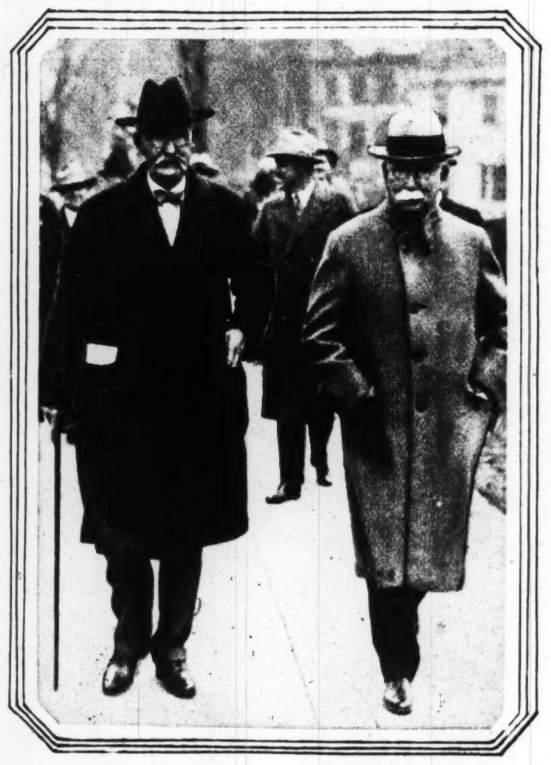
Q. WHO drilled the well that you discovered? A. Canfield and I sunk the first well there with a pick and shovel in that district. That was really my first discovery of a bonanza proposition, because the bonanza was not in the mineral that I discovered so much as it was in the idea of discovery.

Q. You say that Canfield and yourself instead of drilling dug your first oil well with a pick and shovel? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long were you in the oil business without interruption in Los Angeles, beginning with 1893? A. Until 1896.

Q. And then what did you do? A. Then I went into bankruptcy.

Q. Made an assignment? A. Made an assignment.



Albert B. Fall and Edward L. Doheny.

Q. That was in 1896. Where did you go then? A. I went outside the city of Los Angeles about 45 miles and opened up a new district.

Q. Where? A. Fullerton, when I opened it up.

Q. You say you opened up a new district. You mean that you went after oil again? A. Yes, sir; opened up a new oil district.

Q. How long were you working trying to bring in oil in what was known as the Fullerton district? A. I operated there in partnership with the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company for about two and a half to three years. Then I sold out my interest in the proposition to the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company.

Q. And went back to Los Angeles? A. No, sir. I always made Los Angeles my headquarters. These attempts to operate outside of Los Angeles was just reaching out because of the facility for traveling, while my headquarters were in Los Angeles.

Q. May I go back a little while with you, Mr. Doheny? In 1896 how old were you? A. In 1896 I was forty years old.

Q. AFTER selling out your interest in the Fullerton fields to the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company where next did you operate? A. In Bakersfield. I was practically the discoverer of the real values in Bakersfield, although there were some miners in there who had made the same sort of development I had made in Los Angeles. By digging a shaft down in the ground they discovered sufficient quantities to make me know they had discovered a bonanza, and I bought them out and started the Bakersfield oil field.

Q. From that time down what business have you been engaged in? A. Oil producing and prospecting.

Q. Where. A. At Bakersfield for about two and a half years and in the Midway country on the west side of San Joaquin Valley. I collected the largest amount of land of anybody at that time. Mr. Canfield and I were pioneers in the collecting. That is not very far from Elk Hills.

Q. Elk Hills where your oil wells are located? A. Yes, sir. In 1900 I went down to Mexico at the solicitation of a man who had been connected with the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company and who in coming out to California had found out that oil was being produced there in large quantities and that it was a very good locomotive fuel. He wanted to try and find it in Mexico, a country that had a very poor quality of coal and which had imported all their coal for locomotive uses.

Q. When you went into Mexico at the request of this railroad official, what did you go in to prospect for? A. For petroleum; for oil.

Q. Was oil being produced in Mexico in large quantities at that time? A. There was no oil being produced in Mexico at that time.

Q. Who discovered oil in Mexico? A. Mr. Canfield and myself might be called the discoverers.

Q. After discovering oil in Mexico, Mr. Doheny, did you organize any companies? A. Yes, sir; we organized the Mexican Petroleum Company of California.

Q. The first of a various number of companies all headed up in the Pan American Petroleum and Transport Company? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your discovery of oil in Mexico in its development turned out to be successful? A. Very much so. Mr. Wiley, who is here in the room, was our general manager during all the time we were developing down there, and he can give you a closer approximation of the oil that we produced, but it was something about $600,000,000 worth of barrels of oil.

Q. Produced in Mexico and marketed, I take it, throughout the world? A. Marketed principally on the Atlantic Coast.

Q. Of the United States? A. Yes; and for domestic purposes in Mexico. We sold very little oil in Europe.

Q. When did you organize, if you can recall the time, the Pan American Petroleum and Transport Company? A. In 1916.

Q. Did you organize any subsidiary of that company for operation in California? A. Yes, sir; the Pan American Petroleum Company.

Q. Have you any official connection with the Pan American Petroleum and Transport Company now? A. None except as a stockholder.

Q. I said any official connection. A. No official connection.

Q. You are neither an officer nor a director now? A. No, sir.

Q. When did you terminate your official connection with that company? A. In April, 1925.

Q. WHAT oil company, if any, are you officially connected with, actively connected with, at the present time? A. The Pan-American Petroleum Company.

Q. Is that owned by the Transport Company? A. No, sir; that is owned now by the Pan American Western Petroleum Company.

Q. Organized by you and your associates? Is that right? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Doheny, after you went to California, did you continue to know Mr. Fall? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you come in contact with Mr. Fall when he was Senator of the United States? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Previous to that time what did you know of his public career? A. Well, I had known of it in a general way. Mr. Fall became associated with an old-time prospecting friend of mine known as Bill Greene who discovered the Greene Cananea Copper mines of Sonora that are among the greatest copper mines in the world. Fall's association with him brought them both to my attention as such matters are brought to the attention of an old-time prospector, and I kept in touch with his career as Judge on the bench and afterwards United States Senator.

Q. As Attorney-General of his State? A. As Attorney-General of his State. I used to pass through New Mexico on my way back from New York to California and California to New Mexico, and the turning point we used to stop at was Albuquerque, which was really one of the central points of New Mexico, and there I always got a history of the country, at Albuquerque, as we went through, and in that way I kept in touch with Senator Fall and a great many other friends that I knew in New Mexico.

Q. When he was Senator of the United States did you have contact with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he visiting out in Los Angeles at that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. With his family? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you at that time have any particular interest in any work that Mr. Fall was engaged in? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell us of it. A. He was chairman of a committee appointed by the Senate for investigating the Mexican relations in some way or other. I do not know the name of it, but the committee was composed of Senator Fall, Senator Brandegee of Rhode Island——

Q. Connecticut? A. Connecticut; and Senator Mark Smith of Arizona. I knew Mark Smith and I knew Senator Fall very well from olden days and they called upon me as a witness before their committee, and I think I spent a day or two or three days—I do not know how many days—on the stand telling them what I knew about Mexico, and the records of that committee were of very great interest to me because they contained a complete history of the American relations with Mexico, of the growth of American influence in Mexico and of its decline afterwards, and I was interested in this decline which was the thing, of course, which the committee was investigating.

Q. And with which you were vitally interested? A. Yes; I was vitally interested in it because our company was the largest property owners in Mexico, the largest taxpayers that Mexico had ever had, and we were, of course, subject to the cupidity of everybody who held reins of government who thought they could enrich themselves at the cost of those who they thought had more than they needed.

Q. In 1917, while we were engaged in the World War, did you come to Washington for any purpose? A. Yes, sir.

Q. WHAT were you doing here at that time? A. Well, in the spring of 1917 I first sent a telegram to the President before war was declared, but believing that war was about to be declared on account of the action of the German emissaries of this country, saying to him that as petroleum was greatly needed and as we had a certain number of ships in operation on the seas we would be very glad to offer to him the use of our ships and our petroleum for war service purposes. In June, 1917—I think it was June—Acting Secretary Franklin Roosevelt called a meeting of the various oil men in Washington city for the purpose of getting for the use of the United States Government the actual tonnage that was available from the various companies. I wired to Mr. Wiley, who was then in New York and who responded to the call of Secretary Roosevelt, telling him to renew my offer that was made in the spring. He did so and our ships were all taken.

Q. That is, you turned over your ships to the Government? A. Yes, sir. I came here then because of that to see why they did not take our oil with our ships, because to take our ships without our oil was impoverishing the company to a greater extent than I thought his officers had any authority to do, and I was quite a long while here in that connection. My son and his wife and children moved to Washington and I wanted to be near them. So my wife and I came to Washington and we remained here quite a while.

Q. Did you serve on any council or committee during the war? A. I was a member of the National War Service Committee during the war.

Q. Did you have any connection with the Council of National Defense? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you render that service? A. In New York City.

Q. When you were here during that period of time did you see Senator Fall? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And visit with him? A. Very frequently.

Q. At that time—I am now talking about the time when you and Mr. Fall were in contact with each other during the war—what in general, without details, was the subject matter you discussed with him? A. Usually matters concerning the necessities of war and the necessity of protecting Americans in Mexico against the incursions or against the rapacity of the Mexicans down there who thought they could destroy Americans in Mexico while the United States was occupied on the other side of the Atlantic, and which they did accomplish to an enormous extent.

Q. Did you have any talks with Mr. Fall during your contacts with him while you were here during the war periods about old days? A. Yes, sir; we talked about the Greene Cananea and the Greene Gold and Silver and various prospecting enterprises that he was engaged in.

Q. Did you and Mr. Fall know persons of any note or notoriety in New Mexico in the old days? A. Did we know them?

Q. Yes. A. Oh, yes; we knew everybody of note and some of notoriety.

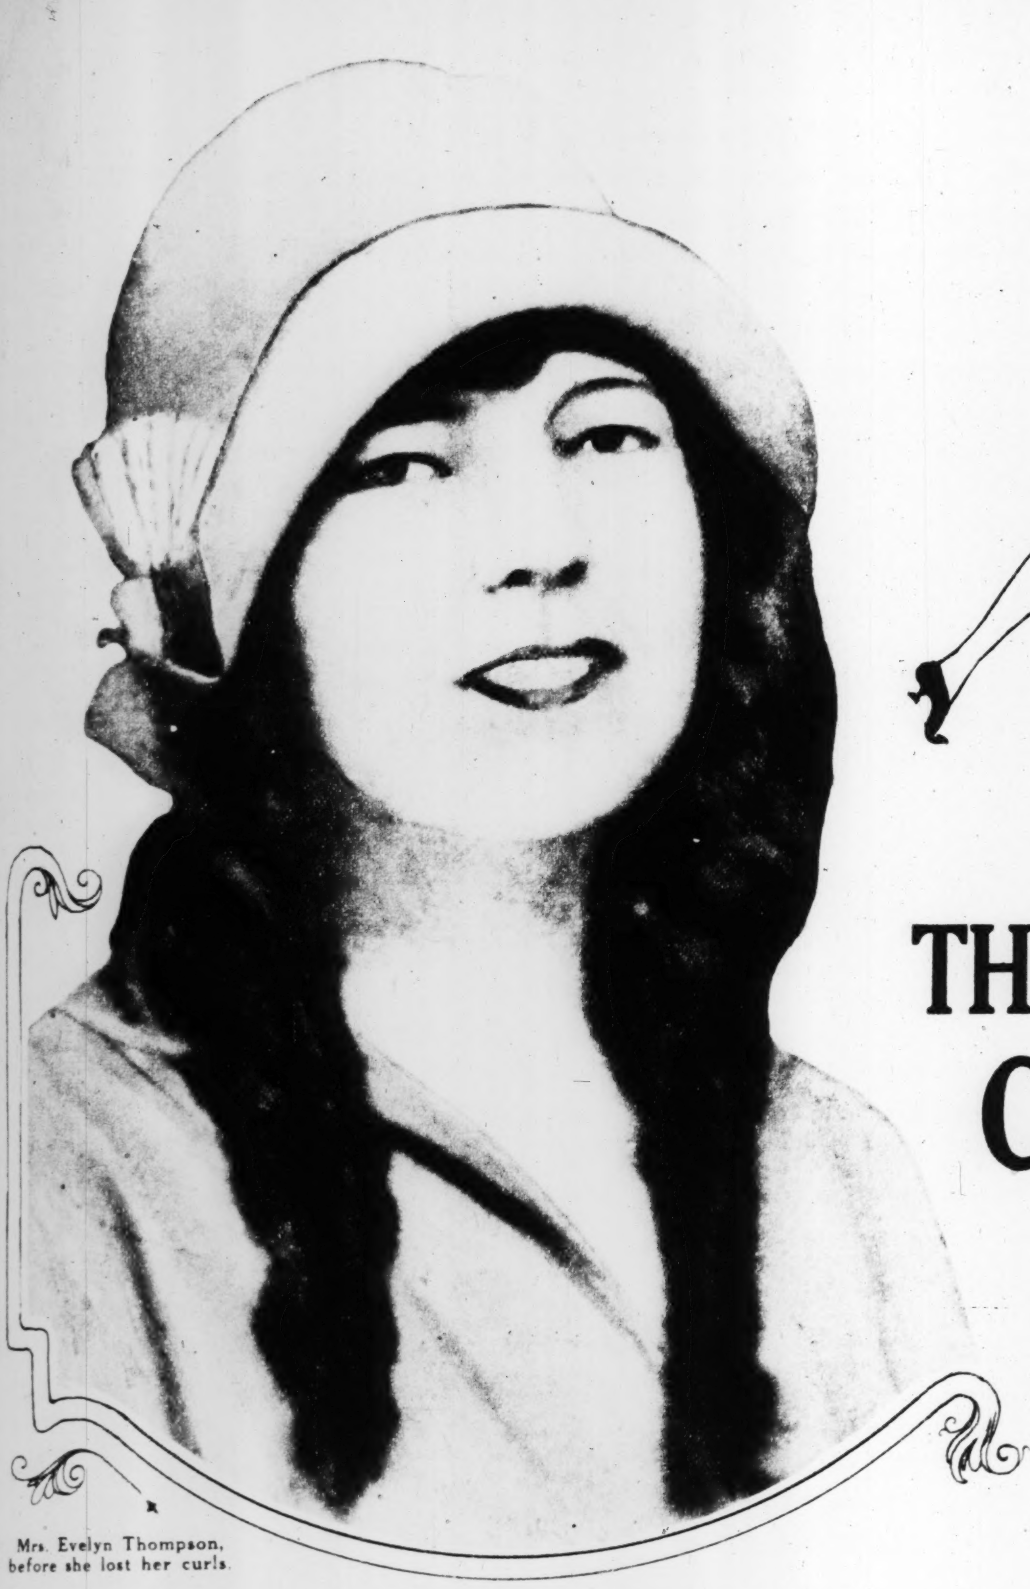
Q. And in your contacts with him here when you came together were those characters and those people brought back to you? A. Always, yes sir.

Later counsel asked:

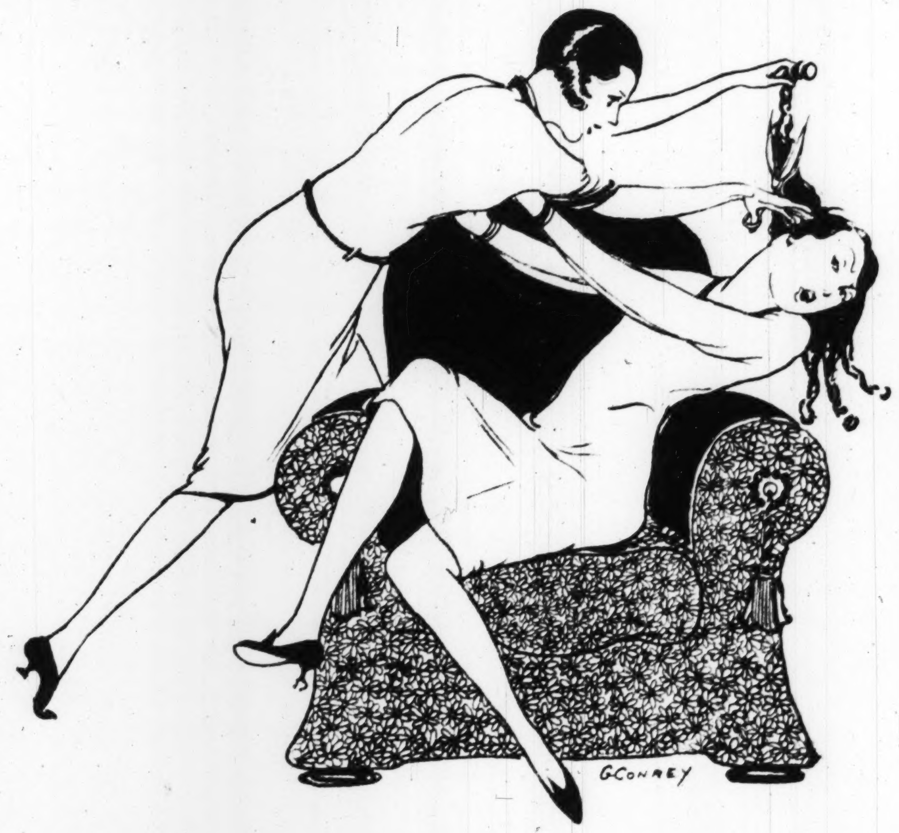
Q. Now, Mr. Doheny, I want to take up the personal transaction between Mr. Fall and yourself. You loaned Mr. Fall some money? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much did you loan him? A. One hundred thousand dollars.

Q. When did you loan it to him? A. On the last day of November, I think, in 192—. Mr. Doheny then went into the details of that now celebrated transaction.

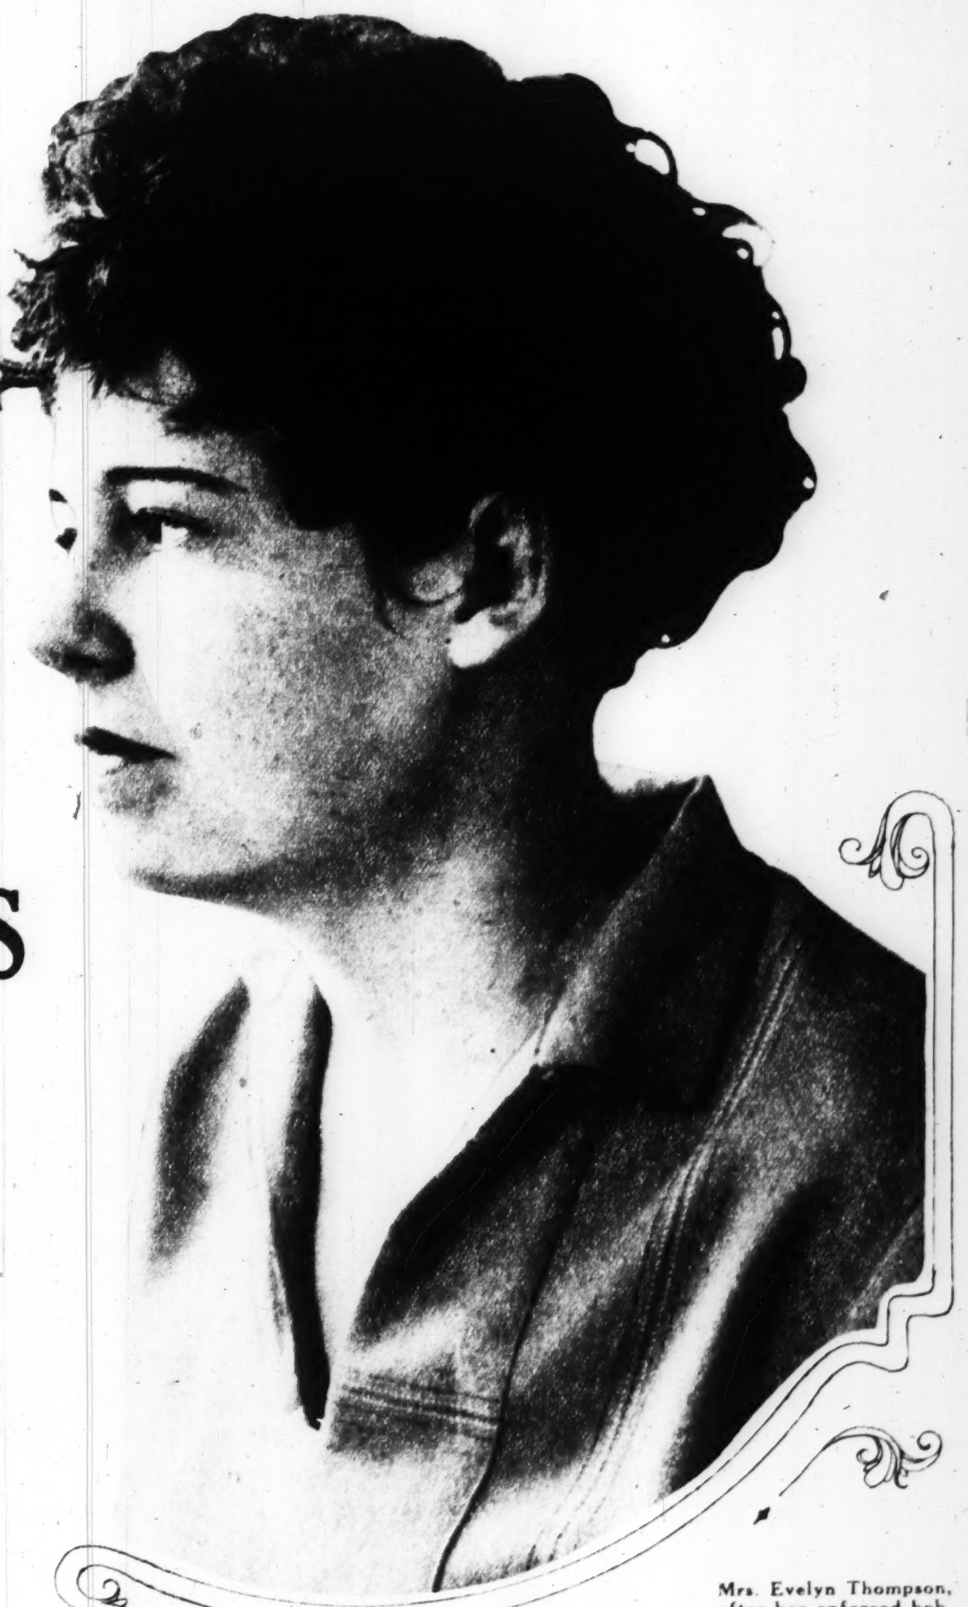


Mrs. Evelyn Thompson, before she lost her curls.



THE TOWN BEAUTY'S Compulsory Bob

What Happened When Mrs. Lucille Raulston Got Tired of Hearing Her Husband and Other Men Paying Compliments to Young Mrs. Evelyn Thompson's Long, Twisting Curls.



Mrs. Evelyn Thompson, after her enforced bob.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

WHITTIER, California.

EVELYN THOMPSON was a bit more than 20. Just how much more the writer does not know, but so slightly more than 20 that it would have been rude to ask her. She had large brown eyes, hair of auburn falling about her neck in twisting curls, a husband, a little boy and an automobile. She was fascinating, so fascinating that there was not one gentleman in Whittier who wouldn't admit it, and not one woman who would. She was charming, but she did not use her charms to take advantage of her sisters; she lived her life so faultlessly that not even her husband suspected her complete charm.

This Mrs. Thompson dressed well; she wore clothes that fitted well to her round and nicely modeled self. She wore a little hat that tipped over her ear and half concealed one of those large brown eyes. And she had hair of auburn falling about her neck in twisting curls.

She was a distinctive person. Her pretty face, her brown eyes, her clothes, her hat, her pleasant manner and the hair that wasn't bobbed. Hair worn so utterly different, so childlike, that she would have appeared something out of the ordinary even 10 years ago. And now, of course, she was entirely different.

It is no wonder, then, that the good husbands of Whittier, on seeing Mrs. Thompson appear over the horizon in her modest automobile, were prone to turn about and give at least a second look. It is said that some gave a third and a fourth, and it wouldn't be surprising if some gave even more than that. It was not uncommon upon the streets of Whittier to hear some man exclaim that "there is a pretty woman." There are 10,000 persons in Whittier, and Mrs. Thompson would have stood an excellent chance of being chosen the best-looking girl in town, providing Whittier had held a beauty contest and Mrs. Thompson had entered it.

SUCH acclaim for one woman is not particularly conducive to her high popularity with the rest of the women of her town. Mrs. Thompson's case was no exception. Neither was Lucille Raulston's. It didn't especially please Mrs. Raulston, whose hair was bobbed, and whose age was 30, to hear her husband say that Evelyn was a "darn pretty young woman" and he liked the way she wore her hair. Nor did it especially please Florence Nutt to listen to her husband, H. J. Nutt, remark how good-looking was Evelyn Thompson and what pretty hair she had. And Florence Nutt was 32 and her hair was bobbed.

There was something else, too, that didn't sit so well with the ladies. When Mrs. Thompson was asked, as she often was, why she had never bobbed her hair, she replied: "I don't want to bob my hair! I don't want to look like a flapper. I don't think the mother of a little boy 4 years old ought to bob her hair. Besides, bobbing is so common. And I don't think Jeff would be pleased." Jeff was Mr. Thompson, and Mr. Thompson was in the employ of an oil company.

Evelyn Thompson strode on in all her glory. At the dances her popularity was so apparent; never did she sit out a dance; always were there several men bidding for her hand. Mrs. Raulston noted this; she noted that her husband got his share of dances with Evelyn Thompson. But that is all she noted, for that seems about all there was to note.

So Evelyn Thompson and Florence Nutt and Lucille Raulston, all in the same set, seemingly were the best of friends. They were even considered a bit clubby. When they met they exchanged those salutations of endearment which women who are supposed to like each other usually exchange. They visited with one another; fond they seemed to be of one another's company.

Mrs. Florence Nutt.

It was not surprising, then, that a couple of weeks ago, as Evelyn Thompson was driving home from a shopping expedition, Lucille Raulston, seeing her pass her residence, should have called out to her and asked her to stop a moment and come in and visit with her and Florence Nutt, who chanced to be at the Raulston home.

"Come on in, Evelyn, dear," cried Lucille, as Evelyn stopped her car. "Come on in and talk to us for a few minutes."

"I'm on my way home," Evelyn called back. "I've been shopping and I must get home."

"Oh, you can stop for a minute or two," replied Lucille, "so come on in and see us."

SO EVELYN wheeled her car to the curb lined with palms and pepper trees, and out she got, carrying a small bundle, and into Lucille's house she went.

"I just bought some stockings," said Evelyn. "I think they're pretty. Do you care if I try them on?"

Lucille told her of course she didn't. They walked into the living room and Evelyn sat down, opened the package containing the sheer hosiery, and was just removing a slipper when she heard the lock of the front door click. She looked up. Before her stood Lucille. The smile on that lady's face was gone.

Lucille spoke very slowly and very decidedly.

"You have flirted with my husband long enough," she said. "I am going to fix you so no man will ever stop to look at you again."

At least, that is what Evelyn says happened.

"Why, who on earth do you mean?" she asked. "I haven't been flirting with your husband, or anybody else's husband."

Near where Lucille Raulston stood was a table. On that table were the usual books, a vase, a sewing basket and a pair of nickel-plated shears. Evelyn glanced hurriedly at the door leading to a bedroom; she glanced quickly toward the door leading to the kitchen. Lucille Raulston blocked her way to both.

"I haven't been flirting with your husband, Lucille," Evelyn cried. "I never did it in all my life, Lucille. I never flirted with anybody's husband, and you ought to know it."

"I don't know anything of the kind," said Lucille.

And this is what Evelyn sobbed to her husband a short while after:

"It was almost over, Jeff, before I knew what had happened. Lucille ran at me, the shears in her hand. She caught some of my hair. Then she cut it, and four of my curls came off. Then Florence Nutt grabbed me and held me and Lucille cut off the other five curls. 'You used to be the center of attraction,' she yelled, 'didn't you?' No one will ever look at you again when I'm through.'

"While she was cutting my hair the point of the scissors cut me in the neck. The scissors cut my ear. I fought with them, but they held me. They had me locked in, too. Then when they were through, they let me go and I ran."

She sobbed and sobbed and ran her fingers over the stubs of the auburn curls that once had fallen about her pretty neck.

YES, it was a very sorry looking Evelyn who ran out of Lucille Raulston's home, an Evelyn whose curls were gone, a cut in her neck, and no curls to conceal it or the wound in her ear from which blood was dripping, cuts in the palms of her hands, cuts that bled and caused everything she touched to turn crimson. It was a very sorry looking young woman who stumbled, crying, to her car, and drove quickly to her home.

It doesn't take long for news to spread in a little place like Whittier. Before long everybody knew that Evelyn Thompson had lost her curls and that they hadn't been cut off in a barber shop.

Then came the warrants. They were sworn out for Lucille Raulston and Florence Nutt, and these ladies were duly taken before the City Recorder, charged with assault and battery.

The courtroom, just as you might suspect, was crowded to something over its capacity when the accused women entered. And every one stared at the pretty, brown-eyed girl whose pretty curls were no more. Evelyn was scarcely recognizable. And it wasn't shame that one saw upon her face; it was indignation, and much of it.

Indignation and sorrow, too. For now she was just another one of the bobbed-haired girls.

The Judge took his seat. He called his court to order. He ordered the charges read.

"Guilty," Lucille Raulston promptly replied.

"Not guilty," answered Florence Nutt.

The Court decided to hear the evidence in the case before passing sentence.

The doctor who had dressed the wounds on Evelyn's neck and ear and hands testified. The hair dresser who had trimmed the slashed curls testified. Evelyn had her say. Then came Mrs. Raulston to the stand. She took the blame for the whole business. Florence Nutt, she said, had done nothing but look on. Florence hadn't had anything to do with it.

"Why, she didn't hold Evelyn at all," said Lucille. And Florence Nutt said she hadn't, too.

But Evelyn Thompson disputed it. And she added: "I guess they even burnt my hair after I ran away. The policeman couldn't find it."

WHITTIER gossiped and buzzed and gossiped and buzzed some more. The women who had bobbed their hair and wished they hadn't took sides with her. Such elderly women as there were who had not succumbed to the short-haired fad took sides with her. Young women who had bobbed and who thought they looked a great deal better with their hair bobbed were dead against her. Those who resented her remark that she didn't want to look like a flapper were quite as dead against her. But the men, ah, the men, were for her in a solid body.

Then one day came the report that something was about to happen. Evelyn was seen entering the office of the District Attorney at Los Angeles. She was in there a long time. When she came out her brown eyes flashed defiantly. It wasn't long before an officer of the District Attorney's office was speeding toward Whittier. Once arrived there, he went to the Whittier police. He delivered to them a legal-looking document.

A few minutes later a policeman knocked on the door of the Raulston home. There was no answer. He knocked again. No answer. He made inquiries among the neighbors.

"Mr. Raulston," the neighbors told him, "has gone to India. He is going to drill wells for an oil company there."

"Where," the officer wanted to know, "is Mrs. Raulston? Mrs. Lucille Raulston?"

But the neighbors didn't know, and the officer couldn't find anyone who did. So he took himself to the home of Florence Nutt. Florence Nutt he found.

"I have a warrant for your arrest," he said. "They want you in Los Angeles?"

"What have I done?" asked Mrs. Nutt.

"You," said the policeman, "are charged with mayhem—with wilfully disfiguring a person."

And he read the document accusing Florence of having aided in the assault upon Evelyn and cutting off her auburn curls. Then the policeman took Florence to the county jail in Los Angeles, and there she spent the night awaiting arraignment in court. Her bail was fixed at $2000.

AND the authorities then resumed the search for Lucille Raulston. In fact they are still searching. For, according to report, "she has gone to India. She is going to join her husband in the oil fields."

When mayhem was charged against Florence Nutt, the lesser charge of assault and battery against her was dropped. For if one is convicted of mayhem it means from one to fourteen years in the penitentiary.

While they await the date of the trial, the good people of Whittier are threshing out the case, quite unofficially, of course, for themselves. Just how enormous is this crime, they ask. With women all over the world bobbing their hair, has Evelyn been seriously damaged by the shearing of her locks? Isn't it just as good that she appear at dances and at parties with her hair just like everybody's? Wouldn't she, in that way, attract less attention than if her hair fell in twisty curls down her neck?

What has Evelyn got to say about it all?

"I don't," she says, "know why any one should be jealous of me. Particularly Florence and Lucille. Why, we've gone to the same parties and dances, we've had the same friends, we've been such good friends; why, we've almost been chums. They bobbed their hair, but I told them I wouldn't because I didn't want to be a flapper.

"I'm sorry that some women seem to think it's so awful to be a little bit old-fashioned. I rather enjoy it, somehow or other."

So we know what Evelyn thinks about it, what Lucille thinks about it, what, perhaps, Florence thinks about it, what the men of Whittier think about it. And what the women of Whittier think about it. And before very long we ought to know what the State of California thinks about it.

KENTUCKY'S SHRINE OF TOLERANCE—THE "RACE HORSE" CHURCH

When the Rev. Dr. Thomas L. Settle Helped Prevent Repeal of the State Law Permitting Pari-Mutuel Betting at the Track the Grateful Horsemen Tried to Reward Him. He Wouldn't Accept a Gift, So They Built Him a Church Costing $170,000.

LEXINGTON Kentucky.

JUST over the hill from Henry Clay's old home on Lexington's main street it stands, the shrine of tolerance — the church that the race horse built. By reason of its origin it is a church unique among churches. Officially, its name is the Church of the Good Shepherd, Episcopal. The Rev. Dr. Thomas L. Settle, the rector, calls it the "Church for Sinners," and some effort is observed on the part of the congregation to fix its identity as "The Little Church on the Corner." But none of these names has become popular in the three months since its completion. Around Lexington the man in the street has learned to identify it as the "Race Horse Church," and if you ask about it under that heading he knows at once what you mean.

"Oh yes," he will say. "That's the new one up at the corner of East Main street and Bell Court. Just finished a little while back. It's not so much from the street, but you ought to take a look inside. Stop in if you are going up that way."

Up Main street in an aristocratic section of the city you find it just as he said, "not so much from the street." It looks about like any other church erected to fit the needs of a congregation of 300 or 400 in a city of some 50,000 inhabitants. No lofty spires arise to carry up the gaze toward the clouds. The tower reaches scarcely to the tops of adjacent trees. No massive arched doorways are there to inspire the entering communicant with awe. The doorway, it is true, is gracefully arched, but it isn't massive, high or awe-inspiring. Built of bluish white limestone, the whole structure suggests solidity, modesty and comfort rather than magnificence.

But inside there is magnificence. You observe that here is an edifice out of the ordinary the moment you enter the door. Its grace of architecture, the richness of its furnishings, its score or more of elaborate wood carvings, all executed on special order by Anton Lang, the "Christus" of Oberammergau, combine to produce an effect of beauty not encountered in any other church of its size in the land. And that statement is made on better authority than this writer's. No other church in Lexington can boast of such masterpieces of the wood-carver's art. One piece alone would do credit to any cathedral in America. That is "The Last Supper," faithfully copied in hard oak from Leonardo da Vinci's famous painting. It is a massive piece, more than 8 feet long which rests in the rheredos back of the altar. Of scarcely less distinction are the panels extending around the walls of the sanctuary, depicting scenes and incidents in the life of Christ. There are also the figures representing the Four Gospels which stand on pedestals about the pulpit; the figures of angels on the choir stalls, the figures "Supplication" and "Meditation" which support the Litany desk.

THE casual visitor unacquainted with the history of Dr. Settle's Church for Sinners might marvel at the richness of this place of worship. It seems an unusual property for a small congregation of modest circumstances which for years has been unable to afford a church at all and has been forced to hold services in a parish community house, a congregation whose pastor has been for the last seven years the lowest paid white minister in Lexington. How was this handsome structure, of which any wealthy congregation might be proud, achieved in a space of a little more than two years? A bronze tablet which rests in the wall of the tower vestibule greeting the visitors as they enter tells the story. Its inscription is this:

> TO THE GLORY OF GOD
> This church is given to Him by the lovers of the horse from all over the country as a token of appreciation of their Father's goodness to His children —Man.

The horsemen will tell one that Dr. Settle saved horse racing for Kentucky and therefore saved the industry of thoroughbred horse raising which has made the State famous for the last century.

Dr. Settle himself is more modest about it. He refuses to admit that the church was even built for him specifically.

"A few years ago," he explains, "there was before the Kentucky Legislature a bill to banish the pari-mutuel system of betting from all race tracks in the State. Understand I am not a defender of gambling in any form. I think it is all evil and should be done away with as rapidly as possible. But I think the pari-mutuel system is the lesser of two evils. Its abolition would certainly have meant the return of the bookmaker and much worse conditions than already prevailed. Therefore, in performance of what I considered to be my duty in the interest of public morals, I made two or three speeches against the bill and in that way aided the cause of the horsemen. At least they said I aided them. Anyway, the bill was defeated. The horsemen were grateful and wanted to do something for me. Of course, I couldn't accept anything personally but I told them they might do whatever they chose to do for the glory of God. So they opened a fund campaign, raised $185,000 and built this church and rectory."

IT was in the spring of 1924 that the Kentucky horsemen won, with Dr. Settle's aid, their memorable fight to save horse racing. The fund was started immediately afterward. It grew out of a fund at first suggested for the building of a rectory. The rectory fund of $14,000 came so quickly that the church idea then took hold. Contributions poured in from horse owners, horse lovers and racing fans from every State. One prominent horseman gave $15,000, with the understanding that his name should never become known. Another gave $10,000. There were several gifts of $5000 and offerings of $2500 were numerous. The contributions ranged from these high figures down to $2, the smallest received, and they represented more than 300 givers.

Neither Dr. Settle nor his congregation, as such, had any part in the campaign. It was conducted entirely by a committee of horsemen representing the Thoroughbred Horse Association. Its members were C. H. Berryman, owner of the Saghonet Farm near Lexington; Major Thomas Clay McDowell, owner of the Ashland Farm; Arthur B. Hancock, owner of the Claiborne and Ellerslie Farms at Paris, Kentucky; Hal Price Headley, owner of the Beaumont Farm, near Lexington, and Thomas B. Cromwell, secretary of the association. Besides conducting the campaign, this committee handled all of the financial matters connected with the church building. They engaged the architect, made the contract with the furnishing concern which procured the Lang carvings and carried the entire undertaking to completion. Work of assembling material was begun in the spring of 1925, and by the fall of 1926 they turned over to Dr. Settle and his flock the finished product with its furnishings complete. Building and furnishings had cost approximately $170,000 and the rectory, a handsome two-story brick residence a few blocks away cost $14,000. Virtually all of this has been subscribed and paid in. Only a few more pledges remain to be collected.

Secretary Cromwell, who, officially, represents the opinion of some 1000 prominent horsemen of the country, is convinced it was the rector's stand in the face of criticism by the reformers and other ministers which saved racing and the thoroughbred horse-raising industry for the State.

"The reformers," he said, "had set out to stop pari-mutuel betting, but all racing men know that racing on a scale sufficient to maintain the horse-breeding industry cannot be supported except by betting. To take away the pari-mutuels would be either to drive away race-track patronage or to bring back the bookmaker. Dr. Settle took the stand that there would be betting anyway and that the pari-mutuels were more desirable than the bookmaker. He made speeches both here and before the Legislature and the bill was defeated. He refused to accept gifts various horsemen offered to him, even a new Stutz car, so we had to do something for the congregation.

"We are proud of the church now, and so is all Lexington. The congregation has grown by leaps in the last year. Here before the building has been open three months the need for larger quarters is actually in sight. The auditorium has a seating capacity of 500, but Dr. Settle packs the place every Sunday, and among the new attendants are many racehorse men who hadn't been to church before in years. It is also attracting many society people."

Dr. Settle denies that the "Church of the Good Shepherd" is a society church. He declares it's a church for sinners, and that means everybody. Rich or poor, they are all welcome. Of the young people he is most fond and they reciprocate. Until the war he had a son of his own, Jack, he was called. One of the 11 stained glass windows in the new church was placed there in his memory.

ONLY for the last 14 years has Dr. Settle been a minister, and of these 14 he has spent seven in Lexington, holding services in the old community house, which is now used for Sunday School quarters. He came to Lexington from Middlesboro and he went to Middlesboro from New York, where he wasn't a minister at all, but an accountant. He doesn't like to say much about his life in England, but the facts are that he was born there in Lancastershire a little more than 50 years ago and served as a Captain in the South African war. Being an Englishman, he naturally got his share of pleasure out of the races in his early life and, it is said, had occasion to make acquaintance with the methods of the bookmakers. Whether his attitude toward gambling is based on observation or personal experience, however, he has this to say about it and about the bill he fought against before the Kentucky Legislature:

Close-up of one of the four carved figures around the pulpit representing the Four Gospels, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. This is the figure of Luke.

"A bill presented by the people will not stop gambling," he declares. "All it will do is to take it out of its legalized phase. I believe it is impossible to correct ills of a moral nature by legislation. A law disapproved in the hearts of people is more likely to be broken than kept. We have too many laws like this already. We do not want another.

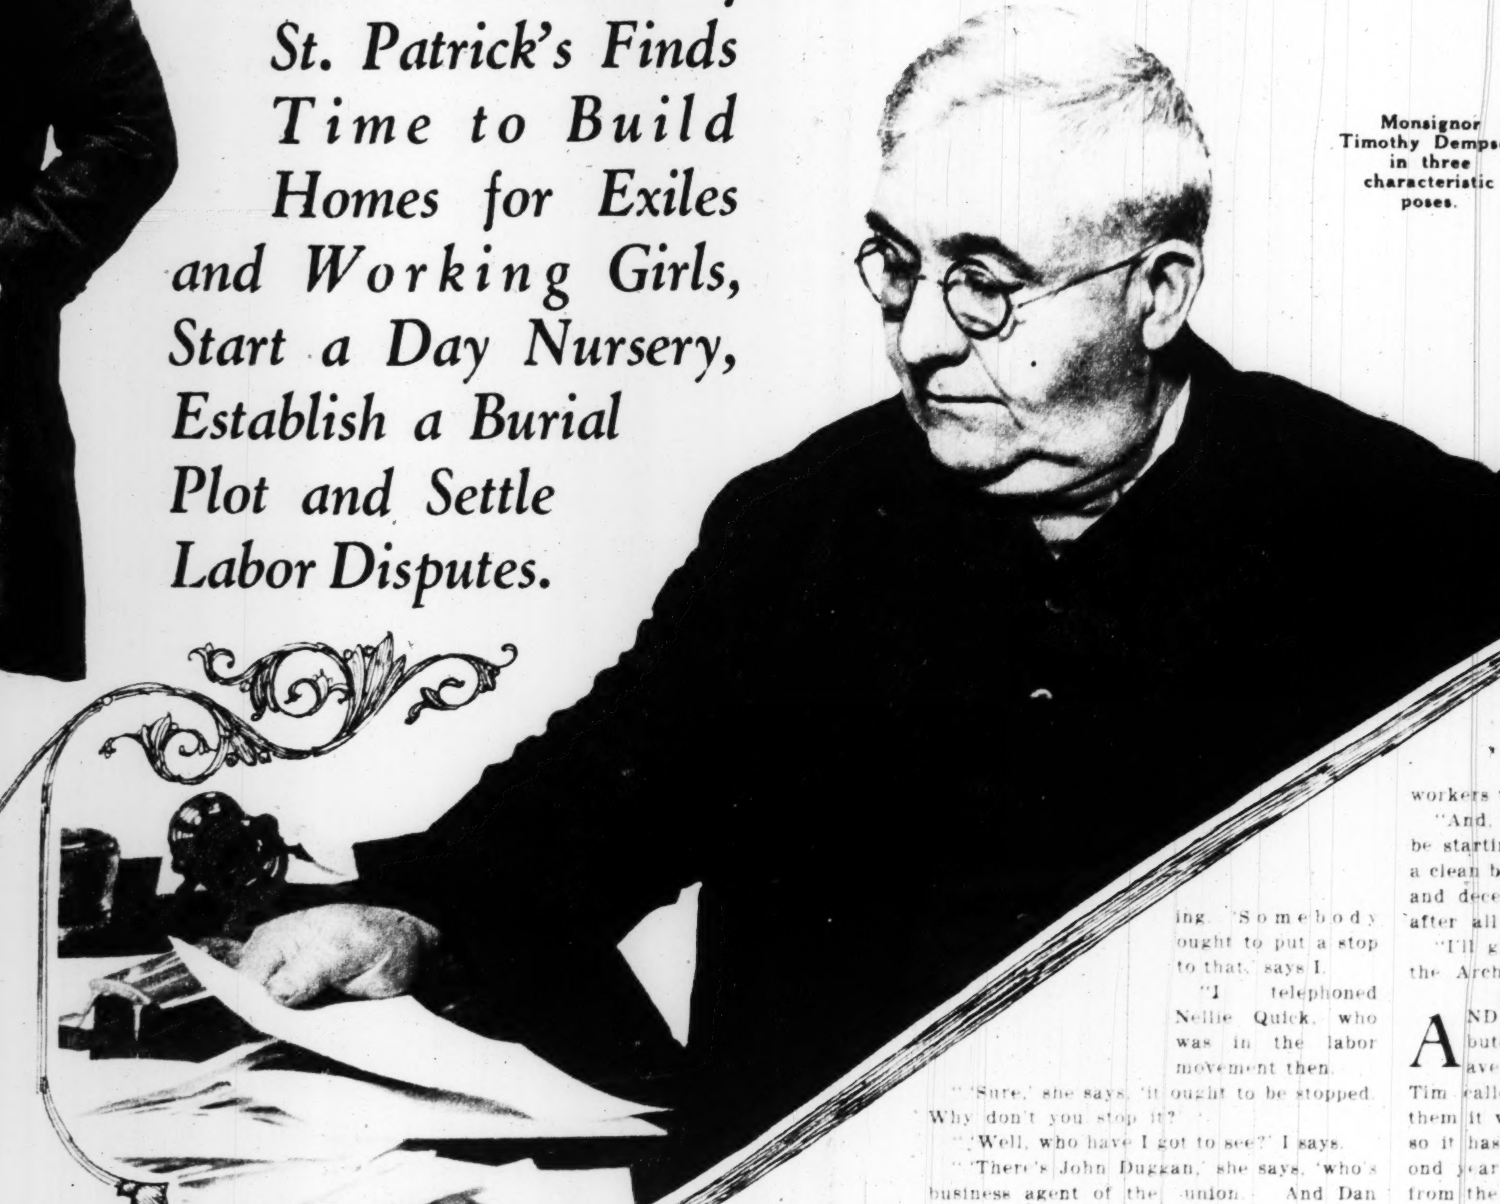
"PERSONALLY, I am opposed to all forms of gambling, but since it cannot be stopped then the next best thing to do is to make gambling as difficult as possible, and keep it under regulation. Under the pari-mutuel system, it is difficult. In the first place the betting is done in a machine at the track. The bettor, therefore, must go to the track in order to bet. In the second place, betting is on a cash basis. He must put up the cash before he can lose it. That makes it impossible to plunge into debt by betting on credit.

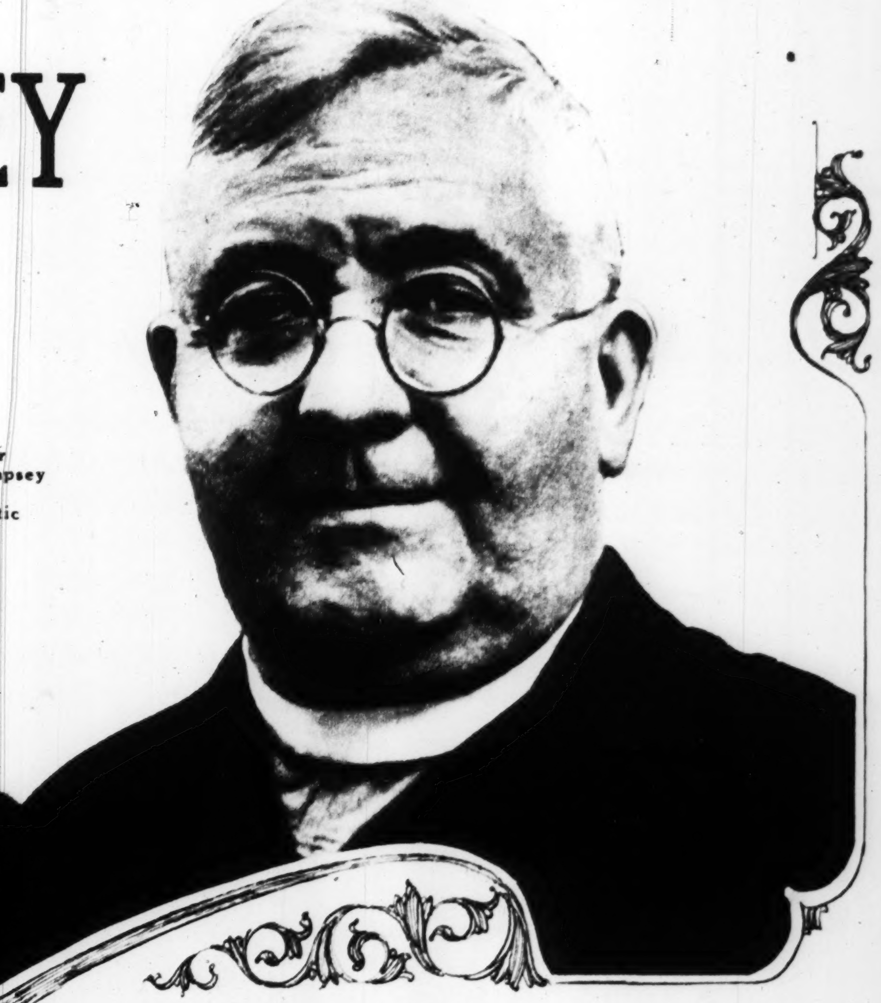
"I am afraid if the pari-mutuels are taken from our race tracks it will mean the return of the bookmaker. In fact, I am sure, because it has been borne out by past experience that this will make the situation very much worse than it is. With the bookmaker the crooked owner can bet that his horse will lose. You can't do that with the pari-mutuels. In other words, if this law permitting the pari-mutuels is repealed it will make it possible for the people to be abused a great deal more than they are now."

This fairly well summarizes Dr. Settle's stand on race-track gambling, as he outlined it to me and as he outlined it to the Kentucky legislators in the spring of 1924. If certain other ministers are inclined to scoff at his "Race Horse" church and hint that it is an edifice builded upon the sand, their attitude disturbs him not at all. He has no apologies to make. The rapid growth of his congregation tells a story of its own. That growth is not to be explained as due merely to curiosity. It appears that many have found something more in Dr. Settle's church than a new and handsome place to worship. There is reason to believe that they have really found in it a shrine of tolerance.

The Policies of FATHER TIM DEMPSEY

How the Priest of St. Patrick's Finds Time to Build Homes for Exiles and Working Girls, Start a Day Nursery, Establish a Burial Plot and Settle Labor Disputes.





Monsignor Timothy Dempsey in three characteristic poses.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

THE two boys had chased the chickens, shied rocks at the pigs and raced dogs up and down the little lane that was Main street of the village of Cadamstown, which is in King's County, Ireland. Those were everyday things. Now they looked about for some real fun. Michievous imps were the two of them. Joe McAllister's parents were ardent Protestants. Tim Dempsey's were pious Catholics. But the boys were neither ardent nor pious. Of the hundred souls who lived in Cadamstown probably 98 thought of those inseparable lads as "limbs of Satan." The other two were the mothers of the boys.

That was long, long ago. How small was the boy you may know by the fact that Monseignor Dempsey at 13 years was studying for the priesthood. "Do you know," he said suddenly, "if one of us is lucky enough to be a little better than the other fellow he ought to get down on his knees and thank God for keeping him out of temptation."

And after a few minutes he said, "I've never met a mean man yet."

And with those words one was admitted into the very sanctuary of Father Dempsey's heart.

"I AM a man," said the Roman playwright, Terrance, "and nothing that's human is alien to me."

"There," said Fletcher of Saltoun, as he saw a reeling drunkard, "there, but for the grace of God, go I."

"Not till the sun excludes you," chanted Walt Whitman, "will I exclude you."

The priest of St. Patrick's, in his wisdom comprehends them all. "I never met a mean man yet."

On October 21, 1867, Timothy Dempsey was born—the year of the Fenian uprising. By the cut of his jib, by the bone of his body, you can see that he might have been either a pugilist, a patriot or a priest, depending on whether the heart of him was all for himself, all for his country or all for humanity. He was the oldest of eight boys and four girls—12 children. A youngster, full of animal spirits and mischief, and thoughtless heedless fun. Probably the little town smiled when it knew that his pious parents had destined their eldest son for the priesthood. Young Tim Dempsey went to the National School for three years, at Mullingar, and then for a year at Navan College, and for seven years after that the seminary at Carlow College. In June, 1891, he was ordained to the priesthood—already destined by the Mother Church for the Archdiocese of St. Louis.

This broth of a boy came to St. Louis in September of 1891, big, upstanding, two-fisted, deep-chested and muscled like a wrestler. An athlete every inch of him, who in college had had a great name for handball. And the Archbishop sent him out to the country, giving him a tiny parish on Indian Creek, near Moberly, Missouri. There he stayed for a little while, and afterward was sent as assistant to Father McKenna at Moberly, to be, later, brought to St. Louis as assistant at Holy Angels' Church, at Fourteenth and La Salle streets. The city fascinated this country boy, who still wasn't much more than a boy in years and spirits. And of all the city, St. Patrick's parish fascinated him most. "If I could just get transferred over there," he said to himself, "I'd be glad to stay till I died." Not as pastor, mind you. He wasn't ambitious. He'd have stayed on as an assistant, forever, just to be with these people of his.

A great parish. From the river it runs westward to Eleventh street. From Franklin avenue north to Cass. Lots of Irish there were, still remaining. The Italians, the Bohemians, the Poles were just creeping in. The young assistant at Holy Angels found a barber somewhere in St. Patrick's parish so he might have an excuse for coming over from the South Side. This strange parish was full of life, and full of trouble and full of homeless men—so different from the one where he was stationed. The Irish were fighting, and forgiving, and doing reckless things and never counting the cost. He liked it. And he liked them. They were his people.

Then a vacancy occurred at St. Patrick's. And somebody mentioned Father Dempsey to Archbishop Kendrick.

"But he's just the man. And he loves them all down there."

The Archbishop began to ask questions. What he heard he liked. He sent for the young priest.

"How would you like to go down to St. Patrick's parish?" he asked.

"If Your Grace will only send me there as assistant I give you my word I'll never leave the parish till I die."

"Not as assistant," said Archbishop Kendrick. "St. Patrick's parish is yours."

And on July 4, 1898, the new priest celebrated his first mass in the parish that was so dear to him. He's been out of it three times. In 1907 he spent one night in Chicago. In 1913 he spent one night in Washington. Two years ago he went to Ireland on his way to Rome.

LITTLE Italy has come to the parish in the course of the almost 30 years since Father Dempsey came. And the Ghetto is there. But here and there it still is dotted with the Irish. When Willie Hogan was shot—his assassination bringing on the Egan-Hogan feud, in which lives were lost as gangland fought it out with pistols—Father Dempsey was called to attend the dying man. He knew Max and Harry Greenberg and Dinty Colbeck and Chippy Robinson and Steve Ryan—many of the gangsters on both sides. He couldn't stand the thought of these boys killing each other, and he stepped in to mediate and patched them up a truce. He doesn't like to talk of this. "God grant," he says, "that I prevented murder," and dismisses it. And when the old gangs passed, and new came on, and war again broke out between rival criminal factions, it centered in St. Patrick's parish. Within two blocks of St. Patrick's Church you will find the homes and businesses and headquarters of Italian feudists. "The poor misguided boys that do be killing each other," Father Dempsey says, "and the fathers of them the decentest men that ever came to America. Och, but thank God there's peace again."

HIS WORDS take on new meaning, if you step into St. Patrick's Church. Almost the first thing to greet the eye, on the left side, near the confessional, is an image of the repentant thief upon the cross. "The Good Thief," says a legend. "Did you ever hear of that in any other church?" asks Father Dempsey. "'The Good Thief!' Now, there's good in every thief. With God's mercy, we may find it."

He points to the old-fashioned tenement across the street from St. Patrick's. "That boy there," as he gestures toward an Italian who doesn't seem to be older than 35, "is the father of 12. There's 56 children in those four houses. There hasn't been a divorce in this parish since it was founded in 1843. And there's no birth control, either."

"But Father Tim . . . these labor troubles . . . How did you get mixed up in them?"

"Not by reading, my son. I never read a word of labor or capital, or economics in my life. Economics is a good word. You've got to use it nowadays. And propaganda and camouflage. But I won't use those last words. They're war words. And I hate war and the words of war.

"It was back in 1910 or 1911," he continued. "There were two boys, Paddy and Mike Kane. They were no relation, but they had the same name. Well, I knew Paddy. He'd been helpin' take care of his old grandmother since he was 13. Well, they was strikers. And here at the corner of Sixth and O'Fallon they met two strikebreakers one day. The Kane boys was good men. But the strikebreakers had revolvers. And they brought Paddy and Mike in here to me—both dying.

"And a year after there was another strike coming on Monday. Saturday I got to thinking about it. About the poor fellows that would be hurt and maybe killed. Sure they do be having a hard enough time of it anyway, them teamsters, making a living. 'Somebody ought to put a stop to that,' says I. 'I telephoned Nellie Quick, who was in the labor movement then.

"'Sure,' she says, 'it ought to be stopped. Why don't you stop it?'

"'Well, who have I got to see?' I says.

"'There's John Duggan,' she says, 'who's business agent of the union. And Dan Murphy is president, and Tom Coyne, secretary.'

"I thanked God for those names.

"So I called up the union. They said John Duggan wasn't there. 'Well, who's this talkin'?' It was Danny Murphy. 'I'm Father Dempsey,' says I, 'and ain't there some way we can stop this strike? I'd like to see you,' I says. 'Well,' he answers, 'I'll be up right away.'

"In five minutes he was here. 'It would be grand,' he says, 'if you could get this stopped.' 'Well, who is there can stop it,' says I. 'George Tansey,' he says, 'the head of the St. Louis Transfer Company.'

"Danny went away, and I called up Mr. Tansey. As decent a man he was—God rest him—as ever lived. 'I'm comin' right down to see you,' he said.

"Well, we talked. And then I got the men to name a committee to meet with Mr. Tansey and his people. And they made an offer. And we took it to the union that night. And they turned it down.

"Sunday morning we met again. There was another offer. We had to take it to the union on Sunday—that's a bad day for strike talk. The men aren't working. They have a lot of time to talk. They say a lot of hard things. Sometimes they think they mean them.

"I went with the committee when we carried that offer back to the men. If ever I talked to men in my life I talked that Sunday afternoon. They took the offer, God bless them, and there wasn't any strike."

THAT was the first of them. Since that day Father Tim had mediated in and amicably adjusted 46 labor disputes, involving all the members of the Building Trades Council and the Central Trades Union from teamsters to skilled mechanics, on the one side, and on the other all the Employers' Associations in St. Louis. That alone would justify the words of Rabbi Leon Harrison. "There is no citizen more useful in St. Louis than Father Dempsey."

Back in the days when he first went to St. Patrick's parish there were innumerable lodging houses operated in connection with saloons. A man could get a bed for little. After a couple of days in such a place he usually had little to get it with. The construction worker, the harvest follower would come to town with his summer's wages, get drunk, spend or lose all the money he had and—but the story is too familiar to need repeating.

Time and again Father Tim was called to just such places when men were dying. It was not that the place was sordid and squalid. But on the walls of the rooms of them, were pictures from the Police Gazette. Not at all the pictures for men to die with. "I'd like to start a hotel for men like these," thought Father Tim. He'd talked about it a little. Some of the other clergy thought he had a hare-brained notion.

On St. Patrick's day, 1906, Archbishop Glennon attended the Mass at St. Patrick's Church. And afterward Father Dempsey told of the plight of these homeless workers who filled his parish.

"And, Your Grace," he said, "I'd like to be starting a hotel for them—a place with a clean bed for 15 cents, and maybe a meal, and decent surroundings, and pictures, for after all they're decent folks, these men."

"I'll give $500 to help you, if you do," the Archbishop answered.

AND so it started. In a room over a butcher shop at Eighth and Franklin avenue. "The Exile's Rest" Father Tim called it. But the boys didn't. To them it was Father Dempsey's Hotel. And so it has been known for years. The second year he leased the old Shields School from the Board of Education—originally it had been the parochial school of St. Patrick's, which is hard by. And there, today he has his hotel. There are 400 beds. The first year in the new location taxed it to its utmost—the "bad winter" of 1907—when for money, as Father Dempsey says, "you had to take John Doe's paper." That winter every bed was full every night—and 4000 homeless men slept on the hotel floors. Since then over 100,000 homeless men have had a lodging for the night at Father Tim's. Some of them paid. Some could not. "But that made no difference, the dear God knows," says Father Tim," all of them needed a place to sleep.

"If you have a name for trying to help in one way they'll be wanting you to help in others," says Father Tim. That's how the Day Nursery started. There were scores of mothers in the parish who needed work, but who had no place to leave their children while they helped eke out a living. So there was nothing else to do. He started his Day Nursery in 1910. It cares for 72 children as the average, every working day. Well, then, there had to be some place for mothers and other women, just out of the hospital. Folks too poor to afford to stay even in a ward, once they were on the way to assured recovery. There just had to be, hadn't there? Father Dempsey provided it. He has quarters for 25 in his convalescent home. Those who can, pay—sometimes as much as $6 a week. Those who can't, don't. The average number in the convalescent home from week to week is 19.

And if the working men needed a hotel, what of the working women? So he started his Working Girls' Home, where accomodations are provided for 150 women and girls at a nominal sum.

And on top of that was the White Cross Crusade, planned to help the undernourished little ones, and to supply clothes and furniture and other needs to their parents at little or nothing at all.

"THE Exile's Rest" was a name too good to lose. When the working men repudiated it to call their hotel by Father Dempsey's name, the good priest took it back again. Today that name is carved on a beautiful Celtic cross in Calvary Cemetery, a cross which marks a plot where 184 homeless wanderers lie. Father Dempsey buried them.

"But why this sort of private cemetery?" you ask.

"I had to bury them, you see. So I just put them all together. So they'd all get up in a bunch and maybe say a good word for me when the trumpet blows."

Exiles indeed. They were men like Duggan—Duggan who used to say: "When me hat is on, me house is shingled; when me coat is buttoned, me trunk is locked."

He, who had cared for the living, now buried the dead. And it wasn't fitting that a decent man should go to the Potter's Field. Father Dempsey would claim the body, give it a funeral and lay it away in consecrated ground. Sometimes it happened that he buried more than one at once. One day St. Patrick's Church saw three funerals of such exiles—three caskets in a row before the altar.

Strange tales those derelicts could tell, who sleep in the Exile's Rest. When Father Tim went back to Ireland a couple of years ago he met a man in high authority, a mighty Government official who possibly had little thought to waste upon a parish priest. "And he didn't know," said Father Dempsey, "that his brother was sleeping there in the Exile's Rest. He thought the poor boy was killed in a railroad wreck, ten years before the day he died in my arms." And Father Dempsey let him think so.

Race, creed and color make no difference. If you're human you are son or daughter to Father Tim. The Jews know he helps their people as the Irish and the Italians, the Poles and the Bohemians know he cares for theirs. A wealthy Jewish business man visited the priest one day. The paper was hanging from the ceiling. Father Tim confessed that his roof leaked.

"Why don't you just call up a contractor and have it fixed?"

"I haven't the money. It will cost $500."

"But they'll extend you credit, surely."

"They've been extending it these last three years."

THAT night the visitor at his club sat in a poker game. He won $600. By registered mail the next morning he sent $500 to Father Tim. "For that roof of yours."

A few weeks later he called on the priest again. The same patches of paper were hanging down. "But I sent you the money to fix the roof," said the visitor.

"But do you think," Father Tim objected, "that the boys are never needing anything over at the Hotel?"

"Some poor people," says Father Tim, "speak bitter of the rich—and the dear Lord knows, maybe, if we had the sorrows that they have, we'd be bitter too. But the rich are pretty decent people. Last year it cost me $67,000 to do the work I'm doing. Now the poor didn't give it to me, for they didn't have it. And I didn't pick any pockets. So it had to come from the rich. I wouldn't want to be rich, myself. It's a great responsibility. But they can do good—if they will."

The poor are decent folks. The rich are decent folks. There are good thieves. Even the gangsters are deluded boys. He never met a mean man yet. All, all, are the children of God. And yet Father Tim hasn't a lot of patience with some of them.

He doesn't like the Pharisee. He doesn't like the martinet. For red taped and organized card-indexed charity he hasn't the least use in the world. A woman, deserted by her husband, came to him the other day in a drenching rain. At her side was a baby a year old. In her arms was another, aged one month. She had no home, no place to go, was penniless.

She told him she had made application for aid and named the place. Father Tim borrowed an umbrella and took her to his Women's Home. After that he got busy on the telephone to relieve his mind.

"I was using strong words," he said. "I've one of the boys over from the Hotel cooking for me, just now. He's traveled everywhere, that man. He's heard a lot.

"And while I was talking I heard him laugh. 'Father,' he says, when I looked that way, 'that's pretty bad, but I think that I have heard worse.'

"'You're a truthful man, Pat,' I said, 'and if you'll just stand ferninst me there 'till I've finished this job, you won't be able to say that a second time.'"

You can see how near the saint comes to being the sinner. That's what makes Father Tim Dempsey one of the most useful of all St. Louis citizens.

CLAUDE MONET, the Master

By JULIUS KLEIMANN

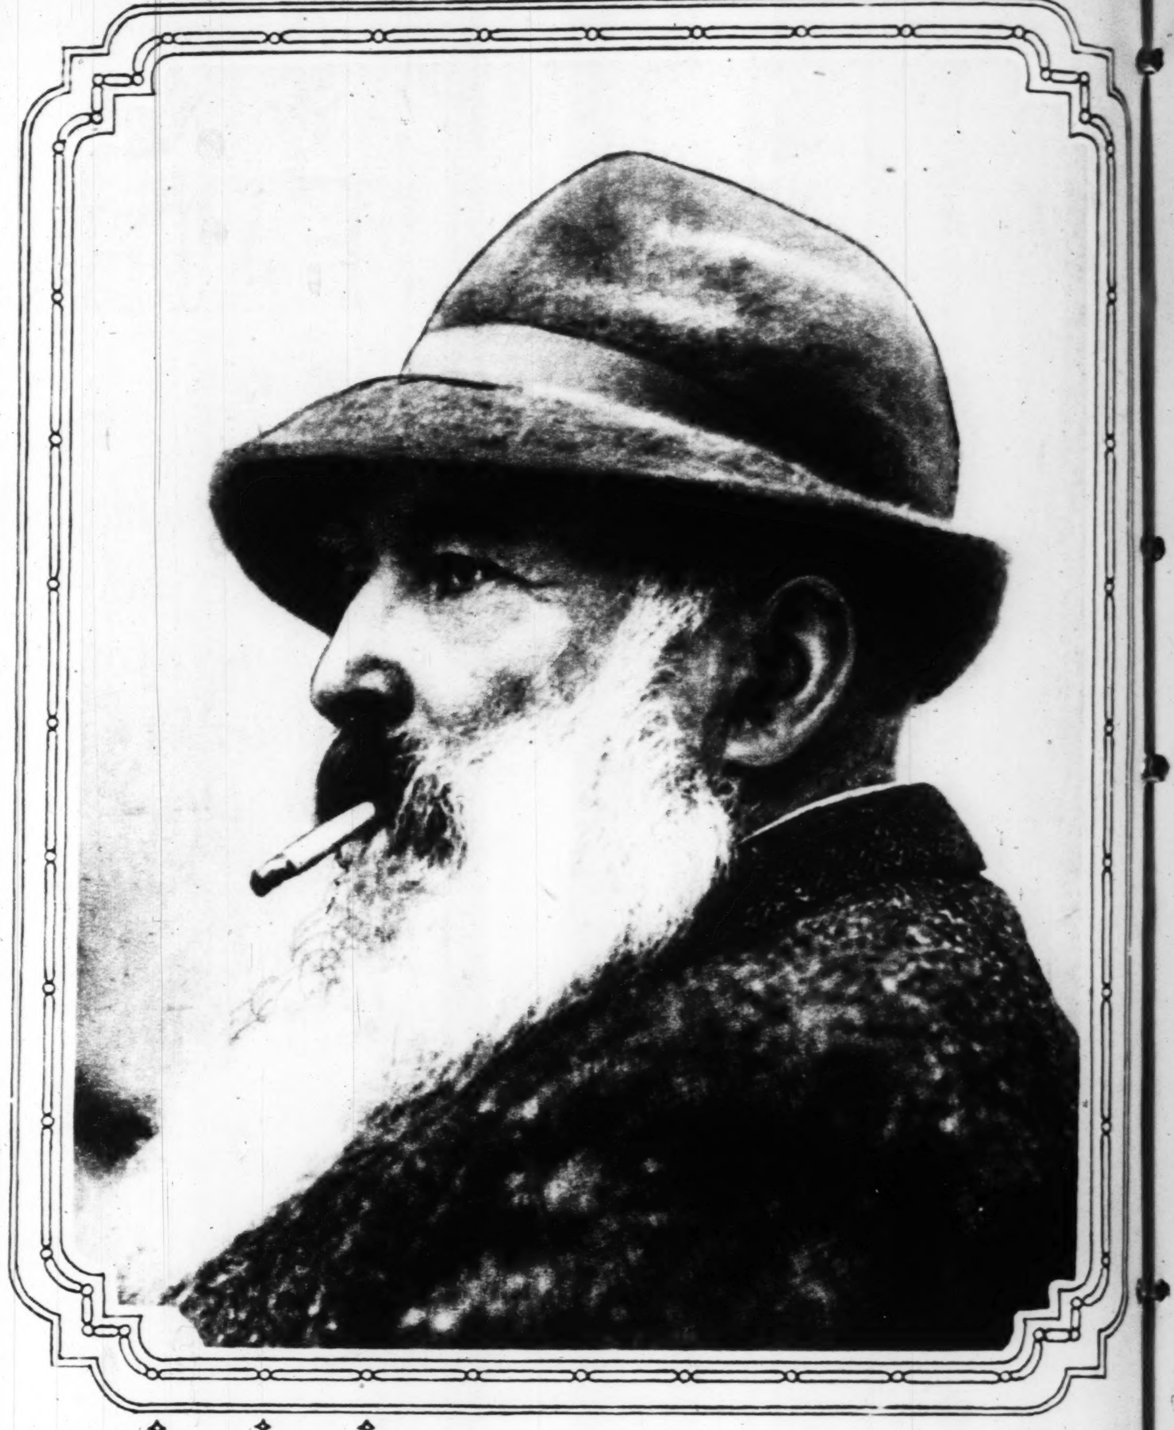
Once Lonely and Ignored and Glad to Get Ten Dollars Each for His Paintings, He Lived to Become the High Priest of the Impressionists and to See His Fame Encircle the World.



Claude Monet.

CLAUDE MONET died at his long, low, Virginia-creeper-covered house at Giverny, France, last month, and the impressionists lost their high priest. For Monet it was whose genius convinced an academic art world and a lethargic world of fact that a painter need not adhere to the rules laid down for him by cautious predecessors, and, so convincing them, made them not only like it, but pay for liking it, which, in the person of a great painter bent on depicting things as he sees them, and as they have never quite been seen before, is another touch of genius in itself.

In achieving his success—artistic and material—this great Frenchman had no easy way of it. It is not easy to step out in the face of the masters and their modern disciples and say: "It is all very well for you fellows who follow the tradition of the ages to dote on form, on the figures and outlines of things; it is good work, so if you like it, go ahead with it. But for me, well, I am interested in those nuances of light and shade, of color and glitter that I see enhanced and sometimes shadowed by the sun; I am delighted with the varying bubbles and sparks that accompany the turning of the day, and so these I will depict, just as I see them, and what are you going to do about it?"

It is not easy to step out in the center of the Latin Quarter or the Place de l'Opera or on Montmartre and so proclaim yourself. It is not easy for a young man so to assert himself and still expect to profit by what rich connoisseurs, or rich persons who would like to be connoisseurs, have to offer him. It is not conducive to chocolate and rolls in the morning or a pint of wine with the prix fixe in the evening or an occasional cognac on a Montparnasse terrace.

But Claude Monet, quite aware of the difficulty of his task, set about to paint just as he saw fit. He looked at the sun upon the midday waters, at the pinkish evening light as it filtered through the trees of a French forest, at the pale sheen of November as it touched the tip of a Cathedral spire. That a fairly chemically pure atmosphere allowed that midday sun to shine with all its splendor, that particles of dust floating in the air caught the slanting beams of evening and touched them rose, that great amounts of water held suspended in the cool air made a curtain that kept the November sun from shining with its true effulgence, were of no importance to him. Such phenomena were true enough and were the cause of such things; but what Monet was interested in was the effect and its shades and shadows and colors.

SO HE would sit in the murky damp of a thicket and paint away, regardless of resultant rheumatism and kindred ailments. He would haunt the edge of a lily pond, his keen eye catching each fine tinge of light and shade. And so upon his canvass he would portray silver and fine golds, delicate blues and rose and greens and subtle yellows. And the inspiration for all these wonders may have been a land or seascape, a tree, a haystack, a lily pond, the bridge over a great river. But, whatever it was, wherever it was, whenever it was, there was no fabrication of lights and darks and colors; they were always true and honest and forthright, just as Claude Monet saw them.

And when he had finished one of these fine canvasses, a lucky observer would stand back a bit from it, and, letting his vision fall upon this painter's handiwork, observe that which was a thing of wonder to behold.

So Claude Monet, what with the sort of genius he was, had nothing to do but convince the world of it. He, this pioneer in a new enterprise, had nothing to do but convince a doubting Paris that there were other ways of painting, and ones quite as realistic, as those ways which were so proudly exhibited in the Louvre and the Luxembourg. He had nothing to do but head a movement that was to be maligned and disparaged and hissed and hated. He had nothing to do but be the leader of a cult that was considered much akin to a form of insanity. That is all he had to do. And he did it magnificently.

Claude Monet was born in Paris November 14, 1840. His father was a wine merchant at Havre, and a wealthy one, but he stopped at being a successful business man. Art was not of importance to him; he saw no reason why it should cut a figure in the life of his son. But nevertheless Claude soon showed unmistakable signs of artistic ability, and, discourage him as his family tried, they did not succeed. It was the old story—Claude Monet was an artist in a family wholly without artistic gifts.

The boy was sent to school, but his school work was irregular and spasmodic. He paid little heed to his books; his time was spent with caricature. His family set upon him. "What," they asked, "did he intend to make of all this drawing?" And he replied: "I would like to paint as a bird sings."

He was sent on a foreign tour. Back to Havre he came, and back to caricature and the company of Boudin, the painter, a man several years older than himself. Then came the time for him to do his military service. For two years he was with the Chasseurs d'Afrique in Algeria. There he was taken with a fever and finally sent home. He took himself off to Paris and entered the Atelier Gleyre. This was in 1863.

NOW, this school was presided over by Marc Charles Gabriel Gleyre. Gleyre was a conscientious painter, of the classical school. He believed in the methods and manners of the master. In his faithfulness to his work he was an excellent influence for any young painter; in his dogma and theories he was the antithesis of everything Monet wished to do and be. But it was at the Atelier Gleyre that Monet met Alfred Sisley, of English parents, though brought up as French, who was destined to be one of the great aids of the impressionist movement.

For a time Monet and Sisley listened to Gleyre and his beliefs; then they ran from him and returned to his house no more.

Monet had made other friends while under Gleyre's tutelage, though they were not of his studio. One was Gustave Courbet, then 44, a man constantly growing more influential among the painters of Paris. He helped Monet not only with advice, but with that other necessity, money.

With Sisley and Courbet, with Edouard Manet and Paul Cezanne and Edgard Degas, Monet would gather at the Cafe Guerbois in the Batignolles quarter of evenings, and there Paris and its painters would be discussed. You may be sure that this conversation at the Cafe Guerbois would not have delighted those whose paintings hung in the Louvre nor those who imitated and agreed with the masters. For at this cafe, revolution and progress of a new kind were in the air. These men said they would paint just as they saw fit. And they did.

When Monet was 25 his first picture was hung in Paris, a seascape at Havre. At that time, however, he was more interested in figure painting. He had not yet found that depicting lights and the subleties of the atmosphere were his supreme desires. Not that he could not paint figures, and paint them mighty well. He was not an artist who, incapable of drawing mass, and of little worth in draftsmanship, turns as a necessity to art forms demanding little or no portrayal of form. His painting of the women in the garden, now holding a place of honor at the Luxembourg, disproves any such belief. For in the case of such a wanderer from the accepted paths as Monet, disparagement is likely to be heard on no evidence. True, some of his followers have too often adopted his style as a means to cover up their inabilities as draftsmen. The master must not be allowed to suffer from the infirmities of his disciples.

MONET did not immediately give up figure painting. He stuck to it until 1870, when he was 30 years old. Then, on the occasion of the Franco-Prussian War, in company with another artist, he went to London. There he saw the work of Turner. He was astonished and thrilled. Just how important this view of Turner's work was to him, just how greatly it influenced him, is difficult to surmise. But it undoubtedly stimulated him. It was on this visit to London, too, that he met M. Durand-Ruel, the art dealer whose name is so closely associated with Claude Monet and all his school.

He went back to Paris. In 1874 Monet, along with several of his fellow believers, exhibited at Nadar's in the Boulevard des Capucines. A terrific uproar was created in the art world of Paris. These venturers in new fields were attacked in the journals, by the men in the streets, by critics and artists. Critics, overexcited, could not satisfy themselves by taking it out in talk; soon they were coming to blows; fists were flying and fights were on. They were troublous days. It was no easy time for Monet and his band. Years after the Master said; "One must have strength for such a fight."

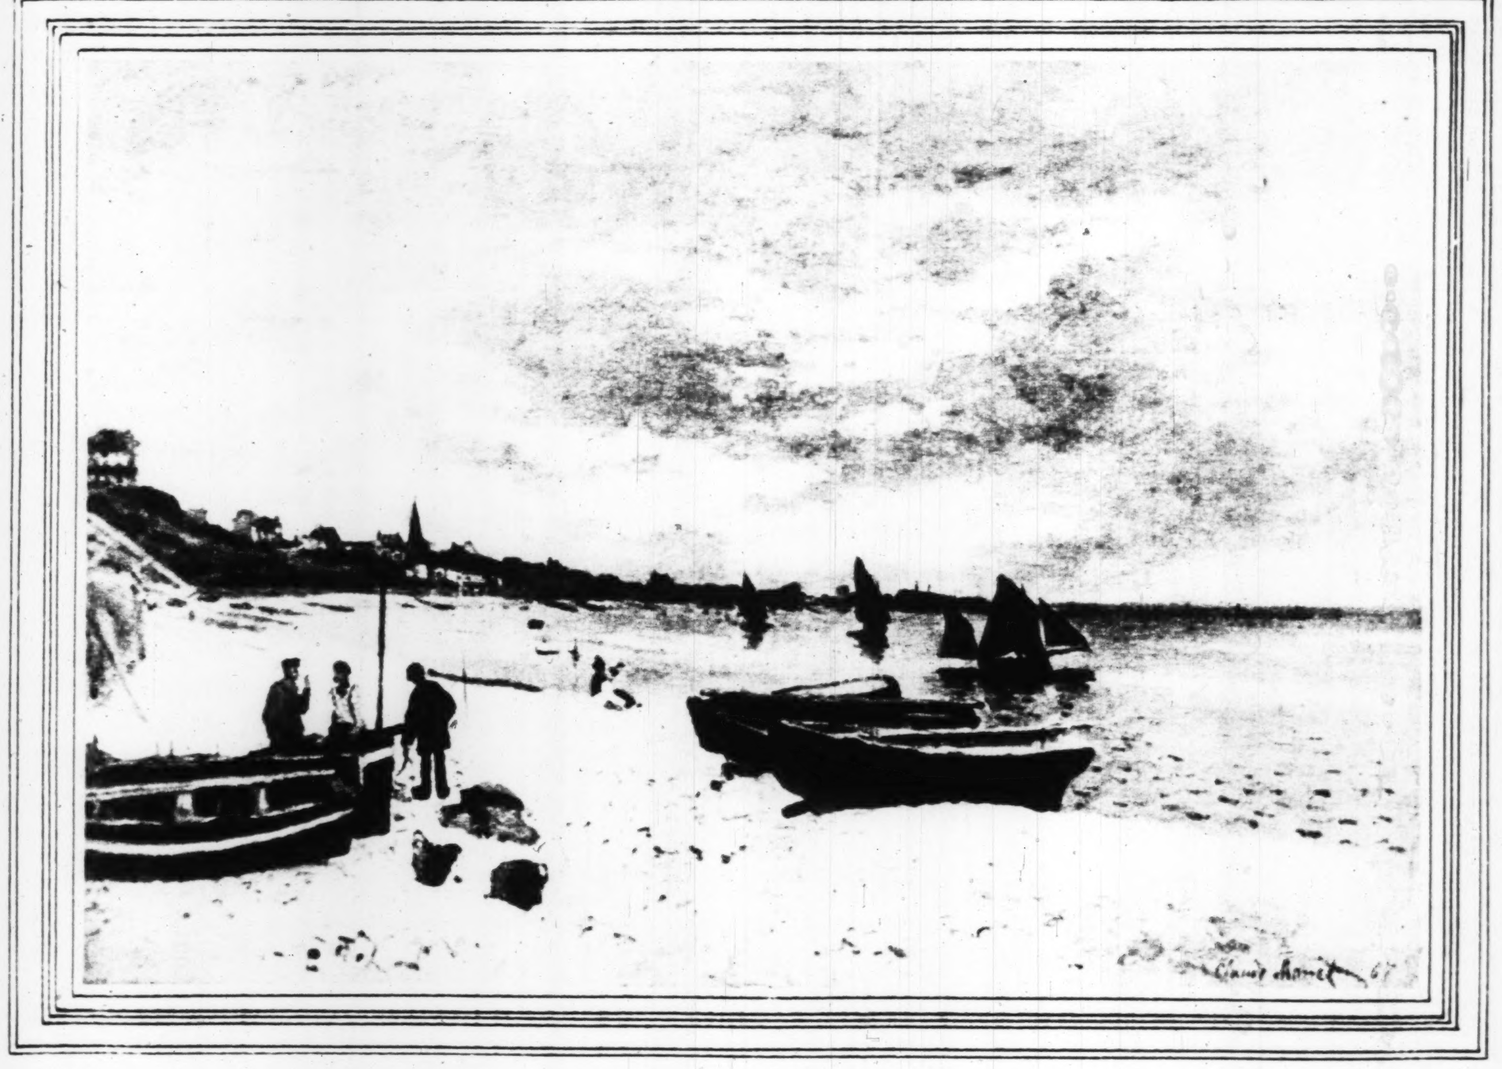
It was in the next year, 1875, that Monet met the man who remained his friend for the rest of his life, the man who was at his cottage the day he died and shed tears for a great artist passed away and a good comrade gone. It was Georges Clemenceau, and their meeting was like this:

CLEMENCEAU was sipping an aperitif in a Montparnasse cafe one afternoon when the waiter approached him and said: "Monsieur, a note for you from a lady. A pretty lady."

The gentleman who was to become known as the Tiger became interested immediately. But he soon found that the note was not for him but for some artist named Claude Monet. Who this Monet was he did not know, but he deduced that he, too, must be a sojourner, at the moment, in this same cafe. So he set about on a search for the man who had been sent a note by a pretty lady, and going from table to table, and asking questions, Claude Monet was pointed out to him, and to Claude Monet he took the short missive. The rightful addressee of the pretty lady's note cordially thanked this Clemenceau for his trouble and invited him to have a drink with him. The Tiger accepted. From that time on they were close friends.

It was 1875 and the impressionists were still maligned. The little group who now met at the Cafe de la Nouvelle Athenee were much set upon. They had several friends—one Emile Zola—but in the main their allies were few. The financial condition of the group was highly precarious, and Claude Monet fared no better than the rest.

The salon was closed against him, as it was against his fellows. Art dealers refused to look at his canvases. These were days of short rations, of tragedy and sardonic comedy.



Monet's "Scinte Adresse."

Monet was more than willing, a great deal more than willing, to part with one of his lovely canvases for $10 or $20. To obtain $40 was a great event; $100 was a figure unheard of.

A letter from Edouard Manet to Theodore Duret, the critic, tells just how sorry was the financial plight of Claude Monet in 1875. "Dear Duret," Manet writes, "I went to see Monet yesterday. I found him altogether 'hard up.' He asked me if I knew of a purchaser for ten or twenty of his pictures at $20 each. Shall we take it on? I thought of a dealer or an amateur, but there I foresee the possibility of refusals. It is unfortunate that it is only connoisseurs, like ourselves, who can at the same time—in spite of all the repugnance we may feel over it—make an excellent bargain and help a man of such talent. Answer as quickly as possible or make an appointment with me. Amities, Edouard Manet." What a dreadful predicament for a great artist. But it was necessary to teach the world the beauty of Monet and his Impressionism.

It was in 1876 that the title "Impressionists" really got into play. "Impressionism" was first used by Edouard Manet in 1867 in a catalogue of his works. But it was nine years later, at an exhibition of Claude Monet's, under the name "Impressions," that the word first came into the public mind.

Speaking of the school, E. V. Lucas says:

"TO analyze in detail the motives and efforts of the Impressionists would require a volume, and many volumes have already been written. A rough and ready definition may be this. That the Impressionists differed from almost all their predecessors and most of their contemporaries in that where the aim of the majority of painters has been, and still is, to make a picture finished in every respect, the aim of the Impressionists was to make a record. Realizing that no eye can in a moment see everything at once, they sacrificed what they thought unessential and concentrated on the salient. The relation of every part of the picture to every other part did not interest them; they were interested in but one thing alone; Manet chiefly in the figure, which he separated from the rest of the world with a startling, almost fierce distinctiveness; Monet in transient light and shadow; Whistler in the passing mood. I name these three painters because they are perhaps the most prominent names in the history of Impressionism and the difference between their methods indicates how wide a range the word covers. . . . But although all were so different, all had the same purpose, which was to repeat in paint the impression which the contemplation of human beings, landscape and the river at Chelsea had conveyed to themselves, without distraction."

A GENIUS cannot be forever held with his head under water, not even if the genius happens to be an Impressionist. It was just about 10 years after that exhibition of Claude Monet's when the title of the school came into speech, that Monet first began to receive the proper payment for his art. A Japanese ironmaster, visiting Europe, saw some of Monet's work and looked up the artist. To Monet he gave a check for 250,000 yen (about $125,000), and told him to send him paintings until Monet thought he had given him the value for his money. From then the widespread appreciation of Monet was on the leap, his reputation was made, no longer did he need to offer his art at $20 a canvas. His battle with poverty was over and done with.

Soon he found a place at Giverny to his liking; he had his long, low house, standing halfway up on a hillside; he had his garden with its flowers, a riot of color and profusion; across a high road he found himself another garden, cool and green, there was a small lake festooned with water lilies; he had beauty at his doorstep. He repeated again and again his song, "I have never found an ugly thing in nature." And here he spent the rest of his life.

Not far away, overlooking the sea, was the retreat of his old friend, Georges Clemenceau. Not a thing of beauty as Monet's but long and narrow, plain and extremely utilitarian. But the homes of these two were near each other, which was the important point; Clemenceau could visit Monet whenever he felt like it, Monet could return the compliment when he was so inclined.

So in the past years it was no uncommon sight to see Claude and Georges Clemenceau walking side by side near the lily pond or driving together in the automobile of one of them.

Once started, Monet's fame never ceased. His genius flourished, his imagination flashed continually, the acclaim with which he was hailed mounted. He began his "series" work. He would take a hay stack and paint it in the morning light. He would paint it by the bright light of day, by the soft tones of evening.

As his years increased, so likewise did his fame. Recently he had difficulty with his sight, the sight that he depended on to pick out all the subtleties of light and color. But he was saved from blindness and kept on with his work.

At 86 this old man, who had suffered all the scourgings of the artist of fiction, closed his span. His day was done. He had outlived calumny; the banners of victory had come his way.

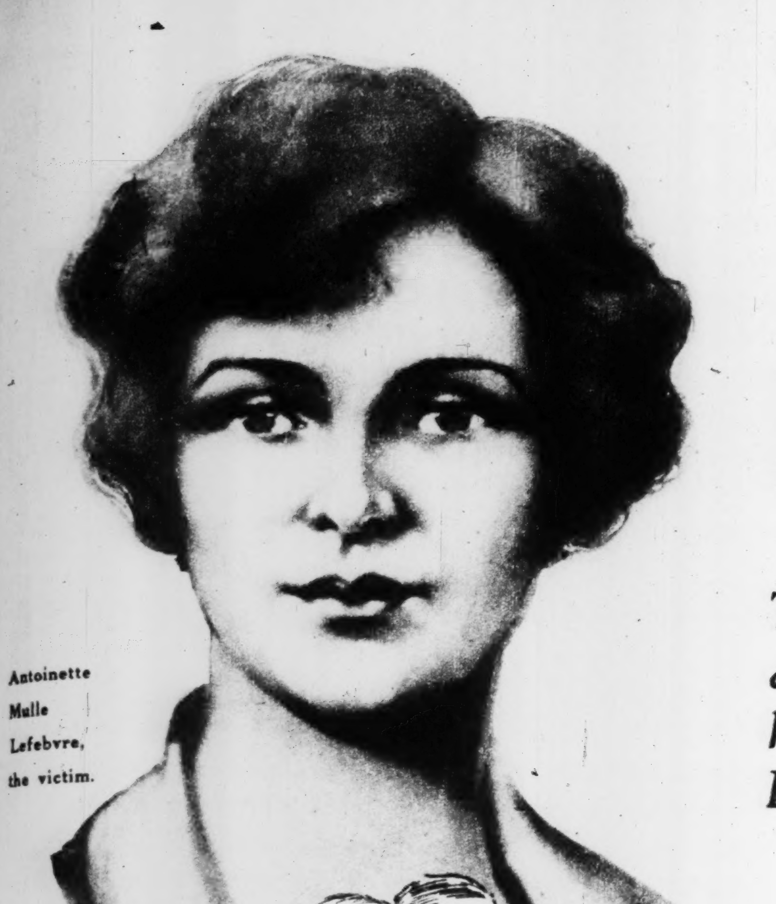
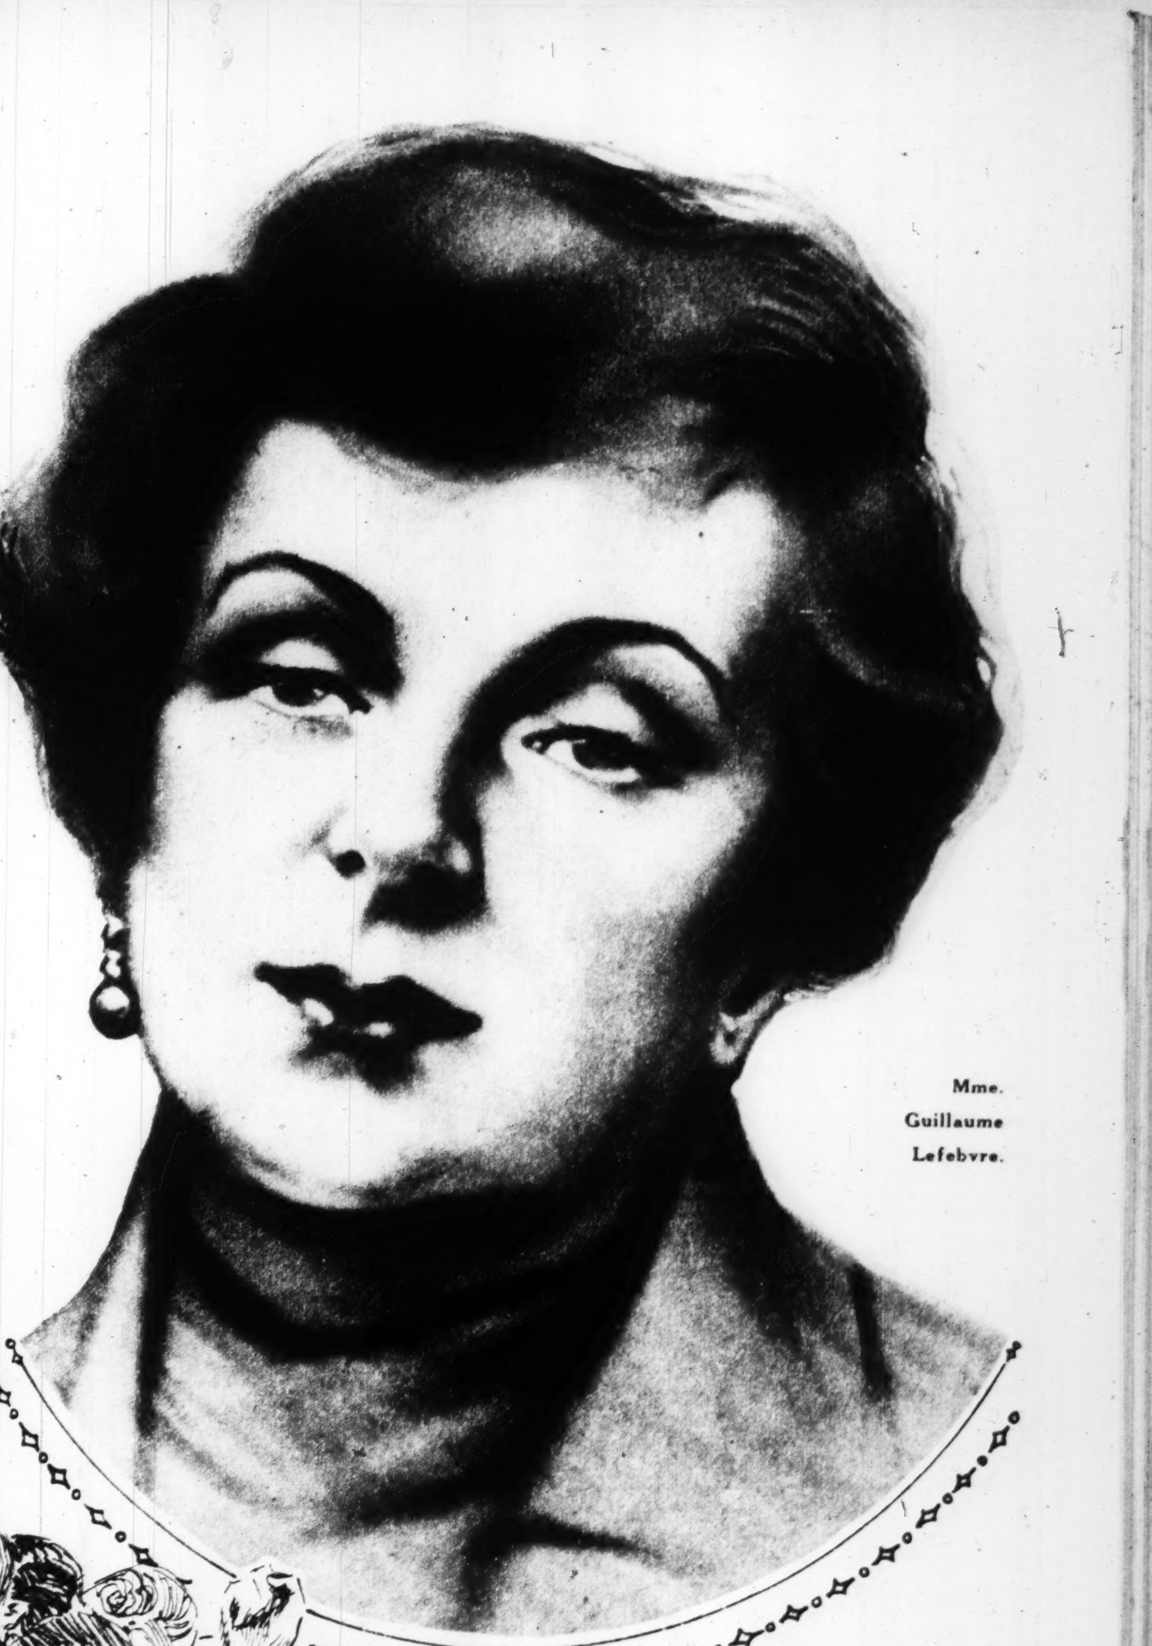
The Crime of MADAME LEFEBVRE

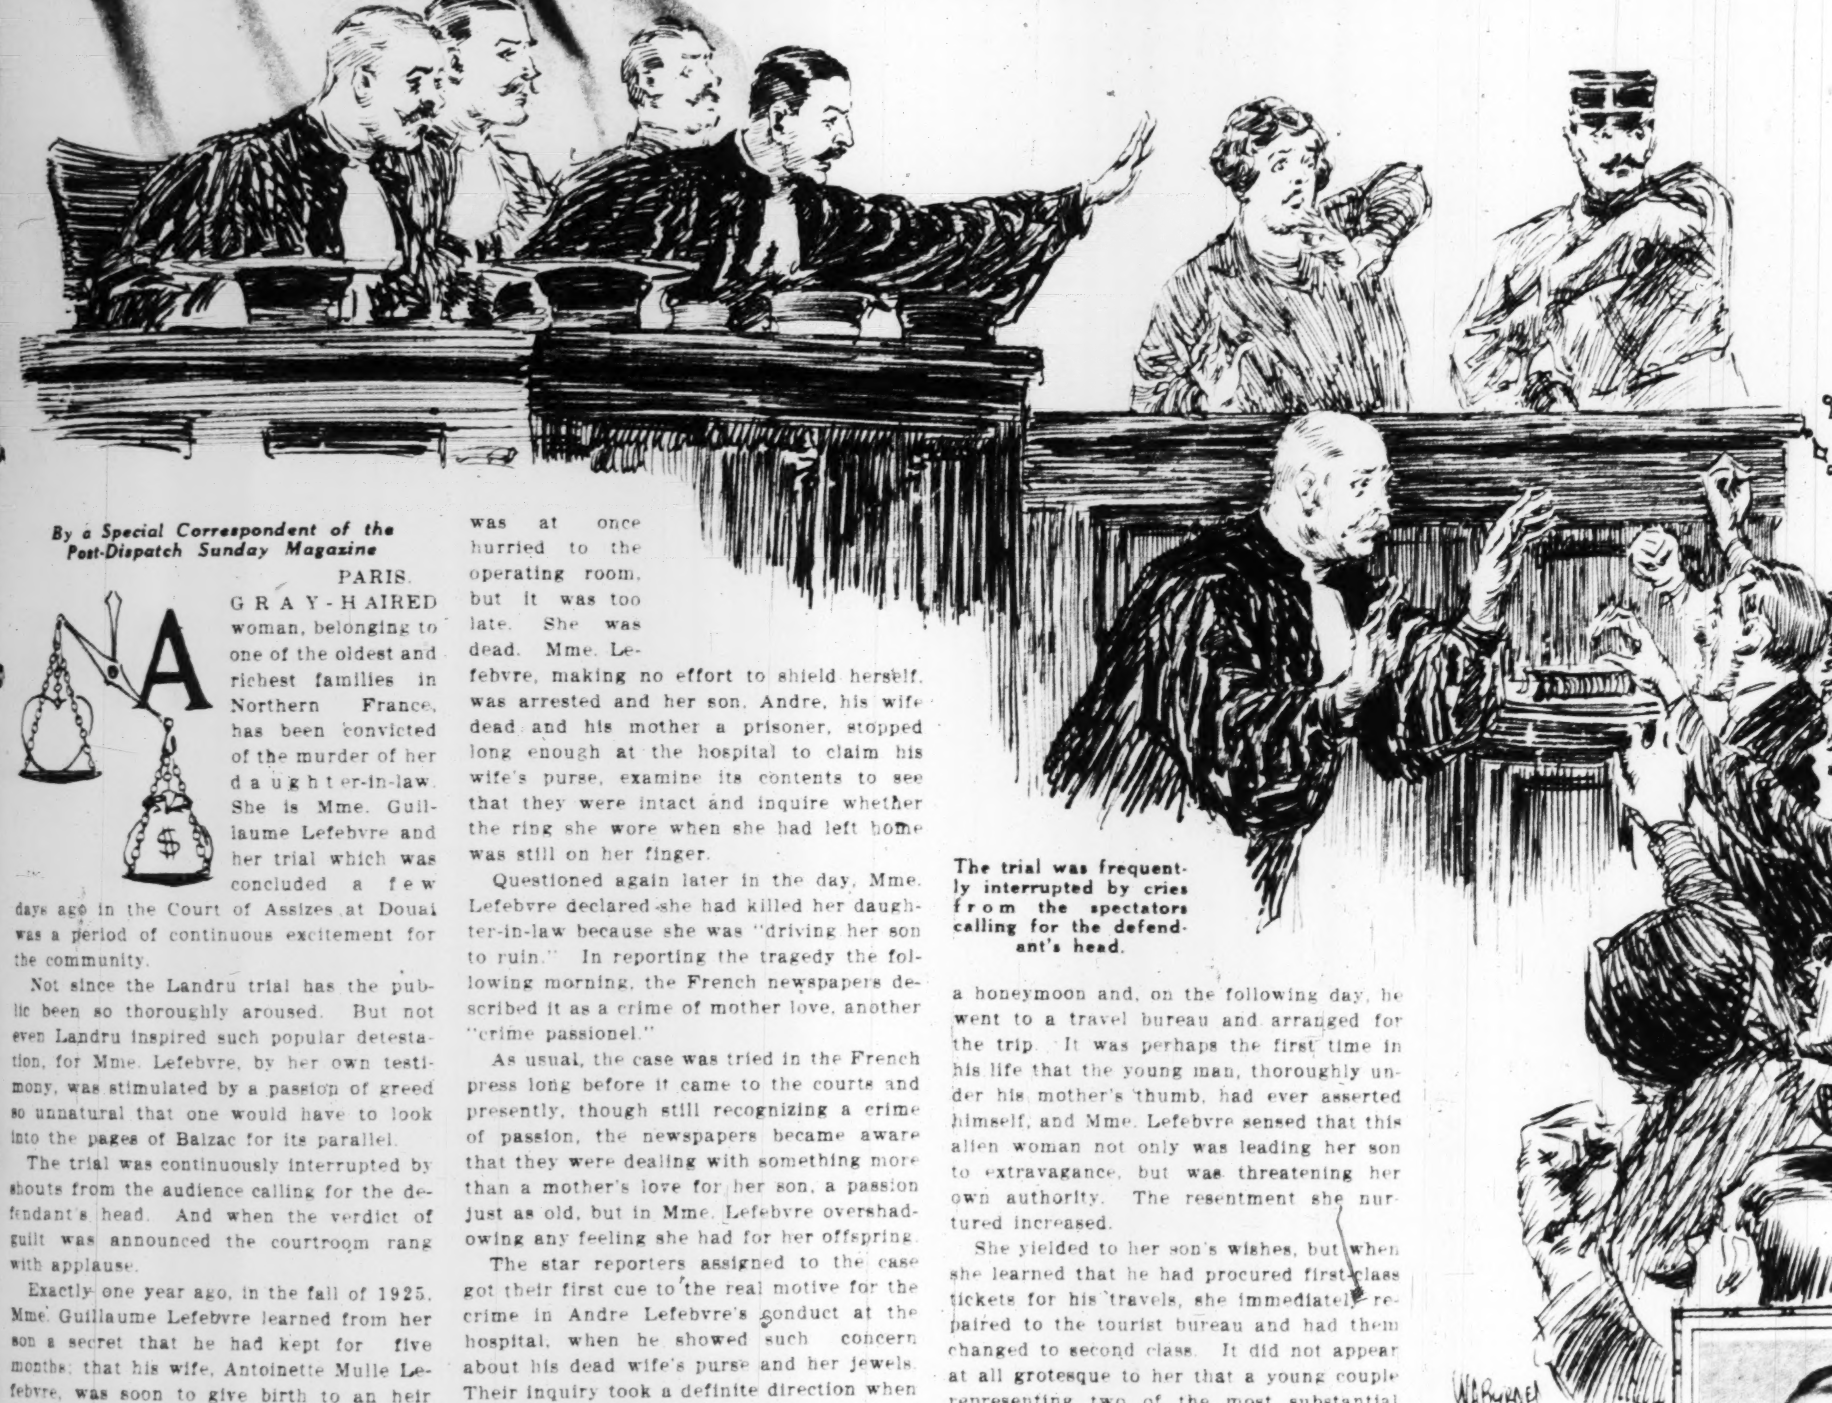
Tortured by What She Called the "Waste and Extravagance" of Her Son's Household, This French Mother Killed Her Daughter-in-Law When She Discovered An Heir Was to Be Born.



Antoinette Mulle Lefebvre, the victim.



Mme. Guillaume Lefebvre.



The trial was frequently interrupted by cries from the spectators calling for the defendant's head.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PARIS.

A GRAY-HAIRED woman, belonging to one of the oldest and richest families in Northern France, has been convicted of the murder of her daughter-in-law. She is Mme. Guillaume Lefebvre and her trial which was concluded a few days ago in the Court of Assizes at Douai was a period of continuous excitement for the community.

Not since the Landru trial has the public been so thoroughly aroused. But not even Landru inspired such popular detestation, for Mme. Lefebvre, by her own testimony, was stimulated by a passion of greed so unnatural that one would have to look into the pages of Balzac for its parallel.

The trial was continuously interrupted by shouts from the audience calling for the defendant's head. And when the verdict of guilt was announced the courtroom rang with applause.

Exactly one year ago, in the fall of 1925, Mme. Guillaume Lefebvre learned from her son a secret that he had kept for five months: that his wife, Antoinette Mulle Lefebvre, was soon to give birth to an heir to the combined Lefebvre-Mulle fortunes. On that very day Mme. Lefebvre bought a revolver and, soon after, writing to her son, asked him to call on her, bring his wife with him and take them both for a drive in his car.

The son, obedient to his mother's wishes, appeared several days later at the paternal home with his young wife, and the three set out for a drive. Andre Lefebvre occupied the front seat alone. His wife and his mother sat together in the rear. When they passed through the city gates and emerged into the suburbs, Mme. Lefebvre requested that her son drive along the path known as "Solitude Road." Andre, without inquiring into the reasons for this strange wish, still in his manhood as pliant before the commanding will of his mother as he was when a child, complied.

BUT when he had reached "Solitude Road" and the car was humming along the deserted lane, he suddenly heard an outcry from his mother. Andre turned, and what he saw made him bring the car to a quick halt. His wife immobile, lay back in her seat, a thin stream of crimson trickling down her cheek from a wound in her temple. His mother, spent, her hands paralyzed in her lap, one of them holding a revolver, regarded him silently. The young man could only ask his agonized question with his eyes.

"I have killed her," the mother said quietly.

Without a further word, Andre Lefebvre swung the car around and dashed madly toward the city and a hospital. At the gates, he was halted by the Customs officers of the Octroi.

"Anything to declare?" asked an officer.

And Andre Lefebvre, it is recorded, with a dying wife and a mother still holding a revolver in her hand in the rear of the car, replied:

"Nothing to declare."

Arrived at the hospital, the young woman was at once hurried to the operating room, but it was too late. She was dead. Mme. Lefebvre, making no effort to shield herself, was arrested and her son, Andre, his wife dead and his mother a prisoner, stopped long enough at the hospital to claim his wife's purse, examine its contents to see that they were intact and inquire whether the ring she wore when she had left home was still on her finger.

Questioned again later in the day, Mme. Lefebvre declared she had killed her daughter-in-law because she was "driving her son to ruin." In reporting the tragedy the following morning, the French newspapers described it as a crime of mother love, another "crime passionel."

As usual, the case was tried in the French press long before it came to the courts and presently, though still recognizing a crime of passion, the newspapers became aware that they were dealing with something more than a mother's love for her son, a passion just as old, but in Mme. Lefebvre overshadowing any feeling she had for her offspring.

The star reporters assigned to the case got their first cue to the real motive for the crime in Andre Lefebvre's conduct at the hospital, when he showed such concern about his dead wife's purse and her jewels. Their inquiry took a definite direction when it was estimated that the entire outfit of clothing worn by the millionairess at the time of her arrest could not have exceeded in cost more than $15.

And when it was learned that the young couple had been quite happy and altogether devoted to each other and that, if anything, they had been living beneath their means, Mme. Lefebvre's bitter charge that Antoinette Mulle was "driving her son to ruin" specifically revealed the nature of the passion which had driven her to commit murder.

Bit by bit, in the press and legal investigations and during the trial, there emerged the portrait of an amazing creature, a female Harpagon, such a monster of greed as neither Moliere nor Balzac would have dared to portray lest they tax too heavily the credence of their public.

The marriage of Andre Lefebvre and Antoinette Mulle was, to all appearances, a love match, but Mme. Lefebvre made it plain to her son that she considered it a mesalliance, because the Mulle fortune, though considerable, was not quite equal to their own. She finally consented to the marriage, however, when, after much haggling on her part, Antoinette's dowry of 250,000 francs was advanced to 330,000 francs. Even at that considerable figure, she remained convinced that her son was throwing himself away.

SHORTLY before the wedding, Andre announced to his mother that he was to leave on a short honeymoon after the ceremony. Mme. Lefebvre threw up her arms in horror. Honeymoons were a waste and a needless expense, she told him. Who had put such nonsense into his head? Probably that awful girl, who already was filling his head with extravagant notions. The Lefebvres never threw good money away on such silly things. He would find it a bore anyway, and he'd only be uncomfortable on the trains.

However, Andre insisted that it was only decent for people in their position to have a honeymoon and, on the following day, he went to a travel bureau and arranged for the trip. It was perhaps the first time in his life that the young man, thoroughly under his mother's thumb, had ever asserted himself, and Mme. Lefebvre sensed that this alien woman not only was leading her son to extravagance, but was threatening her own authority. The resentment she nurtured increased.

She yielded to her son's wishes, but when she learned that he had procured first-class tickets for his travels, she immediately repaired to the tourist bureau and had them changed to second class. It did not appear at all grotesque to her that a young couple representing two of the most substantial families in Northern France should travel second class on their honeymoon!

The newlyweds had been gone only four or five days when Mme. Lefebvre wrote to her son that it was time he was home and that it was foolish to stay away so long merely to please the wishes of a frivolous young woman. Her answer was a picture postcard. Furious at this offense to her authority and suspecting the influence of the bride, she wrote again, ordering her son home at once.

"You seem to think you are rolling in gold. If your wife won't come with you, come home alone." * * * And this in the second week of the honeymoon.

BY NOW Mme. Lefebvre was growing decidedly panicky. Not only was she incensed that her son had married a "wasteful and improvident" woman, but she began to entertain fears for the security of her own possessions, the Lefebvre fortune, a monument to her greed, which she had built stone by stone, franc by franc, over a period of half a century.

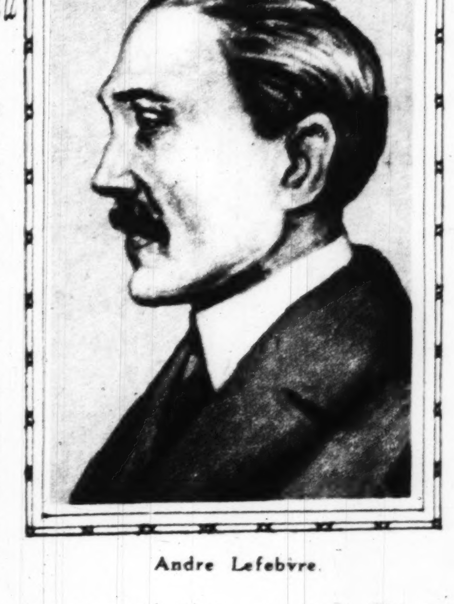
When her son had married, "though it was beneath him," she saw the beginnings of a new fortune which, by saving and self-denial, would swell the Lefebvre heritage to even more impressive magnitude. And here he was traveling, spending freely, "rolling in gold," and perhaps destined soon to make demands upon her to maintain the swift and destructive pace his spendthrift wife was setting.

If the shadow of Mme. Lefebvre clouded the young couple's honeymoon, it completely overcast their home life after they had returned. Andre's mother was a frequent visitor casting up the household budget and finding it excessive, urging retrenchment and saving, warning her son that he would land in the poorhouse. She was shocked beyond words when she found that Antoinette laid a fresh white tablecloth for each meal.

"But it is scandalous," she whined to her son. "Think of the laundry bill. White linen soils so quickly. We have always used red tablecloths and napkins at home. They last a long time without washing."

She was stunned when she discovered that her "lavish" gift of "antique" furniture had been consigned by Antoinette to the attic and that the home was tastefully furnished with new and expensive equipment. The discovery led to a bitter quarrel between the women, one of the first of many to follow.

Mme. Lefebvre was not appeased when Antoinette explained that she could not have used the worthless junk her mother-in-law had given her without making herself and her husband the laughing stock of their set. She was not appeased when the young woman explained that she was spending largely out of her own pocket, that her people were well-to-do, and that she had been brought up to live according to her ample means.



Andre Lefebvre.

MME LEFEBVRE emerged from each of these quarrels with the conviction that her son had married into a family of spendthrifts and wasters and that his wife would lead him inevitably to his ruin. Yet it was brought out at the trial that the wealthy young couple's total expenditures did not exceed $4000 a year.

The climax came when Andre Lefebvre acquired a car. His mother was aghast. It was unheard of. No Lefebvre had ever owned an automobile. It consumed gas and oil. It required a garage and tires and necessitated repairs. It yielded no profits and meant only expense. Another bitter scene occurred.

Once again Antoinette explained that they had bought the car with her money; that the Mulles owned cars; that her family approved entirely of her manner of living; that their social position in the community required observance of a dignified standard. Mme. Lefebvre was deaf to such logic. The Mulles gave themselves airs, they pretended to be socially superior to the Lefebvres, but they were merely debauchees, spenders and profligates. Her son was doomed. The Lefebvre fortune was menaced. The monument built by half a century of hoarding and parsimony was tottering.

In the heart of Mme. Lefebvre there gathered a consuming hatred for her daughter-in-law and for the whole Mulle family which was soon to come to a head. It was hatred which grew as she realized she was alone in her desperate struggle to save the Lefebvre fortune. Her aged husband, 76 and long retired from business, was a mere pale, carbon copy of herself, echoing her protests and resentments but helpless and relying entirely on his wife to fight the menace to their wealth. He had been cowed too long by this dominant woman to show any fight now. He was just a whining old man.

Her son, Andre, a war hero many times decorated, was a spineless creature in her presence, his will broken from infancy to respond to her imperious will. In the quarrels between the two women he was a mere flickering shadow, without the courage to sustain his mother or the spirit to defend the wife he loved. Antoinette alone, well-bred, diplomatic, understanding, had the hardihood to stand up before her mother-in-law, to try gentle persuasion at first and then, in despair, to challenge her authority and interference. This challenge Mme. Lefebvre could not forget or forgive.

THEN one day Andre Lefebvre announced to his mother that an heir was expected. It was the spark that kindled Mme. Lefebvre's hatred to a consuming flame. This alien woman, who was bringing her son to ruin, who was wasting instead of building a fortune, was about to bring into the world another "waster."

From that moment on Mme. Lefebvre was almost out of her mind with hatred and anxiety. This heir, she realized, was destined to inherit the Lefebvre fortune. This young stranger would come into the millions which she and her husband had acquired with such difficulty and which she had guarded with such vigilance. The thought that this wealth was to pass out of her hands, that it was to come to one of the "Mulle breed," was too much for her.

She bought a revolver and killed the young woman whose condition offered a new menace to her greed.

The Lefebvre trial lasted only four days, but into that short time there was packed a lifetime of drama. Never during a whole year of imprisonment had Mme. Lefebvre shown a sign of contrition, and throughout the trial, leaning forward in the prisoner's box as the bereaved Mulle family testified, her thin, parsimonious lips sucked inward with hatred, she flung acid epithets at the witnesses.

Her eyes remained dry, her severe features pinched and sternly set, as witness after witness told of the tragedy of the young woman's death. When her son was called to the stand she interrupted him frequently, dictating his testimony, playing upon his submission to her iron will.

"That's not so, Andre. Try to remember. Wasn't it thus and thus?"

When Mme. Mulle, mother of the dead girl, told of the persecution she had endured Mme. Lefebvre spat angrily: "You're putting it on a bit thick, madame," her eyes flashing the venom she still nurtured against the family that "had debauched" her son. Never a word of pity, never a gesture of repentance or regret.

Mme. Lefebvre wore no mask at her trial. Her every emotion was reflected in her face and she barked out her angry protests frequently. A feeble attempt was made by her lawyers to present a defense of insanity, but the Judges would not have it, nor would the jury, nor the noisy and impassioned public, whose repeated cries of "A mort! A mort!" interrupted the testimony. The public wanted Mme. Lefebvre's head.

The jury was out only 10 minutes, returning with a verdict of guilty. The audience broke into cheers as the Judge pronounced the sentence, "to have her head cut off in a public square of the city." But President Doumegue, in reviewing the case, commuted the sentence because it was now against the traditional policy of the Republic to give a woman the extreme penalty.

For Tardy Laundries.
When the Car Breaks Down.

STEP this way, ladies and gentlemen; step this way! Brand new set of New Year's resolutions guaranteed to be unbreakable! This first class set of "I Will Nots" are in A No. 1 condition and will last you a lifetime! Even when they become "used resolutions" their resale value will be high! They are my own personal resolutions—but are not copyrighted and may be used by any of our friends or enemies who may be interested!

I resolve that—

I will not be nice to the landlord, who, as I sit at the breakfast table sipping my coffee and meditating on the high price of eggs, taps gently on my door and when I open it says: "We have decided to raise your rent $10, beginning this month. You know, the street was repaired and some work done on the sewers, and—well, you know—the taxes. It's so hard on the poor estate!"

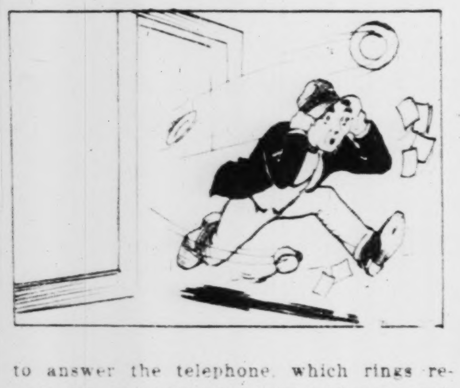
I will not forget to remind him of the crack in the hall wallpaper that runs in all directions like the Mississippi and its tributaries, nor will I be unmindful of the water heater that goes out on the very night when I've come in with the beginnings of a bad cold, intending to take a hot bath, only to be served with a tubful of ice cold water. I will not forget to remind him forcibly of these things.

I resolve that—

I WILL not restrain myself when a passing automobile fires a volley of mud at me, covering my cream-colored stockings with cubist designs, but will give free voice to the thoughts uppermost in my mind.

I resolve that—

I will not answer pleasantly when, in the midst of my morning bath, I am compelled to answer the telephone, which rings repeatedly and urgently, only to hear a soft voice say: "Excuse it, plee-aze."



I resolve that—

I will not be agreeable when, having sent my dress to the cleaners, after having extracted from him an earnest, faithful and vehement vow that it will be back on time for the dance on Tuesday night, it arrives Friday night.

I resolve that—

I will not smile sweetly when, upon opening my laundry, I find that the laundry company so prizes my patronage that it has kept mementos of me in the shape of buttons, draw strings and elastics.

I resolve that—

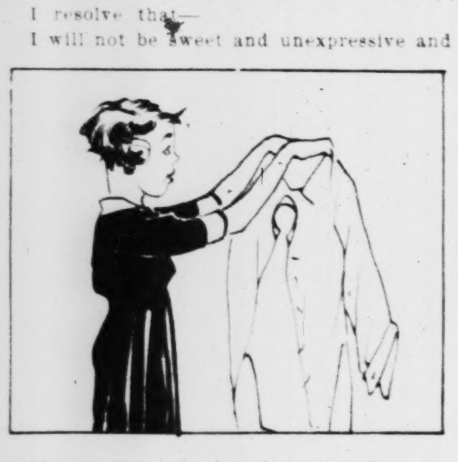
I will not look politely unconcerned when, after I have tried to be interesting and entertaining, my vis-a-vis repeats my last sentence after me, carefully giving one of the words a different pronunciation from the one I have used and then uses another sentence with the same word in it, emphasizing the different pronunciation.

I resolve that—

I WILL not sit still and appear not to be annoyed when, after I have picked out a table in the farthest corner of the restaurant, with the intention of dreaming over my soup and meditating over my dessert, a strange woman enters and, after surveying all the empty tables in the room, comes straight to mine, depositing her bag, bundles, library book and umbrella around me.

I resolve that—

I will not be sweet and unexpressive and hold myself in check, when my Gaseater supersix stops on the busiest corner in the city and refuses to move till it is coaxed into a repair shop by a derrick and the repair man tells me (for $2) that my battery is no account, (for $3) that my clutch is burned out, (for $5) that I've lost my fan belt, (for $6) that the whole engine is in bad condition and that (for $50) he'll be glad to keep it for four months and put it into shape for me.



Hoping these home-made resolutions based on my vital experiences of the past year may be of service to you, I remain, yours disrespectfully.

Tale of Ring's Declining Years.

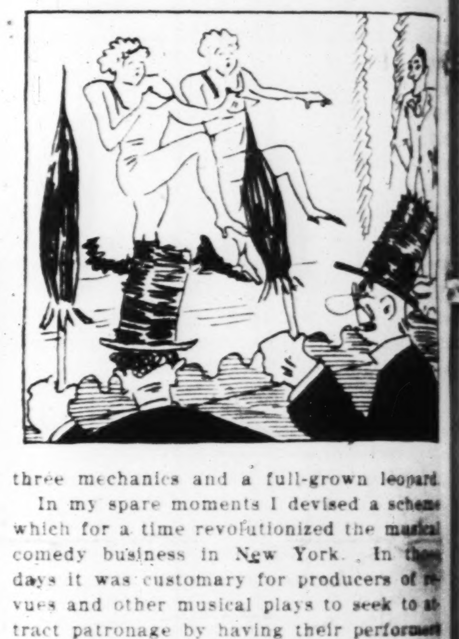
MY MEMOIRS are now drawing to a close. (Cries of "Touchdown! Touchdown!" and "We want Borah!") But it would be little less than criminal were I to complete the story of my life without explaining why I selected Great Neck, Long Island, as the place to end my days. My second wife, a tall, gangling Swiss girl named Emma Geezle, whose father had made his money in Alpine stock, said she had lived all her life in a little haunch at the corner of Broadway and Forty-second street, and she was sick of the bright lights.

"Take me," she said, "to some town where we won't be dazzled by the bright lights."

So I asked a prominent realtor to recommend a town where there would be no danger of being blinded by electricity.

"Great Neck," was his reply. "You will find that some of the people out there get lit up quite often, but the houses hardly ever. If the weather report reads 'Cloudy,' or 'Light southwest winds,' the current becomes so affected that many a wife attempting to dress for a party, has found herself frantically trying to complete her accoutrement by donning a wing collar and a dinner jacket."

SO EMMA and I bought ourselves a love nook in Great Neck, christened it "The House of a Dozen Candles," and are now devoting most of our time to keeping the house in order, no small task when your menage consists of five servants, six children, four rooms and bath, a police dog, three mechanics and a full-grown leopard.

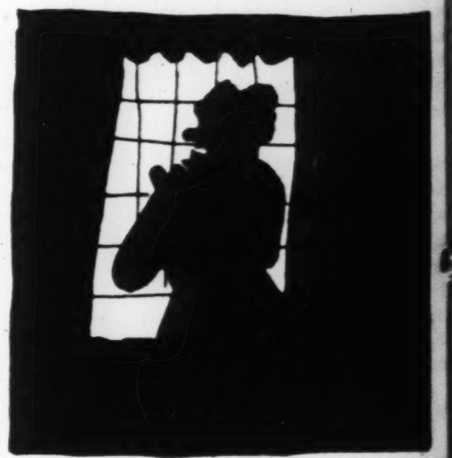


In my spare moments I devised a scheme which for a time revolutionized the musical comedy business in New York. In those days it was customary for producers of revues and other musical plays to seek to attract patronage by having their performers wear hardly any costumes.

The tights worn by chorus girls in old-time burlesque shows came to be regarded as too cumbersome and various committees on public morals were at their wits' ends for methods to compel the theater men to observe what they called the elements of decorum and attire their dancers and coryphees in something more tangible than a square inch of gauze.

It was Mayor Walker who called me in to make suggestions. After a day's thought I concocted the following plan: To make it compulsory for all members of the audience to disrobe utterly before entering the theater.

AT FIRST the Mayor could not see that this would make matters any better, but I soon convinced him. As soon as the ordinance was passed, attendance at shows fell off so lamentably that most of the productions were obliged to close. It was really surprising, even to me, to note the number of citizens who refused to undress before presenting their seat checks to the ushers. Most of them complained that the playhouses were too drafty.



At any rate, the Producing Managers' Association soon petitioned the Mayor to have the ordinance wiped off the books and a compromise was readily effected whereby the audiences were permitted to remain clothed again, provided the actors did likewise.

A banquet was given, with me as the guest of honor, and David Belasco, often referred to as the Master because he occupies the Master's bedroom at the Belasco home, presented me with a lock of his hair.

In the concluding chapter I will tell of my declining years in Great Neck and the accident that resulted in my death.

Dealt Fraudulently in Millions—Never Made a Cent

How Percy D. Ham Tried to Escape the Obscurity of Being Merely a Clerk and Turned Himself Into a "Big Financier."

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

TORONTO.

FOUND guilty on 15 counts of forgery, uttering and false pretenses, Percy D. Ham, one of the socially elect young men of Toronto, was sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary. So closes one of the most amazing frauds in the history of finance in Canada.

Ham, a quiet, unassuming young gentleman of artistic tastes, was a junior clerk in a Government office. With this modest background and with no financial capital he launched a scheme of operations of staggering proportions. In a period of about two years he negotiated sales and purchases of bonds amounting, according to the court records, to more than $20,000,000. He did business with many of the most reputable bond brokers in Toronto, who extended him every courtesy and accommodation and indeed entered into rivalry for his business.

Ham, according to his counsel, came out of the maze of purchases and sales without a five-cent piece for himself, although losses sustained by brokers and friends as far as they were traced, amounted to a total of $648,000.

HENTY books absorbed in youth were held accountable by Ham's counsel for this strange aberration. Ham had been a precocious child and at the age of 9 had read 24 Henty volumes. To satisfy a romantic and adventurous longing, counsel said, the young clerk, cabined, cribbed, confined by a humdrum life, had launched out in the hope of demonstrating that he was not the insignificant clerk which he in reality was. It was an obscure working out of a sort of denatured "will to power."

The credulity with which Ham's campaign was accepted by a hard headed financial world was one of the most amazing features of the case. Bond purchases running as they did into millions a month must inevitably attract attention in a market as small this one. Instead of being regarded with suspicion Ham commanded respect. Pop-eyed fictions sprang up, crediting him with being the agent of governments and of financial syndicates planning far-reaching coups.

Ham began his operations on a small and evidently experimental basis. His first purchase was of only a few thousand dollars of Government bonds (practically all his transactions were in Government bonds). Ham's capital did not exceed a few thousand cents but he negotiated the purchase this way: He said he was acting for an out-of-town friend. Ham gave his personal check to be held by the brokers until the bonds were delivered to his friend who would immediately advance payment. Though bonds are sold cash on delivery Ham's proposal was accepted. The credit of his check for the few days requested was accepted by brokers who knew him or his father or his friends. Ham covered the transaction within the time specified by reselling the bonds through another firm.

The operation was repeated over and over again on an ever increasing scale. After each transaction Ham came to be regarded as an even more desirable client.

But there was never any profit for Ham. Every transaction showed a loss of at least the two commissions for buying and selling and often a fractional loss in addition in the market price, the weight of the offerings being sufficient to depress the price on a narrow market.

There is no evidence that Ham at any time attempted to use his credit or the securities which were temporarily in his possession for speculation purposes. Playing the market for an advantage or a decline did not seem to fall within his scheme of things. Neither is there any evidence that he planned at any time to abscond, although in the later phases of his adventure he must have been in possession at times of enormous quantities of negotiable securities.

Difficulties developed for Ham as his operations pyramided and the total of his losses mounted. The credit of his personal checks was no longer sufficient to finance his hare-brained strategy.

These difficulties he met by forgery. Selecting two prominent citizens, one John Gleason, an Ottawa capitalist, and Rev. William Beattie, a London clergyman with wealthy relatives, he attached their names to a series of notes which he used as collateral.

He represented that these gentlemen had selected him as their confidential agent. Beattie, he said, was under special obligation to him for having saved his young son from drowning. He insisted that the nature of their plans was such that they must remain in the background and that they could not be communicated with directly. In one case, under pressure, he produced a letter with Gleason's name forged to substantiate the note.

Five notes, totaling $500,000, signed by Gleason and Beattie were produced and used by Ham. These he used in two ways. He deposited them with brokers as collateral. But the cruelest feature of his operations was when he used these notes to secure advances of cash and securities from private individuals. These individuals were friends of himself or family. In the case of one lady, a widow, he secured advances amounting to $200,000 and representing most of her capital. In some cases he secured advances with only his personal security and on promises of large returns in interest.

Exposure came when one broker communicated direct with Gleason the supposed backer of huge transactions. Like a bombshell it developed that Gleason knew nothing of Ham and had signed no note. Ham was summoned to the office of one of the largest bond houses in Toronto and given the third degree. He still insisted that he could make good his commitments and was given a few hours to do so. That afternoon he was discovered in the kitchen of his home with the gas turned on and suffering from asphyxiation which a short sojourn in hospital cleared up.

WHERE $649,000 that was lost went to was not satisfactorily divulged by the trial. A substantial sum went to brokers as commissions.

Treachery, cruelty and cowardice was charged against Ham by the Judge in imposing sentence. The greatest suffering falls upon the members of his family. His young wife gave birth to a child on the day he was sentenced. His aged father, organist for a generation in St. James Cathedral, is one of the most respected and beloved citizens of Toronto.

In war Ham was a hero. He enlisted as a private with the Princess Pats and spent a total of 30 months actually in the line of battle. He was in practically all that regiment's engagements. After a year in the ranks he secured an officer's commission on the field—at the battle of Cambrai where 550 Princess Pats went into action and only 78 came out under the new Lieutenant Ham, not a single other officer being left. He was awarded the French Croix de Guerre for a bombing feat at Amiens where he cut his way through a network of trenches to capture a nest of machine guns, killing or capturing the defending Germans. While he came unscathed through the clash of arms, he now succumbs ignominiously in the battle of finance. And his war record has not saved him from a long term in the penitentiary.

Alex Barbee's TERRAPIN INCUBATOR

Diamond shaped contours of its back give the creature its name.

Part of the terrapin farm.

TURTLES are turtles and terrapin are terrapin, but the difference in price between a bowl of turtle soup and a bowl of the broth made from the terrapin, generally acknowledged by connoisseurs and epicures as being the most palatable of dishes, is a matter of two or three dollars.

Two dollars for a plate of soup? Yes. That in a word, according to Alex Barbee, owner of the only diamond-back terrapin farm in the world and perfector of a system whereby the costly creatures are hatched artificially, sums up the difference between the diamond-back variety and the turtle who comes up out of his hole in the ground after a heavy rain.

And Mr. Barbee should know, for he hatches between 8000 and 10,000 terrapin each year on his farm on the Isle of Hope, a tidewater village nine miles from Savannah, Georgia, and is still unable to meet the great demand which comes to him from cities throughout the country, where hotels, restaurants, exclusive clubs and wealthy families depend upon him year after year for their supply of the rare terrapin.

Not that the difference is solely a question of price! Heaven forbid! But terrapin meat is to be ranked, according to Mr. Barbee, with such choice morsels as peacock's tongues and the dainty viands which bedecked the tables of Emperors in an age when royalty reigned supreme. In comparison to the turtle—well, there is no comparison with such a common, everyday critter!

HOWEVER aristocratic the diamond-back terrapin may seem when served in a magnificent bowl on the table of a hotel with a world-wide reputation, whatever ideas of rank she may have gleaned during the few years of her existence, must come, however, from the notions implanted in her head by the hotel chef, for Mr. Barbee's system of raising terrapins is essentially democratic. Except for grading his charges by the size, they are all one and the same to him, all of them with the exception of Toby.

Toby is such an unusual pet that he might well demand recognition, not so much because of social distinction, though he has that, too, as because of his superior intelligence. There are few pets of such small dimensions, Toby being a male and but four inches long, who can do so many things. Toby has a way with strangers. He winks his eye at them, first the right and then the left, and looks at them with the sober reflection which is his birthright. Toby was born in the hand of William Jennings Bryan, but whether that accounts for his precociousness, Mr. Barbee is unable to say.

WINKING is indeed an accomplishment, but in an age where philandering of this sort is considered antiquated, Toby must have other stunts to be classed among the modern terrapin. Though his first greeting is, as likely as not, apt to be a sly gesture of this sort, the stranger can hardly continue reticent when Toby offers his front paws, first his right and then his left, in a terrapin's cordial handshake. Many are the persons whose hands he has shaken in just this manner during the 15 years of his existence. Curious little boys as well as an ex-champion prizefighter have vied for the privilege.

Toby is a born companion. During the whole of his lifetime he has hardly ever been out of sight, Mr. Barbee explains. Toby's trip up north each year is a scheduled event in Mr. Barbee's business plans. He would no sooner think of going to Washington, Philadelphia and New York without him than he would forget to feed him a shrimp once a week. Toby, in fact, is rather frugal, but that is a characteristic of his set. Mr. Barbee need call him but once or twice and there he is, waiting to be fondled.

The problem of carrying him has itself an interesting solution. In an emergency, Toby might be shoved into Mr. Barbee's pocket without complaint, but in the ordinary course of things the terrapin king has provided a pouch in which he may rest easily, without danger of rubbing the skin from off his neck. Terrapin, though a hardy lot, as Mr. Barbee explains in describing the successful incubation of a proportion which runs as high as 90 per cent, have a skin considerably more tender than that of the ordinary turtle.

Alex R. Barbee.

With the exception of Toby all Mr. Barbee's terrapins are for sale. Toby, however, is not. Mr. Barbee has several times received offers ranging as high as $1000 for him, but if these offers were tripled, Mr. Barbee states, he would not part with him. So attached are they to each other that the terrapin king believes he could never train another pet to take his place. The vast amount of patience required to train a pet of his kind, Mr. Barbee explains, makes him priceless. No other terrapin upon his farm can play a toy piano, but Toby can. And to teach him this feat alone was no small accomplishment.

THE miracles which Alex Barbee has wrought, not alone with Toby, but in the breeding artificially of the once vanishing terrapin tribe, have seemed so incredible that Government experts as well as others in the past doubted his accomplishments. Mr. Barbee has tackled all the doubting Thomases of the past and still successfully stands ready to hatch his terrapins in the hands of anyone in whose mind the slightest suspicion exists. Hundreds of visitors are conducted over his farms each week.

When Mr. Barbee first began to hatch the terrapin artificially, he explained recently, so great was the doubt in the mind of Government authorities that they sent an investigator down to his farm to verify the report that artificial heat might restore the fast-diminishing species. On cursory explanation the investigator reported the thing couldn't be done. Vexed at his stupidity, Mr. Barbee, who had previously not known of the Government investigation, hied himself to Washington to prove that artificial breeding was feasible.

HE WELCOMED experts of the Department of Agriculture to his hotel, he relates, and there, before their very eyes, hatched out a live terrapin in the palms of their hands! A season or so later he repeated the feat in the presence of Williams Jennings Bryan when Bryan was Wilson's Secretary of State. The terrapin hatched out by Bryan proved to be the most intelligent of the lot, as those personally acquainted with the accomplishments of Toby acknowledge.

The actual process of hatching takes place in the sight of the visitors who daily crowd the Barbee farm. When the female has laid her eggs upon the sand mounds which Mr. Barbee and his assistants build for her, the eggs are taken from her before she has opportunity to eat them, as many birds and animals in captivity are likely to do. There they are kept, with just the right amount of heat generated through a source known to none but Mr. Barbee.

When the incubator eggs are hatched and the little fellows have grown to a size as big as a half-dollar, Mr. Barbee has them taken back to the marshes to be fattened. Here they live until they are big enough to be brought back to the pens. Three years elapse meantime. By that time they are almost marketing size. Mr. Barbee then aids nature in the fattening process, feeding them, as many others do, chicken, sheep, hogs or cattle, to a point where they are most delicious for the most palatable of soups.

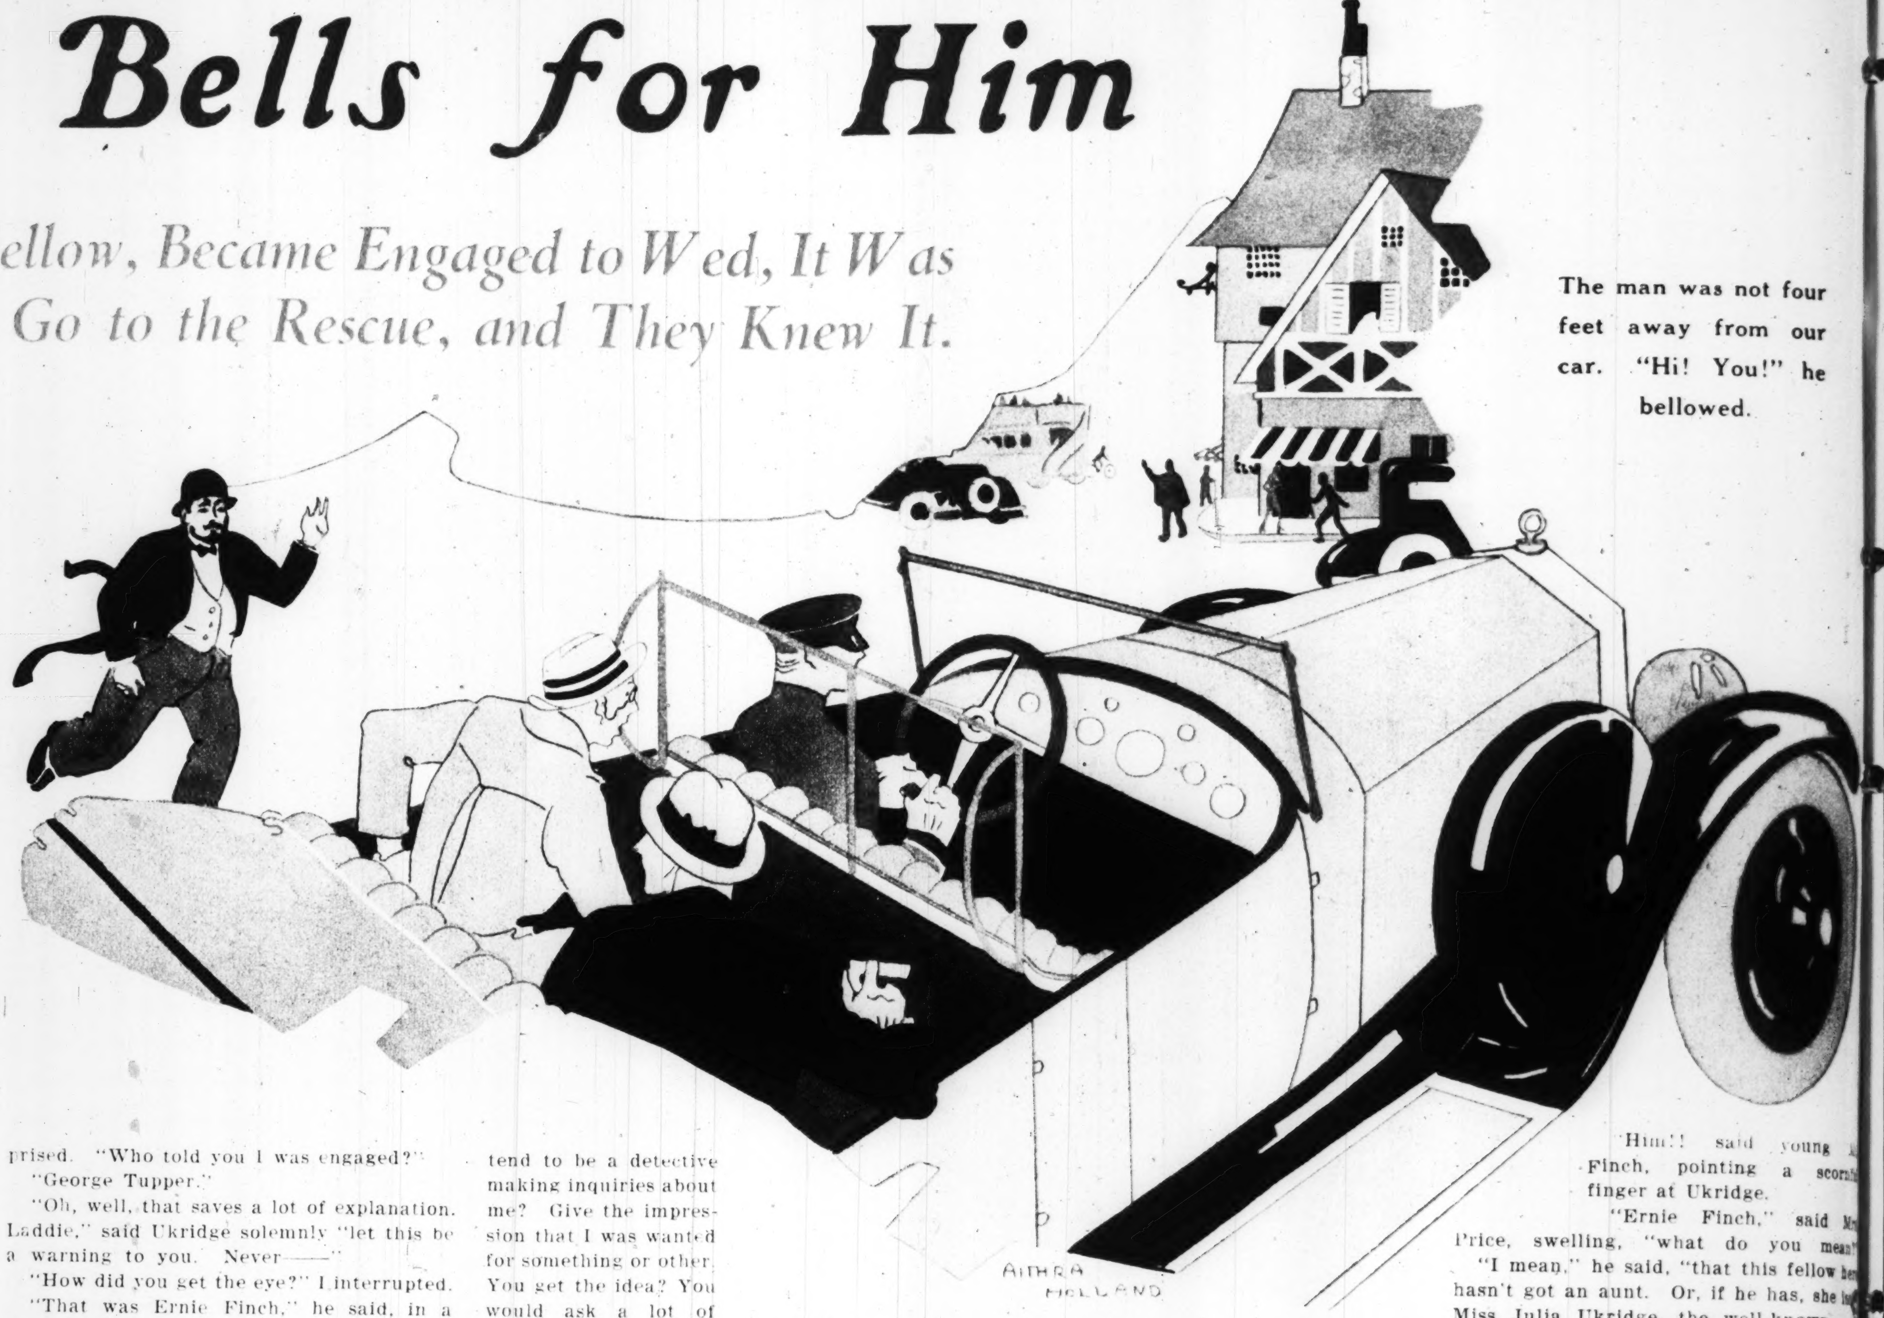
No Wedding Bells for Him

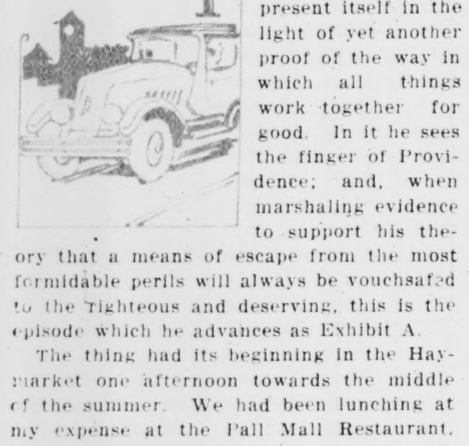
When Ukridge, That Fantastic Fellow, Became Engaged to Wed, It Was Time for His Loyal Friends to Go to the Rescue, and They Knew It.

By

P. G. WODEHOUSE



The man was not four feet away from our car. "Hi! You!" he bellowed.



TO UKRIDGE the affair has come to present itself in the light of yet another proof of the way in which all things work together for good. In it he sees the finger of Providence; and, when marshaling evidence to support his theory that a means of escape from the most formidable perils will always be vouchsafed to the righteous and deserving, this is the episode which he advances as Exhibit A.

The thing had its beginning in the Haymarket one afternoon towards the middle of the summer. We had been lunching at my expense at the Pall Mall Restaurant, and as we came out, a large and shiny car drew up. The chauffeur, alighting, opened the bonnet and began to fiddle about in its interior.

Ukridge steered me up to assist him in giving the toiler moral support. About two minutes after, the latter looked up.

"'Ullo!" he observed.

"Why, hallo, Frederick," said Ukridge. "Didn't recognize you. Is this the new car?"

"Ah," nodded the chauffeur.

"Pal of mine," explained Ukridge to me. "Met him in a pub." London was congested with pals whom Ukridge had met in pubs. "What's the trouble?"

"Missing," said Frederick. "Soon 'ave her right."

After a short interval, he closed the bonnet and wiped his hands.

"Got to go to Addington. Pick up the Guv'nor, playin' golf there." He seemed to hesitate for a moment, then the influence of the sunshine asserted itself. "Like a ride as far as East Croydon? Get a train back from there."

We climbed in, Frederick trod on the self-starter, and off we bowled, two gentlemen of fashion taking their afternoon airing.

WE had stopped at the foot of the street to allow the north-bound traffic to pass, when our after-luncheon torpidity was shattered by a violent shout.

That the shouter was addressing us there was no room for doubt. He was standing not four feet away—a stout, bearded man of middle-age, unsuitably clad, considering the weather and the sartorial prejudices of Society, in a frock coat and a bowler hat. "Hi! You!" he bellowed.

Frederick, the chauffeur, had ceased to interest himself in this undignified exhibition, but I was surprised to observe that Ukridge was betraying all the discomposure of some wild thing taken in a trap. He was staring straight ahead of him in a piteous effort to ignore what manifestly would not be ignored.

And then matters proceeded with rapidity. The traffic had begun to move on now, and the man appeared to realize that if 'twere done, 'twere well, 'twere done quickly. He executed a leap and landed on our running board; and Ukridge, coming suddenly to life, put out a hand and pushed. The intruder dropped off, and the last I saw of him he was in imminent danger of being run over by a number three omnibus.

I was willing to hear more, but he relapsed into a moody silence. We were moving into Clapham Common when the second of the incidents occurred which were to make this drive linger in the memory. Just as we came in sight of the Common, a girl loomed up before our front wheels. She had been crossing the road, and now, after the manner of her species, she lost her head. She was a large, silly-looking girl, and she darted to and fro like a lunatic hen; and as Ukridge and I rose from our seats, clutching each other in agony, she tripped over her feet and fell. But Frederick, master of his craft, had the situation well in hand. He made an inspired swerve, and when we stopped a moment later, the girl was picking herself up, dusty, but still in one piece.

"I do hope," babbled Ukridge, "you aren't hurt? Do tell me you aren't hurt."

"No, reely, thanks."

"But shaken, what?"

"I did come down a fair old bang," chuckled this repellent female.

"I thought so. You must let me drive you home."

"'Ere!" said Frederick, the chauffeur.

"Eh?"

"Got to get on to Addington."

"Yes, yes, yes," said Ukridge, with testy impatience, quite the seigneur resenting interference from an underling. "But there's plenty of time to drive this lady home. Where can I take you?"

"It's only just round the corner. Balbriggan the name of the house is."

"Balbriggan, Frederick," said Ukridge, in a tone that brooked no argument.

I SUPPOSE the spectacle of the daughter of the house rolling up in a Daimler is unusual in Peabody Road, Clapham Common. We had hardly drawn up when Balbriggan began to exude its occupants in platoons. Father, mother, three small sisters and a brace of brothers were on the steps in the first ten seconds.

Ukridge was at his most spacious, establishing himself as a friend of the family.

"Would you and your friend care to come in for a cup of tea?" said Mrs. Price.

I could see Ukridge hesitate.

"Got to get on to Addington," said Frederick.

"Of course, yes. I was forgetting. I have to be at Addington almost immediately."

"Any time you're in the neighborhood, Mr. Ukridge," said Mr. Price.

"Thanks, thanks."

"Tell me, Mr. Ukridge," said Mrs. Price. "I've been wondering ever since you told me your name. It's such an unusual one. Are you any relation to the Miss Ukridge who writes books?"

"My aunt," beamed Ukridge.

Frederick here broke off what promised to be a lengthy literary discussion by treading on the self-starter, and we drove off in a flurry of invitations.

"Always sow the good seed, laddie. Never lose the chance of establishing yourself. It is the secret of a successful life. Just a few genial words, and here I am with a place I can always pop into for a bite when funds are low."

It was about a week later that I happened to go to the British Museum. Wandering through the place, I came upon Ukridge with a small boy attached to each hand.

"Run along and improve your minds, you kids," he said to the children.

"All right, Uncle Stanley," chorused the children.

"Those are the Price kids. From Clapham."

"I remember them."

"I'm taking them out for the day. Must repay hospitality, my boy."

"Then you have really been inflicting yourself on those people?"

"Couple of times, perhaps. Maybe three."

"To meals?"

"There was a bit of browsing going on," admitted Ukridge.

"Greedy brute," I said, censoriously.

"Must keep body and soul together, old man. Of course, there are one or two things that are a bit embarrassing. For instance, they seem to have got the idea that that car we turned up in that day belongs to me, and the kids are always pestering me for a ride. Fortunately, I've managed to square Frederick, and he thinks he can arrange for a spin or two. Mrs. Price keeps asking me to bring my aunt around for a cup of tea and a chat, and I haven't the heart to tell her that my aunt disowned me the day after that business of the dance."

I HAD been out of town for a few weeks, taking my annual vacation. When I got back to Ebury Street, Bowles, my landlord, informed me that George Tupper had called several times while I was away.

I found George Tupper at the Foreign Office, surrounded by important-looking papers.

"Look here," he said urgently, "something's got to be done. Have you seen Ukridge yet?"

"Not yet. I thought I would look him up this evening."

"You'd better. Do you know what has happened? He's got himself engaged to be married to a girl at Clapham!"

"You're joking!"

"I'm not joking," said George peevishly. "I met him in Battersea Park with her, and he introduced me. She reminded me," said George Tupper, shivering slightly, for that fearful evening had seared his soul deeply, "of that ghastly female in pink he brought with him the night I gave you two dinner at the Regent Grill."

"Well, what do you want me to do?" I asked, not, I think, unreasonably.

"You've got to think of some way of getting him out of it."

"Well, I'll go and see him," I promised.

I found Ukridge with an unmistakable black eye.

"You aren't going to tell me your fiancee has biffed you in the eye already?"

"Have you heard?" said Ukridge surprised. "Who told you I was engaged?"

"George Tupper."

"Oh, well, that saves a lot of explanation. Laddie," said Ukridge solemnly "let this be a warning to you. Never——"

"How did you get the eye?" I interrupted.

"That was Ernie Finch," he said, in a cold voice.

"Who is Ernie Finch? I've never heard of him."

"He's a sort of friend of the family and was going rather strong as regards Mabel till I came along. When we got engaged he was away, and no one apparently thought it worth while to tell him about it, and he came along one night and found me kissing her good-bye in the front garden. The sight of him gave Mabel a start, and she screamed; the fact that she screamed gave this man Finch a totally wrong angle on the situation; and this caused him to rush up, yank off my glasses with one hand, and hit me with the other right in the eye. And before I could get at him, the family were roused and came out and separated us and explained that I was engaged to Mabel. Of course, when he heard that, the man apologized. And I wish you could have seen the beastly smirk he gave. Then old Price forbade him the house. A fat lot of good that was. I've had to stay indoors ever since, waiting for the color scheme to dim a bit."

"Of course," I urged, "one can't help being sorry for the chap, in a way."

"I can," said Ukridge, promptly.

"You sneaked his girl," I pointed out.

"I don't want his beastly girl."

"Then you really do want to get out of this thing?"

"Of course I want to get out of it."

"But, if you feel like that, how did you ever let it happen?"

"I SIMPLY couldn't tell you, old horse," said Ukridge. "It's all a horrid blur. It came absolutely out of a blue sky. All I know is that we found ourselves alone in the drawing-room after Sunday supper, and all of a sudden the room became full of Prices of every description babbling blessings. And there I was!"

"But you must have given them something to go on."

"I was holding her hand. I admit that."

"Ah!"

"Well, by gosh, I don't see why there should have been such a fuss about that."

"Well, you must own that you were asking for it. You rolled up in a new Daimler and put on enough dog for a dozen millionaires. Well, naturally, these people thought you were sent from heaven. The wealthy son-in-law. All you've got to do, if you want to get out of it, is to confess to them that you haven't a bob."

"But, laddie, that's the difficulty. It's a most unfortunate thing; but, as it happens, I am on the eve of making an immense fortune, and I'm afraid I hinted as much to them from time to time."

"What do you mean?"

"Since I saw you last, I've put all my money in a bookmaker's business."

"How do you mean—all your money? Where did you get any money?"

"You haven't forgotten the fifty quid I made selling tickets for my aunt's dance? And I collected a bit more out of some judicious bets. The firm is in a small way at present, but with the world full of mugs shoving and jostling one another to back losers the thing is a potential gold mine, and I'm a sleeping partner. It's no good my trying to make these people believe I'm hard up."

He relapsed into a thoughtful silence and I left him. I was standing on the steps when I heard him clattering down the stairs.

"Corky, old man!"

"Hallo?"

"I think I've got it," said Ukridge, joining me on the steps. "How would it be if some one were to go to Clapham and pretend to be a detective making inquiries about me? Give the impression that I was wanted for something or other. You get the idea? You would ask a lot of questions and take notes in a book——"

At this moment he disappeared. Only the searching odor of his powerful tobacco lingered to remind me that he had once been at my side and only the slam of the front door told me where he had gone. I looked about, puzzled, and as I did so, I heard galloping footsteps and perceived a stout, bearded gentleman of middle age, clad in a frock coat and a bowler hat. I recognized him at once. It was the creditor, the man who had tried to board our car in the Haymarket.

"Was that Mr. Smallweed you were talking to?" he demanded.

"No," I replied. "No. Not Mr. Smallweed."

"YOU'RE lying to me, young man!" cried the creditor. And at the words the street seemed to wake from slumber. Maids popped out of windows, areas disgorged landladies, the very stones seemed to belch forth excited spectators. I found myself the attraction—and, for some reason which was beyond me, cast for the role of the villain. Fortunately, a young man in a blue flannel suit, one of the earliest arrivals on the scene, constituted himself a peacemaker.

"Come along, o' man," he said, his arm weaving itself into that of the fermenting creditor. "You don't want to make yourself conspicuous, do you?"

"In there!" roared the creditor, pointing at the door.

"Now, now!" said the young man, whom I was beginning to like more every minute.

"I'll kick the door in!"

"Now, now! You don't want to go doing anything silly or foolish," pleaded the peacemaker. "There'll be a policeman along before you know where you are, and you'll look foolish if he finds you kicking up a silly row."

The creditor's violence began to ebb. He allowed himself to be led off.

A hoarse voice spoke through the letter-box.

"Has he gone, laddie?"

"Yes."

The door opened and an embittered Ukridge emerged.

The result of this episode was that Ukridge vanished from his lodgings and came to dwell in mine.

"I THINK, laddie," I heard a satisfied voice remark, as a heavy weight descended on my toes early one Sunday morning, "I think laddie, that at last I have hit the bull's-eye. Hats off to Bowles, without whom I would never have got the idea. It was only when he told me the plot of that story he is reading that I began to see daylight. Listen, old man, and tell me if you don't think I am on to a good thing. About a couple of days before Lord Claude Tremaine was to marry Angela Bracebridge, the most beautiful girl in London——"

"What are you talking about? You haven't waked me at 3 in the morning to tell me the plot of a rotten novelette?"

"You haven't been listening, old man," said Ukridge, with gentle reproach. "I was saying that it was this plot that gave me my big idea. To cut it fairly short, as you seem in a strange mood, this Lord Claude bloke, having had a pain in his left side, went to see a doctor a couple of days before the wedding, and the doc gave him the start of his young life by telling him that he had only six months to live. There's a lot more of it, of course, and it turns out that the doctor was wrong; but what I'm driving at is that this development absolutely put the bee on the wedding. Everybody sympathized with Claude and said it was out of the question that he could dream of getting married. So it occurred to me, laddie, that here was the scheme of a life-time. I'm going to supper at Balbriggan tomorrow, and what I want you to do is simply to——"

"You can stop right there," I said, with emotion.

"All I want you to do is to come to Balbriggan about 9. Ask for me, and tell me in front of the gang that my aunt is dangerously ill."

"What's the sense in that?"

"You aren't showing that intelligence of which I have often spoken so highly, Corky. Don't you see? The news is a terrible shock to me. It bowls me over. I clutch at my heart"——

"They'll see through it in a second."

"I ask for water"——

"Ah, that's a convincing touch. That'll make them realize you aren't yourself."

"And after a while we leave. In fact, we leave as quickly as we jolly well can. You see what happens? I have established the fact that my heart is weak, and in a few days I write and say I've been looked over and the wedding must, unfortunately, be off, because"——

AT 9 o'clock the following evening, I stood on the steps of Balbriggan waiting for my ring at the bell to be answered.

The door opened. A maid appeared.

"Is Mr. Ukridge here?"

"Yes, sir."

I followed her into the drawing room.

"Gentleman to see Mr. Ukridge, please," said the maid, and left me to do my stuff.

I gazed upon the roomful of Prices, and words failed me.

Ukridge came to the rescue. Incredibly at his ease in this frightful room, he advanced to welcome me, resplendent in a morning coat, patent-leather shoes and tie, all of which I recognized as my property.

We had rehearsed this scene, and the dialogue came back to me.

"I'm afraid I have serious news, old man," I said, in a hushed voice.

"What is it?" demanded Ukridge, clutching me by the arm in a grip like the bite of a horse.

"Ouch!" I cried. "Your aunt!"

"My aunt?"

"They telephoned just now," I proceeded, warming to my work "to say that she had had a relapse."

"Water!" said Ukridge, staggering back and clawing at his waistcoat—or, rather, at my waistcoat, which I had foolishly omitted to lock up. "Water!"

It was well done. Even I, much as I wished that he would stop wrenching one of my best ties all out of shape, was obliged to admit that. The Price family seemed shaken to its foundations.

"My aunt! Ill!" moaned Ukridge.

"I shouldn't worry, o' man," said a voice at the door.

Turning, I perceived a young man in a blue suit. A young man whom I had seen before. It was the fellow who had led away the infuriated bloke to whom Ukridge owed a bit of money.

Mr. Price towered as majestically as his five feet six would permit him.

"Mr. Finch," he said, "may I inquire what you are doing in my house?"

"All right, all right"——

"I thought I told you"——

"All right," repeated Ernie Finch, who appeared to be a young man of character. "I've only come to expose an impostor."

"Impostor!"

"Him!" said young Finch, pointing a scorn finger at Ukridge.

"Ernie Finch," said Mr. Price, swelling, "what do you mean?"

"I mean," he said, "that this fellow here hasn't got an aunt. Or, if he has, she is Miss Julia Ukridge, the well-known and wealthy novelist. I had my suspicions about this gentleman right from the first. I've been making inquiries about him. The first thing I did was to write his aunt—the lady he says is his aunt—making out I wanted her nephew's address, me being an old school chum of his. Here's what she writes back: 'Miss Ukridge acknowledges receipt of Mr. Finch's letter, and wishes to state that she has no nephew.' That's plain enough, isn't it?" He raised a hand to check comment. "And here's another thing," he proceeded. "That car he's been swanking about in. It doesn't belong to him at all. It belongs to a man named Fillmore. I noted the number and made investigations. The fellow's name isn't Ukridge at all. It's Smallweed. He's a penniless impostor. If you let Mabel marry him, you'll be making the biggest bloomer of your lives!"

There was silence. Price looked upon Finch in dumb consternation.

"I don't believe you," said the master of the house at length, but he spoke without conviction.

"Then perhaps," retorted Ernie Finch, "you'll believe this gentleman. Come in, Mr. Grindlay."

Bearded, frock-coated and sinister beyond words, the creditor stalked into the room.

"You tell 'em," said Ernie Finch.

The creditor appeared more than willing.

"Sorry to intrude on a family on Sunday evening," he said, "but this young man told me I should find Mr. Smallweed here, so I came along. I've been hunting for him for two years and more about a matter of one pound two and threepence for goods supplied."

"Is this true?" said Mr. Price, turning to Ukridge.

"Well"—— said Ukridge.

THE head of the family pursued his examination no further. He had weighed the evidence and reached a decision. He pointed to the door.

"Leave my house!" he thundered.

"Right-o," said Ukridge, mildly.

Mr. Price turned to his daughter.

"Mabel," he said, "this engagement is broken. Broken, do you understand?"

"All right, pa," said Miss Price, speaking for the first and last time.

But here the creditor struck a business note.

"And what," he inquired, "about my one pound two and threepence?"

It seemed that matters were about to become difficult. But Ukridge found the solution.

"Have you got one pound two and threepence on you, old man?" he said to me.

And, with my usual bad luck, I had.

We walked down Peabody road. Already Ukridge's discomfiture had passed.

"It just shows, laddie," he said exuberantly, "that one should never despair. That scheme of mine might or might not have worked—one cannot tell. But, instead of having to go to all the bother of subterfuge here we have a clean-cut solution, without any trouble at all. By Gad, Corky, my boy, this is the happiest moment of my life."

"It might be the happiest of mine," I said churlishly, "if I thought I should ever see that one pound two and threepence again."

"Now, laddie, laddie," protested Ukridge, "these are not the words of a friend. Don't mar a moment of unalloyed gladness. Don't worry; you'll get your money back. A thousandfold!"

"When?"

"One of these days," said Ukridge buoyantly. "One of these days."

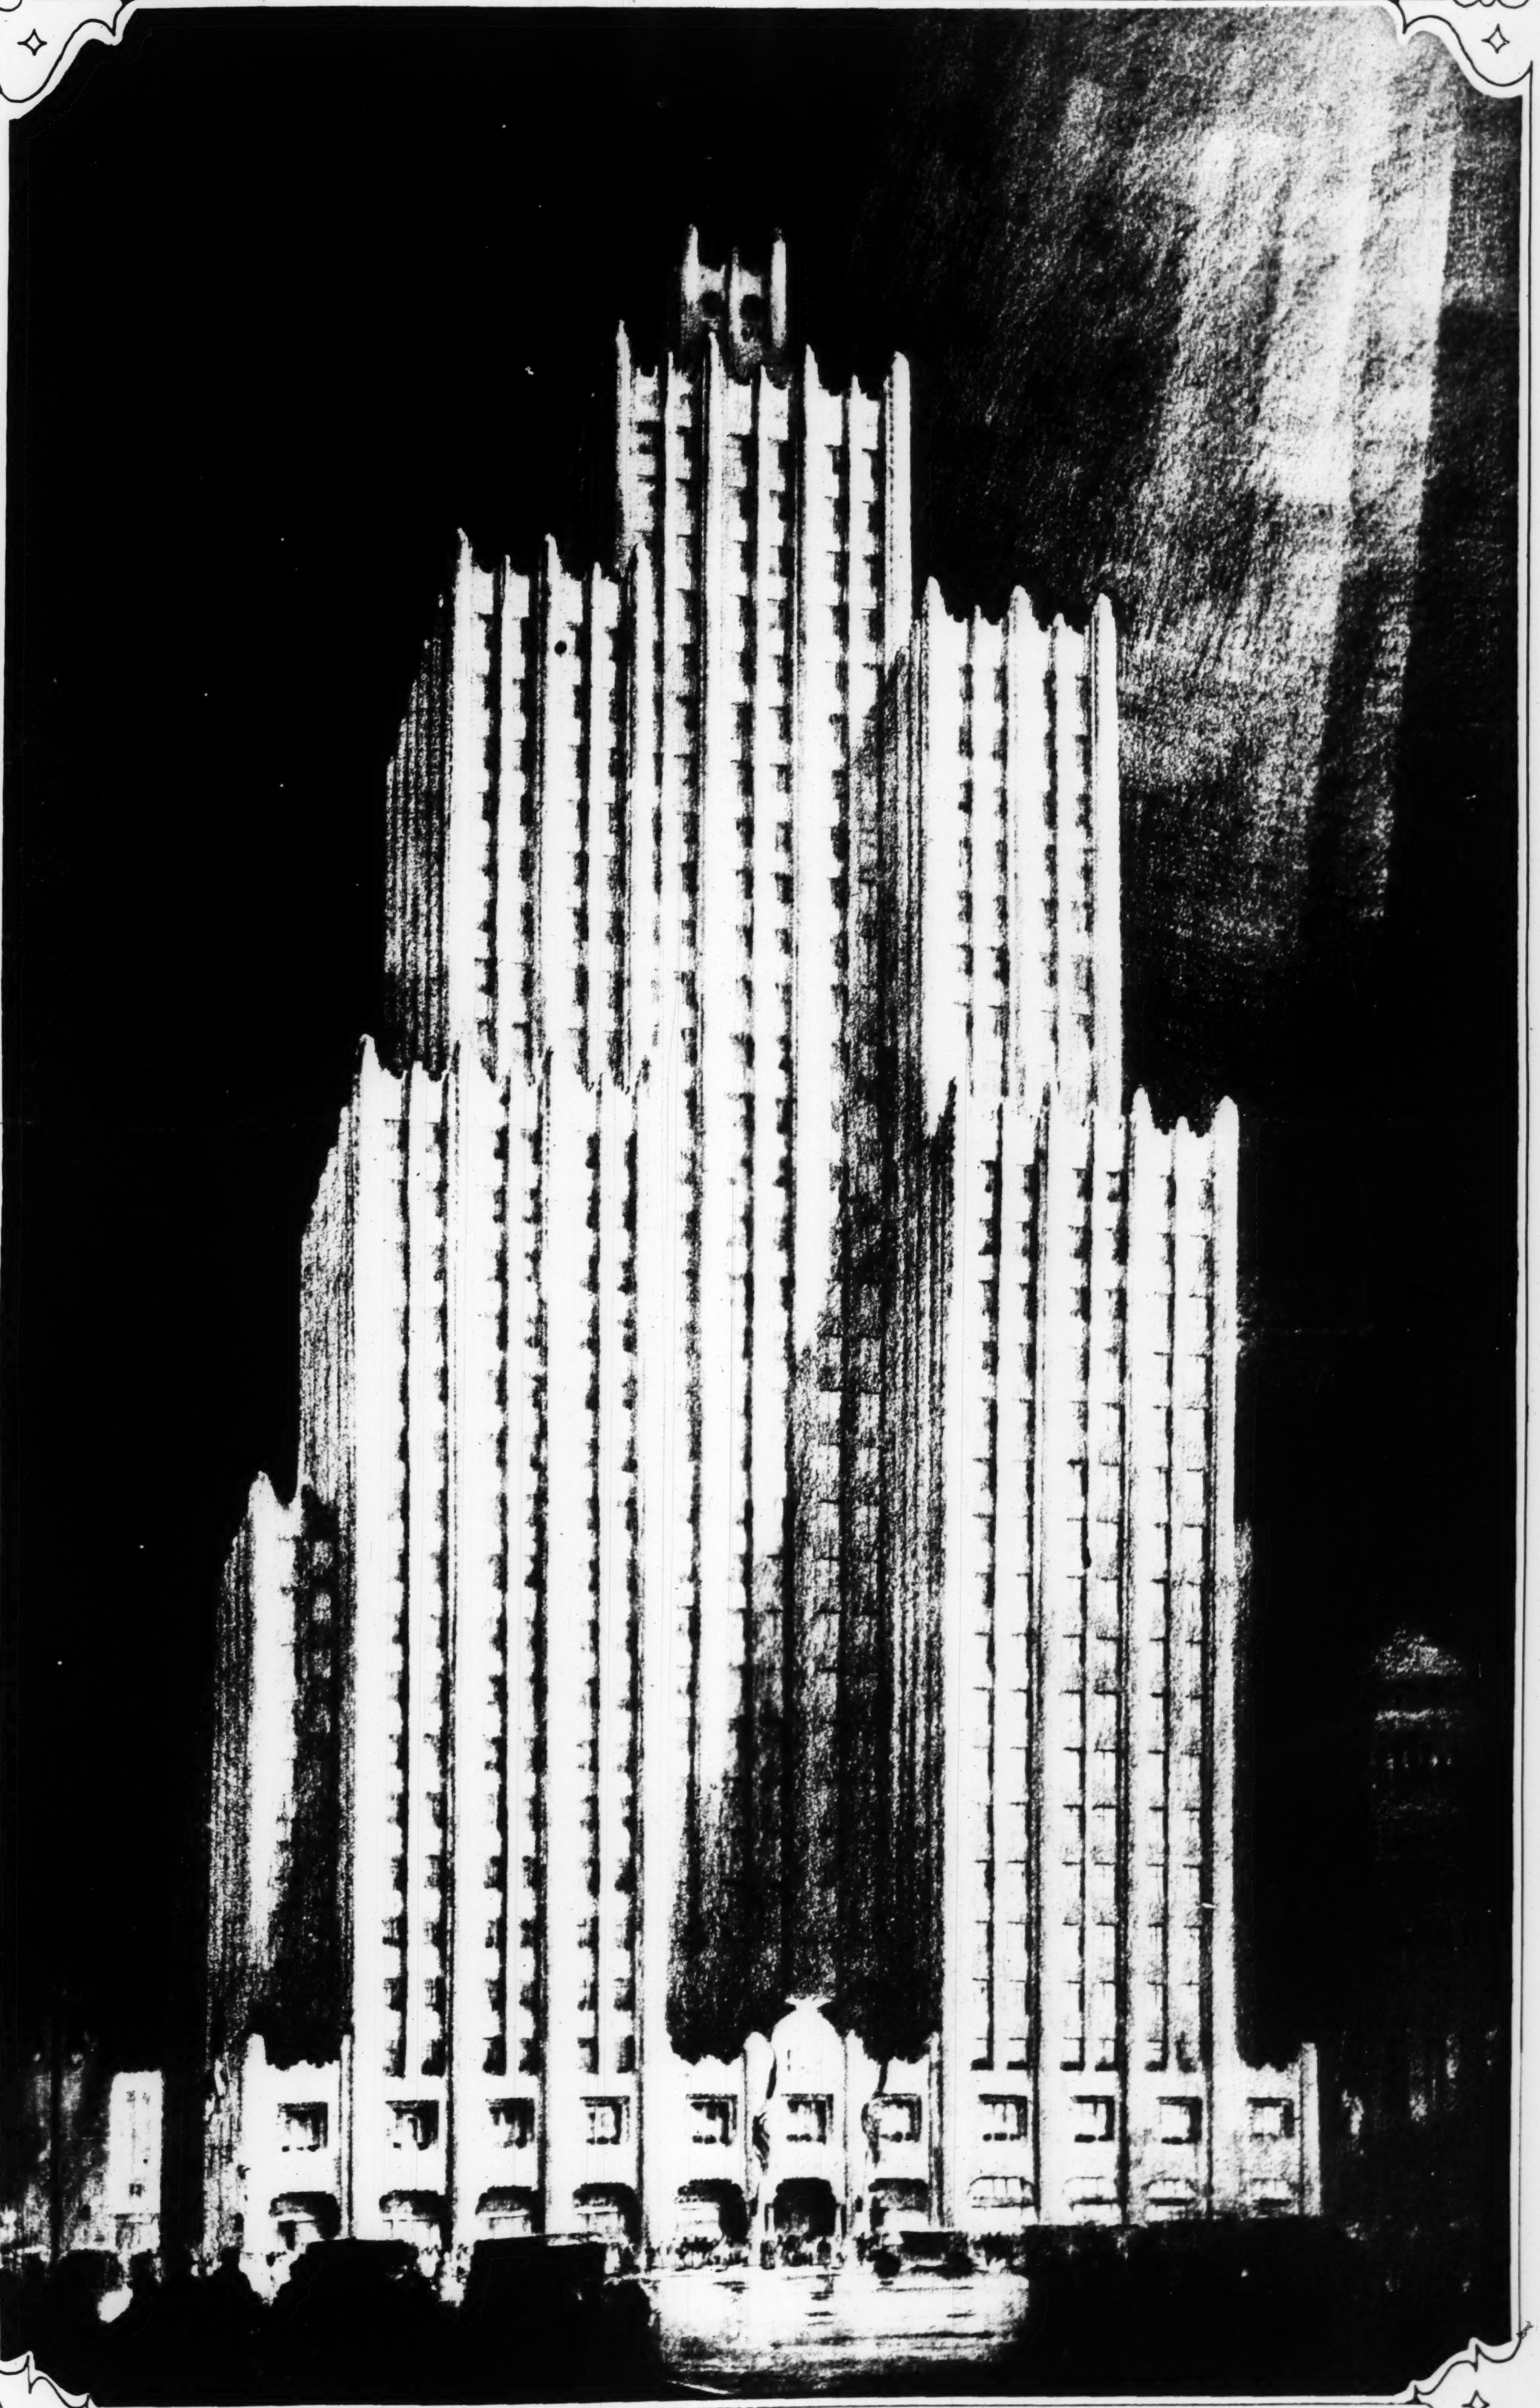
THE NEW MISSOURI PACIFIC BUILDING IN ST. LOUIS



This drawing, made by Hugh Ferriss, shows the structure which will be the home of the general offices of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, facing Thirteenth street, between Pine and Olive. Foundation work is already under way. The height of the building will be 27 stories, overlooking the Municipal Plaza. The exterior design of this notable addition to St. Louis architecture is the work of Mauran, Russell & Crowell, architects, of St. Louis. Interior plans were prepared by the railroad's own architects. The illustration by Mr. Ferriss, a son of former Judge Franklin Ferriss of St. Louis, was made from the detail architectural plans of Mauran, Russell & Crowell.

All in tune

when sounding REM's praises

The whole Shanaman family are in harmony when speaking of REM for Coughs. Father carries REM in his suitcase on business trips. Mother found it most effective for a bad cough she had. Elwood, the saxophone player of the Shanaman family, would not think of using anything else for a cough. Here's what he said at his home, 42 Adams St., Hartford, Conn.:

"Nearly all of us used REM last Winter and we found it very effective for relieving coughs. In fact, my father who travels a great deal never leaves without a bottle of REM in his suitcase. And my mother and I have both used it and it relieved bad coughs that we had.

"Father had read about REM in the papers so we sent for a bottle to O'Dell's at Albany Ave. & Milford. Now that we have used REM we wouldn't use anything else for a cough. I myself like track sports and usually, at least twice a week, I'll be out running in nothing but trunks and a jersey. Naturally, once in a while, I get a cough."

Few of us here escape the usual bad-weather coughs. But though we can't avoid them, we can relieve them. A bottle of REM has quickly quieted many a cough.

A special ingredient in REM---effective, harmless---is not found in ordinary cough syrups. Clinging to your throat as it is swallowed, REM spreads a soothing, healing film over the inflamed and irritated membranes.

No Opiates in REM. And it is pleasant to take.

Ask your druggist for REM--the dark blue package with the large orange circle. And you can have your money back if you want it --- but you won't!

It's a curious thing—

Human beings are very inconsistent sometimes.

In looking out for our own welfare, many of us are still superstitious about walking under a step-ladder. Others still stop to pick up a pin for good luck.

Yet, strangely enough, we neglect a certain very important duty that in the end may have a much more serious bearing upon self-preservation and length of life.

And that is the care of the teeth. Most folks, for instance, are careless, actually lazy, about tooth-brushing. In the morning we're in a hurry. At night we're tired.

So this most important job is often neglected.

Realizing the truth of this, the makers of Listerine set out deliberately to formulate a dentifrice that would furnish the easiest, quickest way to clean teeth.

In short, a tooth paste efficient even in the hands of lazy people—for in tooth brushing, at least, the word lazy applies to so many of us.

Listerine Tooth Paste is really very easy to use. It works fast. With just a minimum of brushing your teeth feel clean—and actually are clean.

You have the job done almost before you know it.

This is on account of the way Listerine Tooth Paste is made. It contains a specially prepared cleansing ingredient—entirely harmless to enamel✱—plus the antiseptic essential oils that have made Listerine famous.

And how fine your mouth feels after this kind of a brushing! Then, besides, you know your teeth are really clean—and therefore safe from decay. —Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.

✱This specially prepared cleansing medium (according to tests based upon the scale of hardness scientists employ in studying mineral substances) is much softer than tooth enamel. Therefore, it cannot scratch or injure the enamel.

At the same time it is harder than the tartar which accumulates and starts tooth decay.
